Russia Emerges As Champion Of Reunified Reich

Molotov Opposes Reduction Of Reich to Farming State

By JOSEPH DYNAN

Paris, July 11 (AP)—Russia emerged today as the champion of a reunified and self-sufficient Germany on the basis of a policy-charting speech yesterday by Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov.

Addressing his colleagues on the foreign ministers council, Mr. Molotov flatly opposed the dismemberment of federalization of Germany or reduction of the Reich to an agricultural state.

Some quarters here were inclined to write off the address as a Russian bid for popularity within Germany, and as a move to strengthen the forces of German communists. It was generally conceded that Mr. Molotov, in the eyes of the average German, now stood for a Germany governed by Germans.

French official quarters expressed dismay that the Russian policy of unification was in direct conflict with the French proposal to separate the Ruhr, the Saar and the Rhineland from the remainder of the Reich.

Votes to Uphold Stand

The French cabinet unanimously voted today to uphold his stand on Germany to date, which included a demand for internationalizing the Ruhr and contributed to holding up a unified four-power German policy.

The information ministry said Communist ministers voted for the Bidault moton.

It was not immediately clear whether the Russian statement of policy would delay the adjournment of the council, tentatively

Gen. Stratemeyer Criticizes U.S. Air Defence

New York, July 11 (AP)—Lt.-Gen. George E. Stratemeyer, chief of the nUited States army's air defence command, said that "figuratively speaking" the army air forces "right now couldn't punch its way out of a wet paper bag."

"If the army air forces were called upon to do so at short notice," he told the Aviation Writers' Association yesterday, "it would be difficult for it to put a single complete fighter group and a single B-29 group, as we knew them on VJ-Day, into full operative condition in an emergency."

He ascribed what he called the "appalling" state of the country's air defence both to the A.A.F.'s demolization from a CJ-Day strength of 2,253,000 men to 485,000 on May 1 and to cut-backs in aircraft production.

PRAISE FOR SAPPERS

Felixstove, England (CP) — Sappers of a mine disposal unit who had "de-loused" the local sands were entertained by the town council and told by the chairman: "We thank you for making our beaches safe for holiday-makers."

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, July 11 — (CP) — Synopsis at 7:30 p.m.: A storm centred north of Lake Superior is moving northeastward causing an extensive area of showers over Northern Ontario and as far south as the Georgian Bay region. Near gale winds are developing behind the storm in northwestern Ontario and over Lake Superior. Warm humid weather prevails over the eastern United States with the exception of New York and the New England states and is moving gradually into southern Ontario. Cooler and drier air is advancing eastward along a broad front extending from Lake Michigan to Texas and the western states and the prairie provinces are experiencing fine cool weather.

Counsel Says Frank Tried to Cut Ties With Hitler Govt. 14 Times

Nuernberg, July 11 —(AP)— Counsel for Hans Frank told the International War Crimes Tribunal today that the former governor-general of Poland tried 14 times to sever his ties with the Hitler government, but that Hitler refused to accept his resignation.

The lawyer, Dr. Alfred Seidl, said Frank was so disturbed by the Reich's change from a state based on law to a state governed by police brutality that he finally undertook to call the matter to the public's attention.

He said that Frank, in four speeches to German lawyers in 1943, repudiated "every form of police state and championed the idea of a state resting on law and independence of the judiciary."

Frank fought a constant battle with the police in Poland and lost each time, Dr. Seidl said. As Bavarian leader before the war he demanded dissolution of the infamous Dachu concentration camp, the lawyer added.

He declared that the administration of the Oswiecim concentration camp in Poland not under Frank's direction and asserted that the governor-general had avoided forced recruitment of Poles for work in the Reich.

Dr. Seidl argued that concentration camps as such are all right, declaring that the Allies have imprisoned upwards of 300,000 Germans for their political beliefs.

As for alleged German violations of the rules of warfare in the Polish campaign, the Allies killed more than 1,000,000 civilians in air raids — including 300,000 in Dresden alone — and many thousands more by atomic bombs in Japan, said the counsel.

C.S.L. RECORDS BEING EXAMINED BY CONTROLLER

Capt. Brand Wants To Determine if His Orders Have Been Carried Out

Toronto, July 11 (CP)—Capt. E. S. Brand, federally-appointed controller of lake shipping, today told a press conference that he had ordered an examination on records of the Canada Steamship Lines to determine whether his orders as controller had been carried out by the company.

"I have instructed the deputy controller in Montreal, Capt. J. E. Matheson, to move into the offices of the Canada Steamship Lines and to take steps to find out whether all the government's orders and my instructions on unlicensed personnel matters have been obeyed by this company, since I have strong indications that they have not."

Capt. Brand said there is "no real indication" any of the 28 other shipping companies under his control are not obeying instructions.

"I want to make it clear that I am not accusing anyone," he said. "I am just investigating reports which have come to my attention."

Capt. Matheson's duties relating to Canada Steamship Lines started at 10:30 a.m. He had also been instructed to "ensure that in future such orders are strictly obeyed by that company."

Difficulties with the company had been confined to unlicenced personnel matters. Actual movements of ships and booking of cargoes had been satisfactory and Capt. Matheson was not required "at present" to "interest himself in those departments."

"It is strongly indicated that the Canada Steamship Lines have not abided by their preferential hiring agreement with the Canadian Seamen's Union, but on the contrary have adopted other procedures of their own in the hiring of unlicensed personnel — some of these procedures being contrary to my instructions.

"These indications have led to a situation which places the relations between the Canada Steamship Lines and a number of their employees in jeopardy and which if not promptly checked may result in premature action by individual employees. This could subsequently lead to a further stoppage of the movement of ships and to the very serious consequences resulting from a stoppage of work whilst under government control."

Capt. Brand said the order-in-council by which the government took control of lake shipping states that conditions of employment in force before the C.S.U. strike are to continue in effect while he has control.

STRIKE SOON SETTLED

Sudbury, July 11 — (CP)—The first street railway strike in the history of this nickel city ended yesterday as abruptly as it began, with agreement by employees to return to their posts during negotiations with the Sudbury-Coppercliff Suburban Electric Railway.

The strike, over a union charge that the company violated a contract in regard to motormen's pay, was called without warning early yesterday and lasted 19 hours.

Mass Exodus of Jews Reported From Poland, Some Cross Border

Warsaw, July 11 — (AP) — A mass exodus of thousands of Jews was reported under way today in Poland, scene of a recent pogrom which resulted in 41 deaths.

Twenty-five thousand Jews recently repatriated from Russia are concentrated at Walbrzych, coal mining city southwest of Wroclaw and 12 miles from the Czechoslovakia border, awaiting a chance to leave the country.

In Caravans and Trucks

Others are coming through the mountainpasses daily in caravans and trucks, with Palestine as their ultimate destination.

A Jewish leader said hundreds of Jews were leaving Walbrzsch daily, either crossing the frontier on foot at unguarded points or paying someone to help them cross by other methods.

All through the lower Silesia area, Jews from Russia are banding together to protect themselves against any anti-Jewish outbreaks.

United States Ambassador Arthur Bliss Lane told Premier Edward Osubka-Morawski yesterday that military authorities in the United States occupation zone of Germany were "perturbed" over the possibility of an increased influx of Jews because of the recent pogrom in Kielce.

He discussed the pogrom with the premier, and said there was "great interest in the United States in a situation of such gravity."

Eleven men and a woman are on trial before a high Polish military court in Kielce on charges of having instigated the anti-Jewish uprising. They have admitted "qualified guilt."

Nachod, Czechoslovakia, July 11 — (AP) — Hundreds of frightened Jews fleeing from terror in Poland were stampeding across the border to this Czechoslovakian city today.

Virtually none of these people had passes or other documents authorizing them to be on Czech soil. Many smuggled themselves in between frontier posts. Others told of paying bribes in Poland to be led to a place where the border is open.

Fugitives Registered

But Czech patrolmen were letting them in and directing them to a barracks camp on the edge of this city. At other points their welcome was not especially hearty because of the feeding and housing problem.

Police are registering the fugitives and those able to travel are loaded on a special train for the ride across the country to the southern border of Bratislava, then to Vienna. One officer said he had not the "slightest idea" what becomes of them then. Many are hopeful of getting to Palestine somehow.

WILLIAM J. MOTZ, PUBLISHER, DIES AT KITCHENER

Kitchener, July 11 — (CP) — William John Motz, president and publisher of the Kitchener Daily Record, died last night at his home after an illness of several months. He was 75.

Mr. Motz spent nearly 50 years in newspaper work and served as president of the Canadian Daily Newspapers Association and of the Ontario Provincial Dailies Association. He was one of the founders of latter organization.

Mr. Motz was educated in St. Mary's School, St. Jerome's College, the University of Toronto, where he received a Bachelor of Arts Degree in 1893, and St. Francis Xavier College in New York, where he obtained a Master of Arts Degree.

He was a teacher at both St. Jerome's and St. Francis Xavier. He later joined his father in the firm of Rittinger and Motz Ltd., publishers of the weekly Ontario Journal.

In 1918 Mr. Motz acquired an interest in the old News Record, one of the two daily newspapers published in Kitchener at that time.

The News Record Ltd., absorbed the Daily Telegraph in 1922 and the combined paper became the present Kitchener Daily Record.

Under his management, the News Record of some 3,700 circulation grew into a paper with a circulation of nearly 19,000.

His experience in the newspaper field, his interest in municipal and national affairs, and his faith in his native community were qualities that enabled Mr. Motz to bring the Daily Record to the fore among Canadian daily newspapers.

Active in Community

Mr. Motz was active in church, community and business affairs for many years. He was a director of the Economical Mutual Fire Insurance Co. and the Waterloo Trust and Savings Co.

He was a member of the Kitchener Chamber of Commerce; St. Mary's Church Council; Knights of Columbus; Holy Name Society; the Westmount Golf and Country Club and a member of the Kitchener Public Library Board for 37 years, its chairman for three years.

He was chairman of St. Marys Hospital Advisory Board from 1922, when the hospital was built, until 1938. For many years he was a member of the Mothers Allowance and Old Age Pensions Board.

CANADIAN FLAG CHOSEN, QUEBEC OPPOSITION LOOMS

Red Ensign With Union Jack and Golden Maple Leaf Replacing Coat of Arms

By DOUGLAS HOW
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 11 (CP)—The problem of choosing "a distinctive National flag" drifted today towards what is potentially the major controversy of Canada's 20th parliament.

In the face of blunt warinngs from Quebec, its joint Senate-Commons Flag Committee spurred that drift yesterday by leaving as the lone design for its final choice the red ensign with its Union Jack and with a golden Maple Leaf replacing the coat of arms in the flag.

The flag was designed by 22-year-old Donald Baird of Truro, N.S.

The committee's action meant that between debate on the floors of parliament itself—and the threat that most Quebec Liberals may revolt—there is only the time needed by a sub-committee of that committee to thrash out certain details of the ensign design, and for the committee to draw up its final report.

Gone now is the last of the 2,400 competitors of the ensign. Quebec, choice, it consisted of red and white triangles with a green Maple Leaf in the centre of the diagonal separating the two colors. It went out on a committee vote of 15-8.

'War Medal' To be Issued By Canada

Ottawa, July 11 —(CP)— Veterans Minister Mackenzie told members of the Commons' Veterans Committee today that a new medal will be struck for veterans of the Second Great War.

It would be known as "The War Medal" and would correspond to the "Victory Medal" issued after the First Great War.

Detailed regulations would be published shortly, he said. The medal also would be issued to members of the Canadian Corps of Firefighters overseas.

MEMBER ASKS DISCONTINUANCE NAT. REGISTRATION

Diefenbaker Also Asks For Better Handling Of Sales by War Assets Corporation

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, July 11 (CP)— Discontinuance of national registration and a more business-like handling of sales by War Assets Corporation were advanced in the Commons yesterday by John Diefenbaker (PC-Lake Centre) as means of effecting economies in government business.

A saving of $324,000 annually and a reduction of more than 230 in the staff of the civil service could be effected if national registration was eliminated, said Mr. Diefenbaker. There was no further need for it in Canada.

Mr. Diefenbaker was one of four speakers heard as the debate on the budget continued through its third day and adjourned until today. Other speakers were J. A. Ross (PC-Souris); T. J. Bentley (CCF-Swift Current) and Robert Fair (SC-Battle River). They renewed criticism of tax changes proposed in the budget.

After the House opened, Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced receipt of an invitation to send a Canadian delegation to the peace conference and indicated he might have an announcement on the delegation today.

Will Table Report

Justice Minister St. Laurent announced the final report of the Royal Commission on espionage will be ready for tabling in the House at a "very early date."

Mr. Diefenbaker said there were many ways in which the government could make economies. However, taxes could not be brought down until the administration got rid of its "billion dollar mentality."

ARRIVAL SAVES WOMAN

Everett, Mass., July 11—(AP)— The timely arrival of a brother from New York probably saved Miss Mary Flaherty, 63, from slow death by starvation after she had been trapped for several days in an attic closet in her home.

She was sealed in the closet from Saturday until yesterday after a spring-locked door slammed behind her.

Her brother, Michael, 75, heard the faint pounding of his rapidly weakening sister on one of his occasional visits.

Takes Over Three Basic Steel Plants, Controller Named

Authority Given Appointee To Apply for Wage Hikes

Ottawa, July 11 (CP) — The Federal Government today had control of Canada's three basic steel plants in an effort to keep coke and steel production rolling in the face of strike threats by the United Steelworkers of America (C.I.O.)

Whether the union would delay strike action was uncertain. C. H. Millard, Canadian director of the union, was studying the government's surprise move and it was expected final decision on union policy would be made at a meeting in Hamilton today and tomorrow.

The meeting had been previously called to set a strike date in wage-hour negotiations with the Dominion Steel and Coal Corp., Sydney, N.S.; Steel Company of Canada, Hamilton and Algoma Steel Corp., Sault Ste. Marie.

Mr. Mitchell announcing the appointment of F. B. Kilbourn of Montreal as controller, said a steel strike would cut into Canada's vitally needed coke supplies and would throw "hundreds of thousands" of workers into other industries into total or partial unemployment.

Mr. Kilbourn will have as assistants, three deputy controllers, all labor department officials — Bart Sullivan, Toronto; J. Argyle, Ottawa and H. R. Pettigrove, Fredericton.

The order in council authorizing the seizure followed the same form as that used in other cases, most recent the lake shipping strike, but added authority was given Mr. Kilbourn to make application to the Regional War Labor Board for wage increases.

Possibility was seen today that final union acceptance or rejection of the government's "continue work" order might hinge on the terms of such an application.

ONE ESCAPEE KILLED

Houston, Tex., July 11—(AP)— Twenty-four of the 25 convicts who made a desperate break for freedom yesterday at Harlem prison farm Nov. 2 were back in confinement today. The 25th convict was dead.

Walter Elliott, 24, serving a 9-year term for robbery by assault, was killed by a shot from a guard's rifle as he fled in a stolen car.

Capt. W. H. Thomas, the farm's assistant manager, said the break began when 25 convicts in one cell block sawed out bars and improvised a key to the door. Eight of them managed to slip through the front door before being seen and rounded up.

Cool Reception Given Ottawa's Move by Union

By The Canadian Press

Uncertainty girdled today's question of a strike in basic steel plants that would boost to 50,000 the number of idle Canadian workers—despite Ottawa's action in appointing a federal controller for the big three of Canadian steel.

Roughly 36,000 workers are idle in strikes across the country, mostly for higher wages and shorter hours. The 14,000 basic steel workers were preparing to strike July 15 when the federal control announcement came from Ottawa Wednesday.

The Ottawa move met a cool reception in local unions at Sydney, the Sault and Hamilton. Opposition chiefly centred on Labor Minister Mitchell's statement that wage increases of not more than 10 cents an hour might be allowed without endangering the price structure. The steel workers are asking increases of 19 1-2 cents an hour.

The steel locals agreed to await action by the national wage advisory committee of the United Steel Workers of America (C.I.O.) which goes into session today at Hamilton.

C. H. Millard, Canadian director of the Steelworkers Union, indicated at Hamilton last night that the strike still will be called despite the government's action.

He said "nothing has happened yet to make us change our program of notifying the companies on Friday noon that a strike in steel is being called."

German Pow Does Not Believe Allies Can Teach Democracy to Hungry

Frankfurt, Germany, July 11 (AP)—I do not believe you can teach the German people democracy while they have empty stomachs, nor the "four freedoms" while they are not free.

Two months ago I returned to my homeland from the P. O. W. camps of the United States. I was a graduate of a special course in democracy for selected prisoners.

I am shocked and depressed at the sight of Germany. It is the difference in the face of the Germans—all Germans, men, wives and children.

The younger generation mostly has been killed in action. The older generation, after two lost wars, is too weak to rebuild.

The people starve inside the new boundaries, workers have not the strength to work efficiently. Coal production declines, factory production declines, the living standard declines. The black market and inflation grows.

There are four big political parties and some smaller ones in Germany now. At the last election June 30th in the American zone, German interest was less than before. That means—you hear it on every side—the people already have lost confidence in their new leaders.

When I came back, I encountered the German bureaucrat. Within 10 days, I had such a bunch of signed and sealed certificates of various sorts that it was impossible to get them into one pocket of my suit.

Millions of Germans have the strong conviction that the United States should re-arrange everything that is wrong in Germany. When I hear these thoughts, I remember the words of my army teachers in the States: "We only want to help you so you can help yourself."

I regard with admiration the United States military government here which since more than a year has been "trying to get the car out of the mud."

Yet I can not buy a hat because hats do not come from the factories in the Soviet zone. I can not buy a shirt because textiles do not come from the French zone.

Nobody knows how long Germany will be occupied. The Germans wait for any change, but they have not the energy to create a change.

If they hear of something they do not understand, they say, "Oh, that's propaganda. We have had enough of that in 13 years."

Last German Pow Group Will Sail From U.S. July 22

Washington, July 11 — (AP)— More than 14 months after VE-Day, arrangements were completed today to send back to Germany the last of more than 370,000 prisoners of war brought to this country.

The final group, aside from fewer than 300 sick or classed as incorrigibles, is scheduled to sail July 22 from New York, War Department officials said.

All are Germans. The last of the Japanese and Italian P.O.W.'s were returned to their homelands early this year.

Prospects for the immediate release of this last batch of prisoners once they hit Germany again are uncertain.

Under an arrangement with Britain, 175,000 of the final group held in the UUnited States were to be turned over to British custody. However, about half of these already have gone to the United Kingdom and the others have been sent to the British-occupied zone of Germany, where selected war prisoners work in the Ruhr coal mines and on other jobs.

San Francisco, July 11 (AP)— A spectacular fire last night razed the big pipe and copper shop at the Hunter's Point navy repair base here, causing damage estimated at $400,000 and minor injuries to three persons.

Commodore Joseph W. Fowler, base commander, said the origin of the blaze had not been determined.

CHURCH ST. RESIDENTS WILL MISS DOG

Hugo is dead. He was the eight-year-old highly intelligent German Shepherd dog owned by Monsignor J. F. Nicholson, V.G.

Hugo suffered what is believed to be a brain tumor a couple of weeks ago and his condition gradually became worse and he did not recover.

Monsignor Nicholson acquired "Hugo" when the handsome black dog was in his early puppyhood. Possessed of more than average canine intelligence, Hugo soon learned the many tricks his master taught him.

He was a prime favorite with all who knew him, especially in the vicinity of Church Street, where Monsignor Nicholson and his black dog trotting at heel were a familiar sight.

The Monsignor who feels keenly the loss of his friend and pet briefly commented, "We all miss him."

BIG JACK RABBITS AROUND PICTON WAY

The big jack rabbits that are as large as a full-grown dog (the managing editor is on vacation) have made their appearance around Picton way, reports from that town state.

Art Cahoon, Picton farmer, states he saw a buck which he thought would weigh 15 pounds streak through his tomato field leaving a cloud of dust in its wake.

"We see them every day," he said. "Last week I discovered my mower had cut one in two."

American Money Now Common In City Shops

People used to tuck those cute American greenback bills away for future reference and discount. Now the pesky things are becoming as common as washboards.

Since the government parity order came into effect American money has appeared as if by magic in shops and stores.

A saleslady will give you change in American currency as nonchalantly as she wraps up the parcel. "What a whale of a difference a few cents make."

One American from Utica, N.Y., by accident and not design, although the missus swears he had been tipped off, "cashed" $500 in American currency the day before the parity went into effect.

His wife was left holding the discount bag, so to speak, and goodnaturedly accused her husband of having previous knowledge of the governmental order. Family relations, however, were kept at an amicable state, by the husband "sharing the profits" with his wife.

Present Plea For Independent Radio Stations

Ottawa, July 11 — (CP)—The Canadian Association of Broadcasters, presenting the case of independent radio stations to the Commons Radio Committee, said today community stations were not making enormous profits and in many cases faced depletion of their reserves through expenditures on new equipment.

The Association's first brief, presented by Frederick C. Colborne, assistant manager of CJCJ Calgary, dealt largely with the services performed by private stations. It was to be followed by a brief discussing the future of Canada's general radio policy.

The Association said it favored continuance of both a nationally-owned system of radio stations and a system of independently owned community stations.

"These community stations should exist as a competitive and protective force, to provide stimulation to the national system and to protect the democratic elements of freedom of speech and individuality of programming and to serve these purely local needs which the national system obviously cannot undertake in the complete fulfillment of its national purpose," the brief said.

Dealing with the financial position of independent stations the Association said in the early days of Canadian radio a number of the small stations had struggled along at a loss. In recent years they have benefitted from a general upsurge in business but their profits were reduced by excess profits taxes because of low income in the year on which standard profits were based.

In obtaining business the stations had to compete with other advertising media and the business was a risky one with the license guaranteed for only a year. This year independent stations would spent approximately $2,000,000 on new equipment.

"The record shows that no sponsor has ever been permitted to dictate the station's policy in relation to commercial copy, which is subject to editing for good taste and acceptability," the Association said. "There is no instance on record of a sponsor interfering in any way with the broadcast of news."

Driver is Fined For Leaving Scene Of Accident

Trenton — On Tuesday last Wayne L. L. Simmons, Dundas Street, W., reported to police that he was waiting for the red traffic light to change at the intersection of Dundas and Front streets when a second car proceeding east on Dundas Street struck the rear of his car and failed to stop. The driver of the hit-and-run car was apprehended by police a short time later at a parking lot on Front Street. He gave his name as Earl C. Armstrong, Brighton, Ont. Armstrong was charged with leaving the scene of an accident and in police court was fined $27.50.

Car is Struck.

A car driven by Sam Kaznel, 294 Front Street, Belleville, was parked opposite the London Lunch, Dundas Street, and when the driver went to pull away from the curb, a second car proceeding west on Dundas Street, and driven by H. J. Hubert of 13784 Caldwell Ave., Detroit, Mich., struck his car doing damage to the grill, bumper and left front fender. The American car was damaged on the right front fender, right rear fender, both hub caps and a cut on the right front tire.

Thomas Anger of R. R. No. 4, Trenton, was driving his car east on Dundas Street when opposite Shurie's Drug Store another car was stopped and going to back up to park on the south side of the street. As the Anger car went to pass, his right rear fender caught the bumper of the other car doing damage to the extent of about $5. The second car was driven by Andrew Little of R. R. No. 4, Trenton.

26 Cases Heard.

Twenty-six cases were heard in Trenton police court on Tuesday last before Magistrate T. Y. Wills and Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C.

John Anderson was fined $102.50 for a breach of the Game and Fisheries Act.

Roland B. Hutton and Rodrigue Renaud each appeared in court for speeding. Hutton's fine was $12.50, while Renaud was parted from $7.50.

E. C. Armstrong was fined $27.50 on a careless driving charge.

For breaches of the Liquor Control Act the following persons were fined $13 each, Wm. R. McMaster, John Bloye, William C. Ryckman, Walter Hunt, Jas. E. Scriver, Albert Brooks, Bert Leland Copeland, John Reginald Thomkins, and Wm. Jas. Bird.

Norman J. Brooks, Leslie J. Simmons, Orla Weese and George Webb all appeared on charges of assault and their cases were enlarged for one week.

Senate Pressed For Final Action On O.P.A. Bill

By EDWIN B. HAAKINSON

Washington, July 11 — (AP)—Undaunted by open talk of another veto, democratic leader Alben Barkley of Kentucky pressed the Senate today for final action on a new Office of Price Administration bill even if it means working into the night again.

Cheerful despite rapid setbacks in the form of hands-off amendments, covering meats, milk, butter, salad oils and gasoline, the Kentuckian told reporters he still is hopeful of getting a price control revival measure that President Truman would sign.

"We got a better bill than either the Senate or House passed last time from a conference," Sen. Barkley said. "Maybe we can still improve on that this time."

But another administration lieutenant who may not be identified further said President Truman would balk again unless some way is found to overturn Senate actions barring future price ceilings on many items important in the cost of living.

Across the Capitol, Rep. Jesse P. Wolcott of Michigan, senior Republican of the House of Representatives Banking Committee, told reporters "it appears that only rent control will remain" when Congress and the president finish their battle over O.P.A.

Major tests facing the Senate today include an attempt by Sen. Robert Taft (Rep.-Ohio) to re-insert his price-boosting profit provision which drew chief White House fire in the president's veto message and several proposals dealing with rent controls that expired along with O.P.A.

Following up its 49 to 26 vote Tuesday to keep meat free of O.P.A. ceilings under any revival, the Senate voted these additional touchnot provisions yesterday and last night:

1. Milk and all other dairy products, an amendment sponsored by Sen. Kenneth Wherry (Rep.-Neb.) and approved 51 to 27.
2. Cottonseed, soy beans and their products, by Sen. James Eastland (Dem.-Miss.), 42 to 34.
3. Petroleum and its products as long as supply exceeds domestic demand, by Sen. E. H. Moore (Rep.-Okla.), 40 to 39.

The only administration victory during the two days of O.P.A. mauling came when the Senate rejected an amendment to exempt grains and their byproducts.

PLUNGED TO DEATH IN SECOND ATTEMPT

Resuscitation

Pointing out that a knowledge of resuscitation can be of great aid in preventing drowning, gas poisoning and electric shock fatalities, the Industrial Accident Prevention Associations offer a large illustrated poster dealing with artificial respiration by the prone pressure method.

The three simple preliminary rules of resuscitation are easy to remember and administer. They are:

DROWNING — Quickly remove victim from water and place on ground or other hard surface. If possible, have head slightly lower than rest of body, so that water and other liquids will drain away from victim.

ELECTRIC SHOCK—The victim must be freed from the contact as promptly as possible. Use a dry stick, dry rope, dry coat or other non-conductor. The use of your own hands is dangerous and may add another victim to the accident.

GAS ASPHYXIATION—The first thing to do is to get the patient into fresh air quickly. Fresh air does not mean out of doors in cold weather. Do not breathe gas yourself, even for a short time. If it does not overcome you, it will cut down your strength.

Ontario production plants may obtain copies of the timely poster on application at the Industrial Accident Prevention Association, 600 Bay Street, Toronto 2.

THE LONG AND THE SHORT OF IT

Here are the two extremes in a pigtail contest held at Sullivan St playground, New York. At LEFT is Diana Ferrari, eight-year-old, who won the prize for the longest pigtails. She has a 19-inch braid. At RIGHT, and not too happy about it either, is Hannah Harmavy, who won the prize for the shortest pigtail with four inches. Hannah is 22 months old. Maybe she is just crying tears of joy.

Deloro Safety Council Meets

Marmora—The regular monthly meeting of the Deloro Safety Committee was held in the Electric Shop on Tuesday afternoon, with C. H. Buskard in the chair. The attendance was a little lower than usual owing to some members being on vacation. George Brooks for the Suggestions Committee reported the receipt of twenty suggestions in June. For the Competitive Committee H. Rennie mentioned that the Star was awarded the General Division and that nine suggestions had been allowed prizes. W. M. Regan gave the report of the Inspection Committee which turned in five suggestions. Hugh Brady was appointed floating member for July. A. W. Drew reported for the Publicity Committee submitting several suggestions for the sustaining of interest in safety work.

For the Health and Investigation Committee J. A. Rice mentioned the holding of prone method practices and the inspection of safety first boxes. The chairman gave the monthly statement of Benevolent Relief Funds after which the meeting went into general discussion of the Publicity Committee's findings in the recent "Why" contest.

Crop Outlook In United States Never Surpassed

By OVID A. MARTIN

Washington, July 11— (AP) — The United States is well on the way today toward its sixth consecutive bumper harvest.

In fact, the Agriculture Department in its latest monthly crop report said the current outlook for total farm production has seldom been surpassed.

The report issued yesterday said conditions prevailing July 1 indicated a record corn crop, near-record crops of wheat, oats, potatoes and rice, and large crops of vegetables and most fruits.

If the grain crops turn out as now indicated, the United States will be in a position to carry out its commitment to send 250,000,000 bushels of wheat to shortage areas during the next 12 months and still maintain production of livestock products — meats, milk, eggs and poultry — at levels near those of the past year.

While the corn crop — the key material in the production of livestock products—may be the largest ever harvested, it is unlikely, officials said, that supplies will be sufficient to allow any material increase in its use in making whisky.

The crop outlook was not without its dark spots. The production of oilseeds — soybeans, peanuts and flaxseed — will be below wartime levels and below demands. Margarine, shortening, salad oils and paints are principal products made from the oilseeds. Likewise, the rye and barley crops may be the smallest since the droughts of the 30's.

On the brighter side was a forecast that the domestic sugar crop may be 25 per cent larger than last year's abnormally small crop.

The report said farmers are maintaining the production of milk and eggs at near record levels. Favorable pastures and ranges are contributing to the high level of milk production.

Insect Plague Moving Across North Manitoba

The Pas, Man., July 11 —(CP) —A strange insect plague covering a 500-mile area from the western shores of Hudson Bay to the Pas area, leaving stripped spruce forests in its wake, was reported yesterday by Charles Dunn, a trapper in the York Factory area about 550 miles northeast of Winnipeg.

"The insects — almost ½-inch long, with "tiny silver wings" and feelers behind and in front of the wings — were said to strip branches from spruce trees "as if with saws," leave white spruce "as bare as broomsticks" and attack black spruce at the level which marks old and new branch growth.

Mr. Dunn said he first saw the army of peculiar insects last April moving "toward the spring sun and a new forest growth from the old growth on the other side of the river where they must have wintered." They extended over a width of two miles and seemed to pour endlessly out of the woods onto the bare snow.

Previously he said he had noticed the spruce forests were filled with a reddish ochre dust which would stain the clothes. "It was like spore and I think it had something to do with these insects."

The Department of Agriculture at Ottawa announced Monday it was intensifying its annual attack on the spruce budworm, an insect which infests an estimated 260,000 square miles of Canadian forests and destroys 10,000,000 cords of timber yearly. Officials said the budworm is threatening valuable white spruce in an arc running from eastern Manitoba to northwestern New Brunswick.

COOL RECEPTION

Statement Given by Union

Labor Minister Mitchell told parliament that the government had appointed F. B. Kilbourn of Montreal Federal Controller of the three big plants, with three deputy controllers, in a move to avert the steel strike. The basic plants are those of Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation at Sydney, the Steel Company of Canada at Hamilton and Algoma Steel Corporation at Sault Ste. Marie.

The National Committee of the Canadian Congress of Labor, with which the steel union is affiliated, was in session at Hamilton yesterday when word was received of the Federal announcement. Following the C.C.L. meeting Pat Conroy, Secretary, said in a statement:

"While it is the sole prerogative of the United Steel Workers to come to its own decisions the committe has been advised by Mr. Millard that unless the wage requests of the steel workers are met by noon Friday the strike in the basic steel industry will take place by Monday July 15."

In a reference to the present strike of 11,000 members of the United Rubber Workers Conroy stated that the government, in circularizing employees of strike-bound rubber plants to accept a wage formula previously approved by the employers, had taken on a new role of attempting to get workers to accept employers' wage patterns.

The Federal Labor Department had used the threat of inflation in order to have unions meet the demands of employers, the statement added. "But the government approved price increases to manufacturers without accompanying wage increases."

Addressed by Leaders

Various union heads addressed a mass meeting at Hamilton last night called by the United Electrical Workers (C.I.O.) which has more than 6,000 members on strike in plants at Hamilton, Toronto and Welland.

Clarence E. Jackson, Canadian president of the U.E.L., declared his union would stand by its "minimum needs" of a 25-cent an hour wage increase and a 40-hour week.

Conroy told the meeting: "You are fighting the fight for all Canadian workers and the Congress stands whole-heartedly behind you . . . The present struggle will determine in the not too distant future in what direction this country is going. Is it going on to a higher standard of living, to peace with security, or back to the conditions of 1929?"

At Sydney the steel local was holding its regular meeting when the Ottawa announcement came.

The meeting sent to Millard a telegram saying that members were "angered over the inference in the announcement by the Labor Minister that the steel workers should accept only a 10-cent increase." The 10-cent limit was greeted with "howls of laughter," according to a union spokesman.

AMHERSTBURG IS 150 YEARS OLD

Western Ontario Town Once Refuge for Negro Slaves

Amherstburg, Ont. (CP)—Amherstburg, one of Canada's historical landmarks and her southernmost boundary point, will celebrate its 150th birthday July 11.

The town, which now boasts 3,000 inhabitants came into being along with the military post of Fort Malden when the British evacuated Detroit. The Fort and town grew together and were important points of contention in the war of 1812.

Amherstburg bears traces of its colorful past when Indians, explorers, French soldier settlers and Loyalists made it their headquarters—but most of all when Negro fugitives from the American slavery laws found in it a place of refuge.

The town was the chief terminal of the "Underground," the means devised to assist fleeing slaves in their escape from the southern states. The tale of Uncle Tom's Cabin has Amherstburg as its locale. The old Elliott homestead, built in 1784, often has been described as Eliza's Cottage from its association with slavery and fugitive slaves.

The house the many historical items of the region the Fort Malden National Historic Park Museum was established in 1941. Adjacent to the Museum are the northwest bastions and a portion of the moat of Fort Malden.

Tire Shortage Creating Trouble For U.S. Tourists

The current passenger car tire shortage which is making it difficult for Canadian motorists to secure the tires needed to keep the jalopy rolling throughout the summer is also creating hardships for American tourists now driving through this country, according to local tire dealers.

"Every day we get sob stories from American motorists desperately in need of a tire to continue their journey," stated one dealer. "But there is nothing which we can do about it. Passenger car tires in the popular sizes are not just to be had."

Hot pavements and continued long driving were given as being responsible for most of the woes expressed by American tourists. Tires which appeared to be in fairly good condition just fail to stand up under the continued driving on hot roads with result that blowouts are frequent.

At that local dealers can appreciate the difficulty in which a tourist finds himself when a blowout leaves him less than the required four tires to continue his journey. As result garages are being scoured in the possibility of securing the odd used tire which might serve to get the unfortunate holidayer back to his home.

There's a bit of bad in the best of us, and a bit of good in the worst of us. That is why Richard G. Britton (above), convicted of murder in the holdup of a Seattle, Wash., shoe store, has offered to give his eyes to Maxine Moore, 23-year-old Wenatchee, Wash., girl. Maxine lost her sight at the age of eight as the result of spinal meningitis. Britton learned of her case in the penitentiary. The girl is to go to Seattle for an examination to determine feasibility of a cornea grafting operation. Britton is scheduled to die on Saturday, July 13.

Some kind of a record for tonnage of peas in one load delivered to the viner from the farm was established at the Baxter Company canning factory at Bloomfield last week when a total of four tons and 212 pounds was threshed from the one load. The peas were grown on the farm of Clifford Wilkes, Mount Pleasant.

It required three hours for the viner to thresh the load of peas, but it was not stated how long it took to load them in the field.

Hot sun of late June and early July has brought the pea harvest on with a rush with early varieties now finished, while in some instances late varieties have also gone to the viner.

Crowds

Crowded sidewalks, crowded roads and highways, crowded shops, and business moving at a swift pace are the visible marks of this summer. The season which is not yet more than started will set up a record for activity in city, town and village and countryside on both sides of the International Boundary which is not a line of demarcation or barrier but rather a link or bridge across which the peoples of two great peoples in North America cross to meet one another.

Every small community on both sides is feeling the new tempo of this summer. In Canada the program is at work which is bringing many millions of guests to this land for the months of summer. Markers of automobiles from many states of the Union can be seen on local streets at the same time while in the flow of the motor traffic are noticed many cars from this province and the other provinces of the Dominion.

Those who predicted a great and busy summer of visiting, by Canadians and Americans are finding their prophecy and dreams come true.

The Great War as Seen From Britain

There has been issued by the British Ministry of Information a volume of "Chronology and Commentary" in the booklet "War Seen From Britain" during the momentous years of 1939-1945. In a foreward it is explained that it is no attempt to recount the British war effort as such.

"Britain has been the principal offensive base for the United Nations against Germany, has been the chief protagonist in the Mediterranean theatre, and has been vitally and intimately concerned in the war against Japan. In these circumstances the succeeding phases of the World War in all parts of the globe have been watched by Britain as equally concerning her, however near or distant the particular theatre of war might be. The final success in Europe has been achieved, as that in the Far East will be, by a co-operative effort on the part of all the United Nations. The attempt made here is to summarize the story of the World War in such proportions as the weight and magnitude of the events themselves seemed to warrant." This is the opening paragraph.

In brief space this is done in a thorough manner under the chapters of "War Against Aggression," "Defeat, Retreat, Defence," "Striking Back," "New Allies: New Enemies," "Second Crisis Year," "Carrying the Bastions," with the autumn of 1942 becoming the turning point of the war and starting in with El Alamein. Then comes the period of "The Great Assault,", beginning with the offensive in Italy, and closing with V-Day in Europe. Then followed the offensives carrying the war to Tokyo with the momentous last days of the struggle in the reorientation of the war against Japan, the Australian offensive in Borneo, the struggle for Okinawa, the use of the atomic bomb and the surrender of the Japanese.

On each page are three columns, the first of dates, then the events on these dates and the interpretation of these events in the light of the Allied war effort. It is a graphic story told simply and directly.

The last paragraph, the 137th, furnishes an idea of the spirit of Britain. "At long last Britain could look at a world of peace. Her own efforts had contributed the sine qua non of human salvation. With her enemies in the dust, she could and did, from her shattered cities and bereaved homes, take pride in the result. Yet all comment made clear how well her peoples realized the perils of the new world. Could she help to create such a world as might dominate for human good the terrible forces so shatteringly disclosed in the last hours of war? If so, she might watch humanity struggle clear of the abyss, if not, she and all mankind must go down together. Clearly the responsibilities of the peoples of Britain were not to be ended with the defeat of Germany and Japan." This shows her spirit in the making of peace.

This small book interprets the course of the war in relation to all the Allied Nations and treats of the co-operation of the United Nations to bring peace in the defeat of the Axis. The last dates and events recorded concern the conference of United Nations at San Francisco with the ratification of the Charter. Opening the volume is a selection from the address of Prime Minister Winston Churchill in the House of Commons on May 13th, 1940, in which the great leader said "I take up my task with buoyancy and hope. I feel sure that our cause will not be suffered to fail among men. At this time I feel entitled to claim the aid of all, and I say 'Come, then, let us go forward together with out united strength.'"

And on the last page is the expression of British courage and faith spoken by the same great statesman on the eve of the Battle of Britain in which he said, "Hitler knows that he will have to break us in this island or lose the war. 'If we can stand up to him, all Europe may be free and the life of the world may move forward into broad sunlit uplands. But if we fail, then the whole world, including the United States, including all that we have known and cared for, will sink into the abyss of a new Dark Age made more sinister, and perhaps more protracted by the lights of a perverted science. Let us therefore brace ourselves to our duties and so bear ourselves that, if the British Empire and its Commonwealth last for a thousand years, men will still say, 'This was their finest hour.'" That was the great voice of Churchill speaking in the Commons on June 18, 1940, prophetically of the victory of democracy and freedom over the sinister powers of the enemy.

World Health Organization

No doubt our descendants will think of mankind during most of its history, even including our own age of marvelous medical discoveries, as essentially a sick race. Our increasing wealth of knowledge about disease has been only haphazardly applied. Millions upon millions of human beings have suffered from ailments and disabilities that could have been prevented or cured — they still suffer. The genius of whole populations has been thwarted by a lack of energy, a dwindling of ambition, a lessening of hope due to disease. The great gap between the death rates of such countries as India and China and those of North America and Western Europe proves the point.

The World Health Organization, when it is set up, will not need an international police force to support it. It will not require sanctions. There will probably be no objection in any country to inspectors from other countries who come with the sole purpose of improving a nation's health and saving the lives of its people. Medical science can be put to work, and if it is put to work successfully it may save more human beings than our last two great wars have killed.

One's heart warms to this project. May it never know the politics, the international rivalries, the suspicions from which yesterday's meeting seemed so free!

—New York Times.

Movies as Evidence

In civil court actions pictures many times have played an important part as evidence to substantiate claims of either side. Now the police authorities in Washington are planning to get movies of those arrested for drunken driving and present such evidence to the court. Wherever possible it is planned to rush the cameraman to the scene of the arrest and take pictures of the driver under arrest. It is at least a novel venture and may turn out to have good results.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Who were the original Siamese twins?

This term was first applied to Chang and Eng, joined twins born in 1811 at Meklong, Siam. Their father was Chinese and their mother half Chinese and half Siamese, and therefore the original Siamese twins, although born in Siam, were three-fourths Chinese and one-fourth Siamese.

Chang and Eng were joined at the waists by a thick band of fleshy ligament that become about four inches in length and four inches in circumference. The common naval was on the lower border of the cartilaginous structure, and a postmortem showed that the blood vessels of the two livers communicated freely across the bridge, indicating that a surgical severance of the ligament might have endangered the lives of both.

Chang and Eng were engaged successfully in the poultry business in 1824 when Robert Hunter, British merchant, saw them stripped to the waist and realized their value for educational and exhibition purposes. Hunter made a bargain with the mother (the father having died in 1819), and 1829 an American sea captain named Coffin took the Siamese twins from Bangkok to Boston, where they arrived in April, 1829, when they were 18 years old.

Chang and Eng toured the United States and parts of Europe and made considerable money for their manager and themselves. In 1840, after having saved $60,000, they settled down as farmers, first in Wilkes and later in Surrey county, North Carolina. They were naturalized as American citizens and with the permission of the legislature took the surname Bunker.

Three years later Chang and Eng Bunker married sisters, Sarah and Adelaide Yates, of Wilkes County. Chang had ten children and Eng nine, all of them normal. But their domestic lives were not very happy. The wives quarreled and the Siamese twins had to set up separate homes, which they visited alternately a few days at a time.

They were hit hard financially by the Civil War, which deprived them of their slaves and much of their other wealth, with the result that they had to return to the show business and their tours. Chang, the more intelligent of the two, was the more irritable. He drank heavily and when under the influence of liquor had the habit of breaking furniture and throwing the pieces into the fire. It is said that because of a disagreement they seldom spoke to each other at one time for a period of two years.

While the original Siamese twins were returning from England in 1870 Chang had a stroke of paralysis. Neither Chang's drinking nor his paralytic stroke seemed to affect Eng. Nearly four years later, when they were nearly 63, Chang died in his sleep, and two or three hours later Eng also died, either from fright or because of his physical connection with his dead brother.

PLAN CHURCH FILM REVIEW

Liverpool, England (CP)—The Diocese of Liverpool has equipped a film production unit which will at first produce silent features of events of historic and pictorial interest in the diocese, graduating to "talkies" later. They hope to produce a diocesan quarterly film review.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

EXPRESSES GRATITUDE TO THURLOW

4 Evans Street,
Belleville, Ont.,
July 8th, 1946.

To The Editor,
The Ontario Intelligencer,
Belleville, Ontario.
Dear Sir:—

Please permit me, through your columns, to congratulate the Township of Thurlow, through its Reeve and Councillors, for the very sincere way in which it showed its appreciation to its boys and girls who served in the armed forces.

As my own son was one of those honored, it struck me as a very gracious gesture, and the scroll with which each one was presented will be an ever present reminder that their service, and their sacrifice, did not go unappreciated, or unrecognized.

The cheque which each one received will no doubt be put to immediate good use, but transcending in value is the fact that they did a good job and somebody said "Thank you" for it, and said it in a nice way.

Yours faithfully,
John M. Wood.

Postmen's Hours Argued in Press

London (CP)—How late at night a postman should work is a question which has found its way out of parliament into the press.

Wilfrid A. Burke, assistant postmaster-general, started the discussion when he said that midnight letter collections will not be resumed in London although the war is ended. Mr. Burke said resumption might encourage the public to return to old and later hours of business.

The Daily Telegraph commented editorially that "hitherto most of us believed the post office was conducted for the public benefit, and that late hours for a portion of those concerned were considered inevitable, as in some other callings—railways, buses, tubes and trams, bakeries and newspapers."

Thereupon G. A. Stevens, acting general secretary of the Union of Post Office Workers, submitted a letter saying that while Mr. Burke had promised the last collection of the day would be at 9 p.m. instead of midnight, the union considered even 9 p.m. "far too late."

Mr. Stevens said the hour was too late "having regard to the unsocial and irksome attendance the postal staff will have to undertake." Work would not finish at 9 p.m. if there was a collection at that hour, completing and handling of mail would take until 11 p.m. or later.

"My members hold that a collection fairly late at night is in the main a luxury service, and that little, if any, benefit would accrue to the public generally," he said.

He added that "reputable business houses" had re-organized their posting departments in an effort to clear their correspondence early in the day, and the inefficient business elements who have not improved their organization have no right to expect postal workers' conditions to be worsened in order to bolster up their lack of enterprise."

Postal workers desired to provide a satisfactory standard of service but they asked the public not to condemn them to prewar work conditions which before 1939 often made "men strangers to their own children except on Sundays."

Tourists go North Via Aerial Route

Rainy River, Ont. (CP)—Flying tourists into the Lake of the Woods and other northwestern Ontario summer resorts is a roaring business for two R. C. A. F. veterans, Joe Sponarski and Woodrow Rodesick.

The service is known as Spinwood Sportland Airways, the first word being a combination of the owners' nicknames "Spinner" and "Woody". Sportsmen, mostly Americans, are met here and flown to various parts of the nearby fishing and shooting country.

The two men pooled their savings and bought a De Haviland Fox Moth aircraft equipped with floats. A franchise from the department of transport and a third pilot, George Turner of Toronto, completed the company. Since then, orders have poured in, and the men are looking forward to establishing another base with additional equipment and personnel at Fort Frances.

Province to Help with Cost of Investigation

London, Ont., July 11 — (CP) — Hon. Russell T. Kelley, Ontario Minister of Health, announced Wednesday the province will contribute $2,500 towards the expenses of the investigation to be conducted into health and hospital insurance problems by the Department of Clinical Preventive Medicine of the University of Western Ontario.

The investigation is being undertaken as a part of the program of research in industrial medicine provided in the John McClary memorial endowment, founded by Mrs. W. M. Gartshore, in honor of her father.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

Signed letters, not more than one page or 100 words long, pertaining to personal health and hygiene, not to disease, diagnosis or treatment, will be answered by Dr. Brady if a stamped self addressed envelope is enclosed. Letters should be brief and written in ink. Owing to the large number of letters received only a few can be answered here. No reply can be made to queries not conforming to instructions. Address Dr. William Brady, care of this newspaper.

Readers addressing letters to Dr. Brady will please include the word "Canada" on their return envelopes, as these letters have to be forwarded to Dr. Brady. And it is requested that readers use standard size envelopes that will hold a small booklet

VITE SPELLS YOUTH

Mind you, now, I'm just as fond of lollypops, ice cream, cookies, cake, syrups, sugar, pastry and the like as you are. I'm just telling you what's good for your health. If you work or play as hard as one should, or get enough general exercise every day to keep reasonably fit, you can take care of your share of these delectable carbohydrates even if they do supply practically nothing but calories, only I urge you to take them as dessert, not as a substitute for real food.

A common manifestation of the nutritional deficiency of children, youths and adults whose diet includes too great a proportion of cheap foods is softening, decay and early loss of teeth, in my opinion. I believe this accounts for the almost universal prevalence of dental caries in America, rather than the imaginary destructive action of sugar and starch or of lactic acid from fermentation of sugar and starch, upon the enamel, as so many dentists believe. The chief deficiencies responsible for the shamefully poor condition of the teeth of the English and the American people are calcium, vitamin D, vitamin C and vitamin B complex.

Calcium (lime) deficiency and vitamin B complex deficiency are common contributing factors of weakness or poor tone of the heart muscle and the eating muscle (muscle coats of stomach and intestine), although many physicians fail to consider these factors when treating heart disease, poor circulation, digestive troubles and chronic constipation.

Calcium and D and B complex deficiencies predispose growing children to spinal curvature, pronated feet (weak ankles), fatigue posture.

Studies of children of both the poor and well-to-do in England over a period of many years led to the conclusion that the time of greatest need for calcium and vitamin D is from the age of 8 to the age of 18 years. In this country few children receive any extra vitamin D in this period of life.

How to correct these nutritional deficiencies is described in detail in these pamphlets:

For growing children "V-I-T-E Spells Youth" (ten cents). For adults who have gone stale "The Seven Keys to Vite" (25 cents). For mature adults who are aging too fast "Young Folks and Old Folks" (free). Ask for the pamphlet you want in writing and inclose a stamped self addressed envelope. I am downright mean about paying the freight on anything readers ask for.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

No Objection

Is there any objection to a woman aged 47, with leakage of the heart, having ethylene gas for removal of ten teeth?

(Mrs. J. M. M.)

Answer—Only her own physician can give an answer to that. Ordinarily I advise against extraction of more than two or three teeth at a time—and I always advise against sacrifice of all teeth when only a few teeth are damaged beyond repair.

Ear Drops

Your drops for chronic running ear cured our son's ear trouble. Now we hope you have some remedy for asthma, from which he has suffered since he was four years old—he is now nine. He has hard attacks four or five times a year.

(Mrs. C. L. W.)

Answer—Send stamped self addressed envelope and ask in writing for pamphlet on Asthma. Do not use a clipping—ask for what you want. I don't take time out to read clippings.

Avocado Easy to Digest

Please inform me whether avocado is hard to digest. I like them and eat two large ones a week. They seem to agree with me, but as my stomach is weak people tell me they are too hard to digest.

(L. C. F.)

Answer—Whether your stomach is "weak" or not, any food you like is easy to digest. Better try to forget the old time notions about this and that being easily digestible or difficult to digest.

Whitehall Notebook

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, July 11 — (CP)—Hugh Dalton, robust, loud-voiced Chancellor of the Exchequer, literally stole the show from other cabinet ministers at the Labor National Convention at Bournemouth and earned himself more applause than any other although his subject in addressing the 1,100 delegates was the normally dull topic of finance.

Mr. Dalton, 59, is high in the councils of the party but hardly on a par with Foreign Secretary Bevin or Herbert Morrison, Lord President of the Council, who, with Prime Minister Attlee, are looked on as labor's top men. But the delegates having greeted Mr. Dalton's speech with shouts of approval—something they withheld from the Prime Minister — party stalwarts have a measure of his popularity after a year in office and two budgets.

It now is evident that if Mr. Attlee should unexpectedly leave his office Mr. Dalton would have to be considered among the strong contenders for the leadership.

The Chancellor is a son of the church — his father was Canon of the Royal Chapel at Windsor Castle — and he went to Eton. Almost every time this public school was mentioned at the Labor Conference some delegates protested that Eton men were out of touch with the times — and the diplomatic Mr. Dalton lifted his bald head and grinned cheerfully.

He was made Chancellor of the Exchequer after the Labor victory in election last July, and the story persists that he wanted to be foreign secretary while Mr. Bevin wanted just as intensely to be chancellor, which he said he regarded as a "quiet" job.

One more song: Rhys John Davies, Labor member of Parliament for Westhoughton said he lived in Manchester but was more Welsh than most. So when the Welsh delegation to the labor convention at Bournemouth went out to have its photograph taken he naturally went along — and led it in community singing.

The jovial, white-haired parliamentarian said Canada was just like another home to him and he will visit the Dominion and the United States on a lecture tour this autumn.

Canadians Stormed Ashore at Pachino Three Years Ago

By The Canadian Press

Three years ago Canadian forces operating as part of Britain's famous 8th army stormed ashore on the beaches at Pachino, Sicily, as the western allies drove the first wedge into Hitler's European fortress.

Landing in the wake of a mighty aerial and naval bombardment, British, Canadian and American troops waded from assault crafts onto the southern shore of the strategic Mediterranean island at dawn Saturday, July 10, 1943.

A Mediterranean gale which blew up the day before threatened for a time to force a delay in the operation — the biggest amphibious attack ever made up to that time. But allied commanders gambled on the gale subsiding when night came and their hopes were justified.

It was the first real action of the war for the men of the 1st Canadian division which had landed in Britain in December, 1939, and for 3 1-2 years had waited for its chance to tackle the enemy. In all, eight divisions went ashore — three British, one Canadian and four American — and airborne forces were dropped by parachute and landed by glider. Strong winds, however, disruped the air-born attack.

Only feeble resistance was put up by the Italian troops stationed in the Pachino beachhead area and the Canadian forces quickly struck inland.

The Canadian detachments included the 1st armored brigade and were under command of Lt.-Gen. (then Maj. Gen.) Guy Simmonds of Kingston, Ont., and Winnipeg. First ashore was the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment of Trenton, Belleville and Picton, Ont.

Lieut. George E. Wyatt, of Oklahoma City, Okla., one of four Americans who are being held by the Russians for illegal entry into the Soviet zone. The disappearance of the four led the provost marshal's office to an extensive search. Maj.-Gen. Frank E. Keating, U. S. military governor of Berlin, announced that the missing Americans were being detained by the Russians. Keating said he registered a formal protest.

Every Inch of Land Under Cultivation

Brantford, July 11 — (CP) — Every inch of land that can be worked is under cultivation in Germany and France as the people wage their battle for food, Morley F. Verity, vice-president of Massey-Harris Co. Ltd., said here Wednesday on his return from a tour of Europe.

Mr. Verity said the German people were "apathetic and seldom smile" under Allied occupation. Transportation however, was getting back to normal with the crack trains operating again in France and Germany. Food when it was to be had cost a great deal, he added, and quoted figures for black market goods such as butter, which in Berlin was $45 a pound.

MEMBERS ASK

He recalled how War Assets had sold Fairmiles, built originally at a cost of $140,000 each, for $3,000, and said $15,000 could have been obtained for some. Ten ships had been sold to the French government for $415,000 each but the Canadian government instead of handling the sale directly worked through a New York commission agent and paid a commission of $43,000 on each ship.

Tugs under construction when the British government decided they would not be needed were completed at a cost of $61,000 each. War Assets disposed of them at $20,000.

Against Repealing Provision

Mr. Ross said the fact that tax changes in the budget did not become effective until Jan. 1 would discourage production until that time. He criticized the government for repealing the provision under which a husband could claim married status even if his working wife was earning more than $660 a year. He felt the provision or something similar should have been extended to cover farmers' wives who contributed to much-needed food production.

He described the government's housing program as a "complete flop".

Mr. Bentley and Mr. Fair called for repeal of the decision to make co-operatives subject to taxation.

The co-operatives had been formed to assist and protect the people in the low-income brackets in a world of "grab" and "greed", said Mr. Bentley. "They taught the people how to save. The co-operatives never were formed to make profit, but only as a method of saving for their members. Patronage dividends should not be taxed as they were savings, not profits."

Mr. Fair said if the government persisted in its decision the co-operatives might set off a price-war in which they would make sure there was nothing left to tax. The co-operatives had grown out of the abuses of private enterprise and probably never would have come into being if private enterprise had done its job properly.

CANADIAN FLAG

That vote immediately raised reactions. Earlier in the day Prime Minister Mackenzie King urged a Liberal caucus to support the ensign; was told he could not expect the support of the majority of his Quebec Liberals if he persisted in having the Union Jack included in any final design.

Member Walks Out

In the committee, the vote spurred Wilfrid Lacroix (L—Montmorency) to charge that inclusion of the Union Jack had been a "foregone conclusion" and that "everything is being fixed up and organized against anyone favoring a distinctive flag."

Then he walked out.

L. R. Beaudoin (L—Vaudreuil-Soulanges) told the committee he was willing to accept the views of the majority. No other Quebec members supported him openly but no other Quebec members walked out with Mr. Lacroix.

Mr. Beaudoin swung the committee onto the line on which it finally adjourned. He wanted "some white" in the design and he wanted consideration of a statement that, in heraldry, a Union Jack 1-4 the size of the full ensign would denote "subservience."

Mr. Beaudoin's acceptance of the basic ensign design led chairman Senator Norman Lambert (L—Ontario) to thank him for "making us realize we can agree."

On the motion of John Hackett (PC—Stanstead) the two points the Quebec member made and any others of detail were referred back to the sub-committee.

Mr. King May Have To Leave for Paris Within Two Weeks

He said "a considerable number of matters" were discussed today.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Hammett wish to announce the engagement of their only daughter, Dorothy Patricia, to Thomas Pattison McCracken, son of Mr. and Mrs. John McCracken, of Montreal; the marriage to take place July 27th.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Rutherford, of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. A. Carlisle of Frankford, visited recently with their aunt Mrs. J. Weaver of this city.

Mr. Arthur Sweet, of this city, has just returned from a vacation trip after visiting friends in Toronto, Niagara Falls, Fort Erie and Port Colborne.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Holmes and daughters, Mary and Luella, of Detroit, Mich., are holidaying in Belleville with Mrs. Holmes' sister, Mrs. C. Balshaw and other relatives.

Miss Elizabeth Laughlin, Bridge St., E. has gone to New York City where she will visit friends and take a course at Columbia University.

Dr. P. T. Bowlby, Mrs. E. Adrian and Miss Eleanor Adrian, all of Tweed, have returned home after spending the past week with Mr. and Mrs. Percy Bowlby of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Sweet, baby Lena, and Mr. and Mrs. W. Carter, have left on a trip by car to visit friends in Toronto and Niagara Falls, Ont.

Mrs. S. G. Faulkner, Catherine Street, is leaving for the west today. She will stop at Kenora to visit Mr. and Mrs. J. Frank McKinney, Clearwater Bay, Lake of the Woods, and will then go to Edmonton where she will visit Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Faulkner, formerly of Belleville.

Miss Margaret Shepherd a bride elect of this month was honored recently with a miscellaneous shower at the home of Mrs. Gordon Barclay, when Mrs. F. G. Creeggan and Miss Doris Thrasher were co-hostesses. The making of a bride's book formed the evening's entertainment. Many lovely gifts were presented to the bride-to-be in a prettily decorated basket for which she thanked her friends.

WEDDINGS

BLAKELY—CORR

The Tabernacle United Church parsonage was the scene of a quiet but pretty wedding on Friday, June 28, when Anna Corr, daughter of Mrs. E. Corr and the late Mr. Corr became the bride of Clarence Blakely, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Blakely. The Rev. J. W. Houston officiated.

The bride was lovely in a street length dress of white silk jersey with a corsage of red roses. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. J. Finkle, who wore a dress of blue silk jersey with a corsage of pink roses.

The groomsman was Mr. James Finkle.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the groom's brother, Mr. Grant Blakely and Mrs. Blakely. Later the bride and groom left on a motor trip to New York the bride wearing a brown suit with gold accessories. The young couple will take up residence in Belleville.

WALSH—MEAGHER

Standards of delphinium and regal lilies formed an effective setting in St. Chalres Borromeo Church, Read, for the marriage of Mildred Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Meagher to Joseph, son of Mr. and Mrs. James V. Walsh, Marysville, at ten o'clock, Wednesday morning, July tenth. Reverend R. J. Coyle celebrated the nuptial mass. Miss Mary V. Walsh was at the console of the organ and the vocalists were Mr. Michael Walsh and Mr. Alan Meagher.

The bride given in marriage by her father wore a beautiful gown of blush-ivory satin with molded basque and long sleeves finished in lily points. The full skirt with princess panel front fell in a soft sweep. Satin cording accentuated the lowered waistline giving a hoop effect. Her fingertip veil of blush tulle hung from a coronet of pearls and her arm bouquet was of Johanna Hill roses and bouvardia. She was attended by two of her sisters, Miss Dorothy Meagher, maid of honor, wore gown of pale pink chiffon and lace over taffeta. A matching shoulder veil and a bouquet of pink Delight roses and bouvardia completed the costume. Miss Jean Meagher was junior bridesmaid in a youthful gown of ice-blue taffeta with shirred bodice, a bouffant skirt, matching mitts and a shoulder veil. She carried a nosegay of roses, baby's breath and forget-me-nots.

Mr. James Walsh, brother of the groom was best man and Mr. Harold Meagher acted as usher.

Following the ceremony the wedding dinner was served at the home of the bride's parents. The guests were received by the bride's mother, attired in a costume of dove grey with black accessories and a corsage of Talisman roses. The groom's mother assisted, wearing an ensemble of French blue with contrasting accessories and a corsage of red roses.

Out-of-town guests were present from Ottawa, Brockville, Kingston, Belleville, London and Windsor.

MARBRY—DOUCET

St. Michael's Church was the setting for the wedding on July 4, at 3 p.m. of Marjorie Marion, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Adelard Doucet, and Raymond Murray Marbry, Melville, Sask., son of Mrs. G. Marbry and the late Mr. Marbry. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father A. L. O'Donnell.

The bride was lovely in pale blue silk jersey with a hat fashioned of white roses centred with an American Beauty rose. She carried a nosegay of blue batchelor's buttons, white sweetpeas, and red roses.

Maid of honor was Miss Evelina Doucet, sister of the bride dressed in oyster grey silk jersey with orchid accessories with a corsage of mauve sweet peas and Talisman roses.

Mr. Don Barrett was groomsman.

Following the ceremony, a buffet luncheon was served at the home of the bride. The table, covered with a lace cloth was centred with the three tiered wedding cake banked with Sweetheart roses and maiden hair fern. Tall white candles stood at each corner of the cake. Bouquets of snapdragons, gladioli, and roses decorated the house. Receiving with the bridal party were the bride's mother, wearing a pale blue crepe dress with black accessories, and the groom's mother, wearing a navy blue ensemble.

They will take up residence in Saskatoon, Sask.

HADLEY—HARRIS

On Saturday, July 6 at 7 p.m., Sylvia Irene Harris, daughter of Mrs. Oliver Plane, Belleville, and John Herbert Hadley, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Hadley, Toronto, were joined in marriage by the Rev. J. G. Sparling, in Christ Church. Wedding music was played by Mr. Kaye Martin.

Given in marriage by Mr. Oliver Plane, the bride wore a street length dress of pale blue with white accessories and a corsage of pink baby roses. She was attended by Miss Eileen Langridge, who wore pink with white accessories and a corsage of cream roses.

Mr. Eugene Hadley was his brother's groomsman.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the bride's home for about fifty guests. The bride's mother, assisted by the groom's mother received with the bridal party, both wearing printed silk jersey and corsages of sweet peas. The home was decorated with bouquets of summer flowers. Pouring tea were Mrs. J. Huff and Mrs. Harry Quinsey. Out-of-town guests present at the wedding were from Toronto, Ajax, St. Catharines, Roslin and Shannonville. The following day the young couple left for Toronto where they will reside.

Women's Activities

ST. PAUL'S W.A.

Stirling — The July meeting of St. Paul's W.A. was held at the summer cottage of Mrs. Nora Wescott and Mrs. Nina Morton, Oak Lake, on Tuesday afternoon last with a large number of ladies present. The President, Mrs. Gordon Bailey, presided over the business portion of the meeting.

The secretary read the minutes of the last meeting as well as several acknowledgments of cards and letters received during the month of June. The secretary reported eleven cards sent during the past month.

The visiting committee, Mrs. A. Bradburn and Mrs. E. Summerville, reported thirteen calls made during June.

The Treasurer, Mrs. J. B. Thompson, presented a complete financial report.

Mrs. W. Preston, convener of the Friendly Workers Group, gave an interesting and up to date report of their work. This group gave a further donation of $10.00 to the W.A.

During the business portion of the meeting, a motion was carried appointing Mrs. Walter Elliott and Mrs. Clifford Hatton to be in charge of the display at the Fall Fair.

The program was supervised by Mrs. V. Richardson. The scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Oliver Stapley, followed by comments with regard to the scripture reading by Mrs. J. B. Thompson. Mrs. H. C. Martin led in prayer.

The topic for the afternoon was "Famous Canadians" which included authors, poets, musicians, artists and scentists.

Mrs. P. S. Broadhurst, B.A., was outstanding in her review of Canadians who had become famous with their literary efforts. She dealt particularly with the following: Miss Isabella Crawford; George Frederick Cameron; Chas. G. D. Roberts; Archibald Lampman; Duncan Campbell Scott; Bliss Carman; Pauline Johnson; William Henry Drummond; Archdeacon Frederick George Scott; Tom MacInnes; Marjorie Pickthall; Robert W. Service; E. J. Pratt; Stephen Leacock; Sir Gilbert Parker; Ralph Connor; N. A. Cody; L. M. Montgomery; Nellie McClung and Sir William Mulock. Mrs. Broadhurst also spoke with the highest regard of a few war correspondents: Ross Munro; Matthew Halton; Frederick Griffin and Lionel Shapiro.

Mrs. Volney Richardson then gave a very interesting paper on Musicians and Artists dwelling on a few of the well known such as Edward Johnson and Sir Ernest MacMillan as outstanding musicians and C. W. Jefferys; Edmund Wyly Grier and J. E. H. MacDonald well known artists.

A splendid paper on the life of Sir Edward Banting, prepared by Mrs. R. B. Duffin, was read by Mrs. J. L. Good owing to the absence of Mrs. Duffin.

During the social hour, Mrs. Harold Wells staged a very interesting contest. Dainty refreshments were served by the committee in charge and a vote of thanks was tendered by Mrs. C. Tucker to the joint hostess, program and lunch committees.

FOXBORO C.G.I.T.

Foxboro — The third meeting of the C.G.I.T. was held at the Flat Rock on Monday with fourteen members present.

The leader Marjorie Tummon served hamburgers cooked over an open fire after the girls had enjoyed wading.

The president, Helen Bartlette then took charge of the meeting which opened with the firelighting ceremony while seated around the camp fire.

During the business period more plans were made for attending C.G.I.T. camp at Moira Lake in August. It was decided to hold a sewing meeting in the S. S. rooms on the evening of July 15th each girl to bring white thread and needle while the leader would bring material. The worship service opened with a hymn followed by the scripture lesson by Helen Bartlette and prayer by Freida Ash.

ST. PETERS W.M.S.

Madoc — The July meeting of St. Peters W.M.S. was held in the primary class room of the church with an attendance of 18

Mrs. W. Miller was in charge of the meeting assisted by Mrs. Spencer who took the devotional exercises. Miss Mackintosh read the minutes and correspondence and during the business period it was decided to take a collection for the expense fund instead of the usual home cooking sale. The lesson was read by Mrs. Armstrong. Prayer being offered by Mrs. D. Blakely. Mrs. Reid gave a very splendid account of the life of Albert Scheveitzer and Mrs. Cecil Wood read a paper on the life and work of Miss Nina Soda.

A pleasing feature of the meeting was the presentation of tow Honorary Life Memberships to Mrs. William Miller and Mrs. Chas. Spencer by a Home Helper, Mrs. Harding of Coe Hill. A vote of thanks and appreciation was voiced by the members to Mrs. Reid and Mrs. Wood for their help in making the meeting so very interesting. The meeting concluded with a hymn and closing prayer by Mrs. McCaffrey. Afternoon tea was served by Mrs. Miller and Mrs. Spencer.

CANNIFTON W.M.S.

The monthly meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society was held at the home of Mrs. Mills on Thursday, July 4th, with the president in the chair and 22 members present.

The current events, a feature of each month's program, were mostly on world peace.

The worship service was taken by Mrs. Williams assisted by Mrs. Mills.

Mrs. Putman and Mrs. Benedict were in charge of the Temperance program assisted by Mrs. R. Pound, Mrs. G. Brenton and Mrs. Fnurmidge. Their subject was "Christian Citizenship and Social Drinking."

Mrs. Armstrong was the guest speaker. She gave a very clear pictuer of the wrongs of drinking socially or otherwise. Her address was much enjoyed by the members and a very spirited discussion was carried on by all.

Mrs. Trumpour also gave short talks.

A vote of thanks was given Mrs. Mills for the use of her home.

COLLEGE HILL WOMEN'S GROUP

College Hill Women's Group held its July meeting in the rooms of the little Sunday School on S. Park Street with the president, Mrs. G. Rose, in charge. Two boxes of food were packed and sent to a needy family in France, which had been bombed out. A baby's complete layette was sent overseas through the Salvation Army to deserving mothers.

A kitchen and pantry shower was held for Mrs. Howard, who had the misfortune to lose her home and its contents in a recent fire. All business was brought up-to-date and it was decided to hold the August meeting in the same place. The meeting was brought to a close after which three of the members served dainty refreshments.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

am 17 year old, and very ken-hearted. I went steady h a fellow for three months. erything was going fine until day his ex-girl friend came k to town to live. Immediate- he broke off with me to go k with this girl.

e are still good friends and e a lot of fun together. I ld like to know how to get back from this other girl, ause he still says he likes but does not seem to do anyg about it. Should I act nice him, or "play hard to get," n though I would like to go k with him tomorrow?

stead of adopting an "either policy, "Green Eyes," that either "acting nice" to him or ying hard to get," I would gest combining a little of h in your campaign. That is, nice to him in a pleasant, pinionable but not too eager way when the opportunity presents, but be a little hard to get, too, by having enough other interests so that you are sometimes "so sorry but all tied up" when he asks you to go out.

Don't let him get the idea for a minute that you're just sitting around waiting for him to call. Let him understand that you have plenty of other things to do, and places to go, besides being with him. And don't try to bluff this, either. Really have them. But don't give him the idea either — by acting upstage or giving him the cold shoulder — that you're angry or upset over the situation.

Just be yourself when you see him — and when you do too, It is much the best and most effective plan.

Refreshments For Early Morning Wedding Breakfast

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We are planning a small reception after my sister's wedding. She will be married at nine o'clock mass in the morning. What would be appropriate to serve at a reception set for 9.30 to 11 a. m.

A Constant Reader

So early in the day, things should be kept pretty simple. With everything to be over by eleven o'clock, nobody will be expecting a more or less substantial wedding breakfast.

It will be quite sufficient to serve dainty sandwiches, little cakes and cookies, and a choice of iced punch or hot coffee, Have a variety of relishes, such as celery hearts, olives and carrot sticks to accompany the sandwiches, and small dishes of peppermints and other candies to top off the little repast. A wedding cake for the bride to cut is taken for granted, and it will be the centre of interest on the table.

Of course we're all trying to save bread and flour, but is seems fair to make allowance for a wedding, So, this once, have a variety of little sandwiches, using choppedchicken and celery moistened with salad dressing; sliced or chopped ham, with a touch of mustardy relish; assorted cheese spreads; cucumber; sliced paper-thin, and the like. Tiny baking powder biscuits, with grated cheese mixed in before baking, are tasty served hot.

She Wants to Know if She Should Wait

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Not long ago the boy I have been going with since last September came home on liberty after being gone for two months. He had a five-day leave, and during that time he only took me out twice. After that I didn't see him, and I didn't hear from him for three weeks. Now he write regularily, and says he still loves me and asks me to wait for him. I'd like to know what to do.

Confused

I think you are the only one who can answer your own question satisfactorily. For how can anyone else tell how much you care for this boy, or whether or not he is worth waiting for? You don't give even a clue on either of these points, which I should think would be the determining factors in any decision, if you really have to make a decision right now, which I doubt.

If you feel that this boy is a worth-while person, and if he means a great deal to you, then I should think you would naturally want to wait and see if he, in turn, really cares for you. But maybe you don't care that much for him, and maybe you feel that he is not very dependable in his feelings, and so you might be wasting your time in taking him seriously. Only you can tell about this.

Don't you think, in any event, that you expect quite a lot of him? When a boy has only five days leave, he's got to crowd a lot in a short time, and it seems to me he did pretty well by you in taking you out twice. Why don't you give him a chance instead of trying to pin him down? He'll like you much better if you're not too possessive.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Your skin is a health barometer

It is well for a woman to keep herself informed concerning the effect of faulty health habits on her sacred complexion. If the skin is sallow, dingy or over-pale, there is a physical reason for it. Beauty aids may make it more pleasing, but the wise thing to do is to seek the cause. We are getting a better understanding of basic beauty. We know that health and vitality are the first requirements of the skin is to be of fine texture and good coloring, the hair is to be abundant and lustrous, the figure is to retain the youthful outline.

Nutrition, of course is of first importance. The plump woman who goes on a goofy diet, subsisting on nothing at all for weeks at a time, courts wrinkles and sagging tissues. She gets them just as fast as she gets rid of excess pounds. These semi-starvation sessions cause the dissolution of the tissue cells of the face. The skin covering becomes too large for the underlying cushions, so it falls into accordion pleats. Once that happens there is no other cure than plastic surgery, which is expensive, and almost impossible these days, with so many surgeons still in the service.

Reducing is necessary for health if one is overweight. But the slimming must progress slowly. Calories must not be cut down to the extent that there is loss of energy.

The finicky eater nearly always has a pasty complexion. By limiting the diet to certain foods, she does not get the required vitamins and mineral salts. There are women — men, too — who loathe the vegetables, seldom eat them. This state of affairs often comes because of poor cooking in the home. The vegetables are not properly seasoned. All of them can be made palatable if one knows the tricks. Poor cooking is also the reason why so manf babies refuse certain foods. They have no appeal.

One needs meat, poultry, sea food, vegetables of all kinds—especially green salads — eggs, cheese, cereals, fruits, and milk. The more varied the diet, the more delicate and attractive the skin is likely to be. Food rich in fats will make the complexion oily. Even a hard-working man needs only a small amount of fat a day. Look at the girls who can't get enough pastries. Think of the fat they consume in pies, rich cookies and cakes. Skins oily; figures pudgy.

If one does not drink plenty of water every day, the skin will go dry. The surface will be rough and a mild case of desquamation will be going on all the time. Cold cream cannot compensate for skin-thirstiness.

An excess of chocolate may be the direct cause of blackheads and pimples. An excess of chocolate also is a strain on a sensitive gall bladder and, as a result the complexion may take on a sallow cast.

The plump dieter courts wrinkles and sagging tissues

Fashion Flashes

Not now, but later, when the autumn winds blow, , tie-on hat should be mighty good. Lilly Dache does a tied-on toque, a half-hat in brown draped jersey that ties on over the ears and around the throat with black ribbon. Two aigrettes are placed at the side over the ear.

Splendor characterizes some of the blouses prepared for fall. White satin, made simply, with front closing and shirtwaist collar, has a hand-painted floral spray design in black and yellow, the flower centres bright with tiny rhinestones. Full length, big sleeves are plain.

It's raining! So on go good-looking tops such as a short loose jacket, very flared in back, and a matching wrap-around skirt. Made of water-repellent fabric, in white, pastels and dark colors.

It seems that mink coats have become so commonplace that a mink has to be ultra special to attract attention. A next-season model in mink sports magnificent leg-o'-mutton sleeves that taper to a fitted wrist, with the skins worked in spiral fashion to give a flowing look. Fan-shaped mosaics form a yoke back and front and make for very soft shoulders.

Honors go to white this summer. An especially attractive suit is of raw silk, in white, made with belt and deep folded pleats on either side of the back. It has a vest of diagonally striped navy and white shantung, which also is used for matching gloves.

One way to attract attention with a beach costume is to be partly covered up. At smart resorts, if the bare, long-legged look is stressed, then it is likely that the shoulders are covered, up, and that the sleeves are long and the neckline high. We noticed that a girl with a covered-up midriff section was getting all the attention.

Into the big splash goes nylon, made up into colorful little swim suits. Nylon suits in delightful colors, made up into brief bras and shorts, both with perky side bows, are big enough at the resorts.

Just right for travelling is a simple dress and jacket, both of mixed silk rayon shantung. The dresses is black, made with high, round neck and short sleeves. The jacket, fastening with one button at the waist, is beige.

Simply lovely dinner dresses are on view these fine evenings. One model has a full, ankle-length skirt of black taffeta that ends in a high midriff band above which is a short-sleeved, off-shoulder bodice of black lace on palest flesh chiffon.

Stark and simple are always effective when used with fine materials. Pure silk in a rich beige shade is used for a lovely daytime frock made with simple, high-necked bodice surmounted by a club collar. Full skirt is held at the waist by a broad leather belt. Push-up sleeves are full.

It's good to welcome back favorite fabrics. A new housecoat is fashioned of satin-striped taffeta in a lovely bluish lavender shade. Simply made, on double-breasted lines, with big pockets.

It seems that the little white coat tops this year. For dress-up afternoons and evenings, we like a little coat of white, ottoman bengaline. It has a crisply flared back and generous push-up sleeves.

IF BABY IS CROSS FIND OUT WHY

HEALTHY BABIES are not cross. Your baby should not be cross. If he is, then something in his little system is "out of order." Probably Baby's Own Tablets can promptly "put it right." Mrs. H——, of Fenelon Falls, had the experience. She writes: "My little girl was irritable, feverish and sometimes sick at her stomach—what a relief it was, after giving her Baby's Own Tablets, to see how much better she was."

Sweet-tasting—easily crushed to a powder, if desired. No "sleepy" stuff—no dulling effect. Promptly effective in simple fevers, constipation, teething troubles, upset stomach and other minor ills.

Never be without a full box of Baby's Own Tablets. Sickness so often strikes in the night. 25 cents. Money back if you are not satisfied.

With Canada's Naturalists

Day lilies, now in the spotlight of the gardening world because of the amazing range of color they present, have a story of interest to naturalists. Modern day lily hubrids are developments from wild species thriving in Tibet, Korea and Mongolia—regions with hot summers and frigid winters. Because of this hardy native habitat they flourish equally well in Alaska or the Canadian prairie provinces, besides areas with a more moderate range of temperature.

Although the lilies are ancient flowers, mentioned from the earliest known writings of China to the classic literature of Rome and Greece, it is only within the last 20 years that their colors have been changed by scientific hybridization from the yellow and orange hues of centuries, to the reds, maroons, shades of gold and bronze, salmon, pink, and a wide variety of combined shades in the same flowers now obtainable.

It is this modern color-creation that has suddenly brought the day lily from comparative obscurity to garden popularity that is sweeping Canada and the United States.

Oddly enough, the persistent efforts of skilled hybridizers have so far failed to produce a white day lily. A pale yellow is the nearest yet attained to this object.

Once planted, day lilies require a lengthy period to become well established—usually an entire summer—but they have been known to flourish for a century thereafter, and should be ideal flowers for naturalizing.

Curious to discover what a fox was carrying in its mouth as the animal trotted over a stretch of sandy land, a Canadian motorist gave chase. Driving into rougher areas, it was found necessary to slow down, and eventually stop the car. Both the slower pace and the halt were immediately imitated by the weary fox.

When the car was started again, the fox dropped whatever it was carrying and hurried into hiding. After a careful search over the sand, the big mouthful was located—two chipmunks and a meadow mouse. Safety first! That lunch for the family could be retrieved later.

Most water birds build their nests on land, but the pie-billed grebe is an exception. This bird builds a nest of water plants. When built in shallow water, the most is built up from the pond bottom. It is often constructed on the water surface, however, a tiny floating island. This is why young greves are expert swimmers, but often walk in a ludicrous way.

In ancient times there was a widespread belief that dead oxen genarated honeybees. This fable was founded on the eggs of a fly resembling the bee, were often found in bovine remains. Eristalis tenax is the high-brow label of the fly, and its eggs producing a curious rat-tailed maggot, are often deposited in dead animals.

Guillotine Disappears, One Has to be Built

British Rhine Army Headquarters, Germany, July 10—(Reuters)—Execution of Nazi war criminals in the French zone of Germany is being temporarily held up because a German guillotine belonging to the province of Baden, has mysteriously disappeared. French authorities sent an officer into the British zone to look for another but he found that all were fixtures, so he had to order a German firm in the British zone to make one. A French war crimes official said guillotines could not be obtained from France as they were not the property of the state but of a private family.

LANDLORD LIKES CHILDREN

Lewiston, Idaho, July 10—(AP)—At least one landlord likes children. Norman McLeod inserted this ad in the Lewiston Tribune:

"Modern house, four bedrooms. Will rent to family with minimum three children, $50 month. Four children, $45. Five children, $40." Mr. and Mrs. Howard Harwick—and their four children—grabbed the offer. Said landlord McLeod: "Reducing the rent $5 per child should at least pay for the milk."

Police Broadcasts Aid to Holidayers

Southsea, England (CP) — Warnings of hidden barbed wire below the waterline, broken glass and other dangers on the beaches were broadcast to holiday-makers from a mobile police station set up on the seafront.

The station, first to be established at a coastal resort, is equipped with two-way wireless and linked with all Portsmouth city police stations and mobile cars. A microphone connects with loudspeakers strung out over two miles of seafront. Already scores of lost children have been traced through the station.

Indians Rewarded For War Gallantry

New Delhi, India (CP)—Many provinces in India have devised comprehensive schemes to reward those of their inhabitants who were decorated for gallantry during the Second Great War. These rewards range from $3,330 for the Victoria Cross to $1,000 for the Military Medal. In some cases land will be given in lieu of money.

Indians won 31 V.C.s during the Second Great War. In all, 4,028 awards for gallantry were made.

Will Move Troops Into Canal Zone

Cairo, July 11 — (AP) — The first stage of the British evacuation of Egypt provides for removal of all troops from cities to the Suez Canal zone within eight months, a reliable informant said Tuesday night.

Troops already are leaving the cities, particularly Alexandria and Cairo.

The informant emphasized Gt. Britain was finding it necessary to install extensive communications before troops should be shifted in large numbers.

Transfers of all troops into the Canal Zone would be the first step in fulfilling the British promise to quit all Egypt. From the canal the troops presumably would be moved into British bases in Palestine, Iraq, or other areas in the Middle East.

Single-Seater Car For Disabled Folk

London, July 11 — (Reuters)—Designed primarily for disabled people, the new all-British "Larmar" car was announced to the public here. The "Larmar" is a small single-seated vehicle and according to one of the designers, "possesses several new characteristics, including controls which can be varied to suit the individual requirements of a disabled person — the clutch and brake, for instance, can be operated either by hand or foot, and the gear lever can be fitted either on the left or right hand side."

Little Benny's Note Book

My cousin Artie stayed at my house all night, and after supper we were sitting on the living room floor playing with my game of Hopping the Atlantic, and ma said to pop, My William, isn't it a strange relief to hear those boys playing so quietly?

It's a relief not to hear them, pop said, and ma said, That's what I meant. They're usually quarreling and arguing at the top of their voices even when to all intents and purposes they're injoying themselves to the utmost, and now and behold, here they are playing like a cupple of frendly doves without uttering a single werd of any caracter, she said.

Well G, ma, do you want to know why? I said. We're mad at each other, that's why we're playing without speeking, I said, and pop said, Yee gods, we might of known there was some devilish motive behind their angelic behavior. Now I want you boys to shake hands and make up, and let noise be comparatively unconfined, he said.

Well if Artie speeks ferst I'll speek back, it was his fault, I said, and Artie said, Like heck it was, Uncle Will, Benny started it, so it's his place to speek ferst.

For Peet sake the whole werld is still at each other's throat because it's always somebody else's fault and the other fellow that started it, pop said. Horse blanket to blazes, everybody's always wrong to some extent, so why cant you both start speeking together? he said.

Sounding like a swell idea on account of us both getting tired of being so peacefill; and I said, Okay, but we both ought to say the same thing, to make it fair.

The result being I wrote down what to say, being, You big stiff, let's make up, and we both yelled it at the same time all our might. Proving there's probably no such thing as perfect peace.

Two Tame Crows Becoming Famous

Alphonse Clemens of Deloro has a pair of tame crows, which are becoming famous. He has cared for them since they were fledglings. They are much attached to him and will light on his arms or shoulders as he goes up and down the street. They make up with the villagers in general and open their beaks readily for food. If Mr. Clemens is out for a walk and they are out of sight, all he has to do is call them and they appear.

NATION'S HISTORY WELL RECORDEDIN PUBLIC ARCHIVES

Huge Collection of Canadiana is Housed in Modern Fireproof Building in Ottawa

Ottawa (CP)—If in doubt about any matter respecting Canada's history, there is one place where you can be assured of getting a satisfactory answer — the Public Archives.

"We answer a great variety of questions," said Dr. L. Brault, Director of the Research and Information section of the Public Archives. "They range from the influence of Voltaire's writings on Canada to a comparison of the cost of transportation on the Ottawa and St. Lawrence rivers in 1800. We even act as genealogists to help people trace their antecedents."

Contrary to the popular conception of a depository for a nation's records and historical documents, the Public Archives building is not a musty, cobwebby place, with creaky floors and dim corridors; it is a bright and modern fire-proof structure.

Probably the most visited section of the building is the museum. Open to the public every day, here are exhibited such diversified examples of Canadians as the baby boots of General Wolfe, an autographed copy of Col. John McCrae's immortal poem "In Flanders' Fields," a large scale model of Ottawa as it will look when City Planner Grover completes its beautification, and bullets dug up on the battle-field of the Plains of Abraham.

One of the museum's feature attractions was the $20,000 dress worn by Queen Elizabeth on Their Majesties' Canadian tour in 1939. Last April it was transferred to the Royal Ontario Museum in Toronto. But the Archives' museum is not completely lacking in Royal apparel; they still have a costume worn by Queen Victoria.

Interesting Addition

One of the latest additions to the museum is the plan of the hiding place of the Coronation Stone, which was sent by the Dean of Westminster to Prime Minister King for safekeeping in the early months of the war.

But the real record of Canada's history is contained in the library, manuscript and map rooms of the Public Archives. This is the Mecca for both the professional and amateur student of Canadian history. To help them in their research, the information section provides them with a superb index system containing 2,250,000 cards.

The 50,00-volume library deals with every phase of Canadian, French, English and American history. The books, with handsome bindings, are bound in the Archives' own bindery. The manuscript room contains innumerable manuscripts, each sheet handwritten. Here can be found the original correspodence of the governors and intendants of the early French regime with their superiors in France. The map room has a sample of the work of every cartographer who ever practised his art in Canada. Particularly interesting is a copy of what is presumed to be the first map ever made.

A reading room, open night and day, is another facility which the Public Archives offers. There is also a photostatic room where copies of reasonable requests may be obtained free of charge.

Exhibiting modern Canadian cultural achievements is another service performed by the Public Archives. At a recent exhibition of French Canadian authors living in Ottawa, 6,000 people came in one week to see the 219 books on display.

On the base of a statue outside the building to Arthur G. Doughty, former Dominion Archivist, is this inscription taken from one of his works: "Of all national assets, archives are the most precious; they are the gift of one generation to another and the extent of our care of them marks the extent of our civilization."

KISS YOUR TIRED FEELING GOODBYE!

Popless Many Suffer Low Blood Count—And Don't Know It.

The baffling thing about low blood count is that you can weigh about as much as you ever did—even look healthy and strong, yet—you can feel as if you had lead in your legs, dopey, tired and popless.

Low blood count means you haven't got enough red blood corpuscles. It is their vital job to carry life-giving oxygen from your lungs throughout your body. And just as it takes oxygen to explode gasoline in your car and make the power to turn the wheels, so you must have plenty of oxygen to explode the energy in your body and give you going power.

Get Dr. Williams Pink Pills today. They are world-noted for the help they give in increasing the number and strength of red corpuscles. Then with your blood count up, you'll feel like bounding up the stairs as if you were floating on air. Ask your druggist for Dr. Williams Pink Pills today.

Portions of Corneas Of Eyes of Dead Man Are Transplanted

Baltimore, July 11 — (AP) — Portions of the corneas of two eyes bequeathed by a man who died at Shreveport, La., were transplanted to the eyes of three patients at Johns Hopkins Hospital here Tuesday, the hospital announced. The particles arrived by plane from New York after being processed for transplantation at the Eye Bank for Sight Restoration, Inc. They were flown to New York in sealed metal containers upon the death of the donor, who made the bequest when he learned he was about to die. His name was not disclosed.

ENIGMATIC MODEL

The model for Leonardo da Vinci's "Mona Lisa" is said to have been Isabella d'Este, the marchioness of Mantua.

Canada on Canvas Is Artist's Task

Regina (CP)—Franklin M. Arbuckle of Montreal, well-known Canadian artist and member of the Royal Canadian Academy, has the job of putting down on canvas nine scenes typical of each of Canada's provinces.

Saskatchewan has him stumped.

The Ontario scene he is to do for the series of magazine covers is set in his mind. During an interview here he sketched out on a napkin a grain boat being loaded from one of the huge elevators at Port Arthur, Ont., with the rugged northern Ontario landscape in the background.

A Winnipeg policeman standing at the corner of Portage and Main will be in the foreground of the typical Manitoba scene.

Alberta, British Columbia and Yellowknife which he will visit later are expected to yield a typical scene.

But here in Saskatchewan it is a hard choice between the wheat fields, the grain elevators and the irrigation dugouts.

Someone suggested a scene showing a farmer and his family standing outside their home watching a long-sought rain sweeping across the fields. Mr. Arbuckle agreed that it was typical but warned that people in Ontario would say that this confirms what they had claimed all along—that out west the people didn't know when to come in out of the rain.

Polmanter and Mansfield Win Main, Semi-final Bouts By TKO's in Hume Arena Card

Some Questionable Decisions Given in Other Bouts and Card as Whole Not as Good as Previous Ones

A badly cut left eye to Goulding stopped what was proving to be the best bout on the card at Hume Arena Wednesday night when George Polmanter of Belleville was awarded a TKO over Oshawa's Bill Goulding at the end of the second round of their scheduled five round main "go" The bout was a dandy up until that time but it would have been very foolish to let the bout go any further under the circumstances.

The first round opened with lots of action and both boys showing that they really meant business. Several times during the round, the boys stood toe-to-toe and really let the leather fly. Polmanter had the better of the infighting and earned a slight edge on the round.

Wins Via TKO

Belleville's Ron Mansfield who was awarded a TKO over "Al" Smith of Oshawa in the second round of the semi-final "go" at the Hume Arena Wednesday night. Mansfield was on top all the way and is one of the most improved boxers in Belleville.

Decided to Stop It

At the end of the round, referee Vic Morris took a look at the injured peeper and decided to put a stop to it. Incidentally, the Oshawa manager, Murray Schwartz, was in full accord as he too thought it wouldn't be wise for his fighter to continue.

Polmanter looked good Wednesday night and seemed to be in very good condition.

Ron Mansfield of Belleville was awarded a TKO over "A" Smith of Oshawa at the 1.10 mark of the second round of a scheduled four-rounder when Smith quit cold. The bout opened at a furious pace with Mansfield going right after Smith. Only once during the first round did Smith show any steam. Midway through the round, he rocked Mansfield with a hard right to the jaw but that's where he got off. Mansfield recovered quickly and assumed the lead once again for the rest of the round.

The second round was Mansfield's all the way. From the bell, the local boy went after Smith until finally at the 1.10 mark, in desperation and disgust, Smith turned around and walked to his corner to get away from the lacing the Belleville battler was administering. Mansfield was at his best last night. He has come a long way since the start of the season and deserves a lot of credit.

Awarded TKO

Another badly cut eye took its toll in one of the preliminaries as Belleville's Ross Soules was awarded a TKO over Harry Goulding of Oshawa at the end of the first round. The first and only round was good with both lads mixing it up and showing a willingness to fight.

Early in the round however, Goulding received the cut over his left eye and, once again, it would have been foolish to let him continue. The bout marked Ross Soules' first local appearance in the ring this season and he showed up to good advantage.

Fred Harding, the classy Oshawa youngster, punched his way to a clean cut decision over Pete Calbury of Belleville over the three-round distance. It was a very good bout but Harding had just a bit too much class for the local belter.

He built up a lead in the opening round when Calbury seemed slow in getting started. In the second round however, Calbury opened up and threw enough punches to lick an ordinary fighter but the clever Oshawa battler caught most of them on his gloves.

The third round was the best as both boys livened it up but Harding's experience and smoothness earned him the nod.

Low Blow Cost Fight

A low blow cost Belleville's "Joe" Wilson his three round affair with Grant MacIntyre of Oshawa. Wilson caught MacIntyre with an accidental low left just at the bell at the end of the second round and referee Vic Morris exercised his right to award MacIntyre the bout.

It was a good "go" as far as it went. The opening round was packed with action with Wilson waiting for an opportunity to land a haymaker and so MacIntyre did most of the leading.

MacIntyre hit the deck for an "eight" count early in the second round but came back to put up a good fight until the foul was committed.

Art Duby and "Baldy" Young fought to a three round draw in a bout that was packed with action. It was a real slugfest with Young putting on a real show in his first local appearance. The first round was pretty well "toe-to-toe" throughout and had the crowd on its feet.

Young tired in the second round but was game as they come, fighting all the way. The final round saw him even more tired but at the final bell, they were slugging it out from close quarters.

The crowd thought that Duby should have been given the nod but the judges called it a draw and that's that.

In the curtain-raiser, Belleville's Cecil Anderson dropped Don Wannamaker of Trenton at 1.17 of the second round. Anderson was on top all the way, taking advantage of his longer reach to beat the Trenton youngster to the punch every time.

A Comedy Bout

The comedy bout of the night was provided by Bill Hurst of Belleville and Oshawa's "Bud" Henry. It was simply a case of inexperience versus a very ordinary fighter. The bout had all the semblance of a street brawl and no holds were barred. Hurst displayed more trick wrestling holds than Whipper Billy Watson at his best.

The local boy deserves credit. It was his first fight and he was entered as a substitute for Trenton's "Soup" Whitney. He was game all the way and appeared over-anxious.

This bout was the poorest on the card and it didn't help matters a bit, when the judges gave Hurst the decision. The fans thought there must have been a mistake. The worst it should have been for the Oshawa boy was a draw and, even then, the decision would have been doubtful.

A decision like that doesn't help the boxing game and they should be carefully guarded against.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

Secure thus far in its links citadel at Port Hope, the Branscombe Challenge Cup for "best ball" play seems to have uncovered a sudden yen for the topography around the lake shore town. Three times the links invaders from other points here attempted to lift the trophy and three times they have failed.

Our own Tommy Carruthers and George Faulkner, who wield mean niblicks were the latest to try to bring the mug to Belleville, but they fell before the defending tactics of a Port Hope pair 4 up and two to go. But, nothing daunted, Tommy and Harry Ridley will accept the gauntlet of challenge and try to bring the trophy to the cool fresh breezes of the Bay of Quinte.

Speaking of golf there's a naive little fellow who went over to England the other day with a shy grin on his hill-billy features, swung his clubs and returned with the British Open dangling at his slim waist. He is Sammy Snead, a real hillbilly suddenly catapulted into fame. There is an oft-told story about Sammy but it can bear repeating:

Sammy had won the first big tournament of his career out on the Pacific Coast in 1937 and photographers swarmed around to get shots of this complete stranger. A few days later Freddie Corcoran the high panjandrum of the P.G.A., showed the Virginian a copy of The New York Times.

This Modern Age

Sammy's eyes popped when he spotted his picture grinning back at him from the sports pages. "Shucks," he exploded. "How'd they ever git that picture? I've never been in New York in my life." The mysteries of transmission of pictures by wire were entirely beyond his comprehension.

Even the niceties of etiquette sometimes have proved rather baffling to him. Sammy came in one day from shooting a sizzling round of golf and a couple of reporters gathered around him for an interview. Snead ordered a bottle of coke and drained it to the last drop. Corcoran was horrified.

"Sammy," he chided. "You must never do that. Politeness demands that you also ask the boys if they want anything to drink."

The next day the youth from the hills burned up the course again. Once more he was interviewed and once more he ordered his coke. The thirsty Snead gulped down half of it and then he remembered. "Sorry," he said sheepishly. "Anyone like a drink?" Thereupon he proferred the remains of his bottle to his assembled guests. He had no takers.

Then, too, there was the time he was playing golf with Bing Crosby when word came that the carefree Bing had won the Academy Award.

"That's swell, Bing," said the happy Snead. "Howja win it, match play or medal play?"

Lee Henning and the brilliant St. Louis wrestler Warren Bockwinkle meet in the main bout at the Arena on Friday night and the match is expected to produce one of the most exciting mat contests ever seen here. Henning needs no extolling to Belleville fans for they all know the big rough Iowa Cornhusker and his ruthless style and technique in a ring. Bockwinkle on the other hand is not so well known here but his international reputation is just about as high as they come.

Bockwinkle wrestles Whipper Billy Watson in Maple Leaf Gardens tonight and is given a very good chance to beat the British Empire Champion. Up against Henning here on Friday the St. Louis ace may give the big blond the thrashing most fans are hoping he'll get. Since Henning crippled Sliding Billy Hanson he has gained a tremendous amount of confidence and his merciless treatment of Toar Morgan here last week made the fans anxious to see him matched against the best.

In the third bout Pat Flanagan had been matched with Leo Numa but the blond ex-Shadow was hurt in Portland Maine, last night and wired today he would not be able to go through with the match. Bunny Dunlop, the old reliable will take Numa's place against Flanagan and the fur should fly high and handsome before that one is settled.

Al. Wade, Trenton's tall righthander came through with another neat three-hit pitching effort against Napanee last night at the Alemite Field and with the visitors literally kicking the ball away coasted in to a 16-3 win over the lads from Gibbardville. It was a comedy of errors with Jocko, Napanee shortstop booting the ball on five different occasions. The Naps erred eight times all told. Meanwhile the Flyer sluggers got themselves eleven hits with Holdershaw, White, Lee and "Moose" Matthews fattening their batting averages.

This Mountain View softball squad gave Maxie People's blue and white SACOS a scare last night at the View diamond, and the plant lads were extended to the limit to eke out a 4-3 win. Halloran on the mound pitched a steady game scattering five hits while his mates clustered four base knocks in the third innings to get all their runs in a heap. Mountain View has shown surprising strength in their last two or three games and will be a force to be reckoned with in the play-offs. It is understood they will go on down in the Intermediate "C" playdowns.

Inman, Kas., July 11 — (AP)— Mrs. O. P. Strousz, farmwife, makes every minute count during this busy harvest season. She drove a truck of wheat to the elevator and peeled potatoes while waiting in line for her load to be dumped. Then, back home, she worked several minutes in her kitchen while the truck was being reloaded. Mrs. Strousz said she hauled 15 loads of wheat while preparing one meal.

New York, July 11 — (AP) — The mains about the $100 price for the recent Joe Louis - Billy Conn waltz apparently didn't disturb your uncle Mike Jacobs one bit . . . the $30 top he set yesterday for Louis xs Tami Mauriello is just as big an over-charge, considering the records and what you can expect . . . Tami is the best opponent available for Louis if there has to be a September fight. He can hit fairly hard (51 knockouts in 71 fights) and never has been flattened, but he never had to take the kind of punches that Joe dishes out . . . Mauriello runs a tavern in the Bronx (and his weight trouble comes eating there too) . . . Louis is about to open a restaurant in Harlem . . . Why not have them meet in neutral territory — say the back room of Tony Galento's New Jersey new filling station?

Going My Way?

Alex Shultz of the Seattle Times tells about the time the star centrefielder of the Walla Walla State Penitentiary team turned up missing after being allowed outside the walls with a work party . . . an alarm went out and the next day he was hauled off a truck headed for Portland . . . "I was trying to get to Mexico and play in the Mexico League," he explained.

Winnipeg, June 11 — (CP) — Strangers are apt to be a bit surprised but to indoctrinated Winnipeggers it's an old story—they'd feel there was something missing if the baby carriages and tow-haired youngsters didn't show up at girls' fastball games.

It isn't that these toddlers are so terrifically sports-minded, it's just that a ball park is their second home. The reason — the lithe figures dashing around the diamond happen to be their mothers.

St. Boniface Athletics, defending champions in the greater Winnipeg League, are also the champs when it comes to combining marriage and their sport activities. All but two team members are married and most have children, ranging in age from 6 months to five years.

The girls don't think there is anything unusual about their combination of home runs and diapers. The eldest, 39-year-old Nan Merrick, has been married for 18 years, played softball since 1924 and also found time to raise two children.

Their husbands are all interested in sports but most of them are content to act as spectators and admire their wives' prowess. During practices and games, they keep an eye on the offspring by staying at home and amusing them, taking them out for a drive, or better still, out to the ball park, they are generally agreed that baseball is "good for the little woman" and emphasize their statement by adding "It's also good for their figures."

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

Lesson No. 1034.
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Deliver me from Howie Bores. My careful discard he ignores. No matter what I tell him, he believes our foes instead of me. Although I signal switch, the brute will keep on leading that same suit. And when I say come on, the rat will lead me anything but that.

If partner discards higher than necessary, he asks you to keep leading that suit. What card in that suit should you lead next? That depends on whether the contract is in suit or no-trump.

Against three no-trump, the clubs are divided as shown here:

WEST ♣A K 10 6 3
EAST ♣Q 9 2

SOUTH
♣J 8 7 4

Sitting west, your opening lead is the club king. This tells partner you have also the ace or the queen. You will take that one trick without a doubt. What then?

Your partner in the east discards the nine of clubs on your king. That is a come-on signal; an encouraging card: a request that you continue leading that suit.

What club should you lead now? If partner wants you to keep coming in that suit, he probably has a high card in it. You have the ace. So, his high card must be the queen.

So, you lead a small club to start the second round. Partner wins that with the queen and returns a club. This permits you to trap the south jack. And you have the last two clubs, too.

If you were playing against a suit contract, your second lead would be the same in this case. Because the singleton in dummy tells you that partner is not short in that suit. He must have the queen.

With several clubs in dummy, however, partner's come-on may not promise the queen. It may mean that he is short in that suit. So, you would lead your ace to the second round.

Good bridge is full of such tactics. Know it as teamwork.

Hollywood Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, July 11 (AP)—That perennial cigaret girl, Carmen, last night opened the symphony season at the Hollywood bowl, just as she inaugurated the vast, open-air music haven 25 years ago.

During its 25 years the bowl has provided Bach, Ballet and Barrelhouse to 6,000,000 listeners during the summer months.

Bowl authorities, egged on by the Chamber of Commerce, will readily report that only one concert in its history has been postponed because of rain.

Almost everything has happened in the bowl. Composer Percy Grainger was married there before 15,000 people. And one night a baby was born to a mother who apparently loved music more than safety.

The bowl sells out once or twice a season always for the Gershwin concert. Lily Pons holds the attendance record with 26,900 listeners. That includes those sitting among the sage brush and a few non-paying cheapskates who climb trees.

When he entered the motion picture business, Donald Nelson, former war production board head told me he had difficulty understanding its sales methods. In his former mail-order business, the customers knew what he was getting. But the movie patron gambles his money by paying first and hoping he'll like the picture. The current trend of movie advertising makes the risk greater.

For instance, I notice "Without Reservation" billed as "Colbert —living a lie...Wayne — not knowing her past...she was one woman to him another to the world." There is no indication that the film is a light comedy.

Are you sure you want to be a star? Bing Crosby returned to Hollywood with his car top covered with fan autographs in pencil, chalk, crayon and ink. Some are carved. The hub caps are gone and one enthusiast even carved a heart in the leather upholstery.

Next Heavyweight Scrap Will Have $30 as Top Price

By The Canadian Press

Taking a lesson from the financial set-up for the recent Joe Louis-Billy Conn titular affair for which prices scaled from $100 down, promoter Mike Jacobs announced yesterday at New York that admissions would scale from $30 to $3 for the next heavyweight championship bout at Yankee Stadium. This match, completed during the day, will bring Tami Mauriello of the Bronx into the ring against champion Louis, the date being Sept. 18. Louis telephoned his acceptance of terms from Detroit, which means he gets his usual 40 per cent cut, against Mauriello's 15 per cent.

Mauriello has a record of 77 fights, losing only seven. He has kayoed 51 opponents, the latest being Bruce Woodcock, British Empire champion.

Scout for the team for 15 years, John Angel, Sr., yesterday telegraphed his resignation to William Veeck, new owner of the Cleveland Indians, on the ground he was being ignored. Angel was in Bakersfield, Calif., where he has been supervising the local club in the California State League.

The touring Indian cricket team ran up 329 runs for five wickets yesterday against Derbyshire in an exhibition match in which the Nawab of Pataudi hit 113 before losing his wicket.

The memory of Lt.-Col. William Southworth, Jr., killed in an airplane crash in New York harbor Feb. 15, 1945, was honored yesterday by the dedication of a plaque on the Rome, N.Y., diamond, where he played early baseball. His father, manager Billy Southworth of Boston Braves, attended the ceremony.

Joe Bedenk, baseball coach at Penn State College, said yesterday outfielder Joe Tepsic of that college, signed by Brooklyn Dodgers, was the fastest player he had ever seen and predicted he would make good in major baseball.

Westfield Girl, owned by E. J. Baker, defeated Walter Spencer in two heats of the $1,000 stake for three-year-old trotters at Old Orchard Beach, Me., yesterday, doing the second dash in 2:05.

Bill Herbert's three-year-old pacer, Jean Herbert, won the Supertest Stakes, yesterday's feature of the harness card at Tillsonburg, Ont. The London pacer finished second to Brookdale in the first start but was an easy victor in the second and third heats. A field of nine competed for the purse, worth $4,001.85.

In 325 Contests International Loop Sluggers Have Hit 431 Round Trippers

(By The Associated Press)

At the rate International League batters are belting home runs, they will surpass last year's output of 628 before the present campaign is over.

Rochester Red Wings have clouted eight more four-baggers than they did last season when they hit 26 and Syracuse Chiefs need only one more circuit drive to equal their 1945 crop of 48. Only Toronto Maple Leafs appear in danger of not matching their 56 of last year. The Leafs in 81 games have collected only 29 home runs.

Bob Repass, Eddie Robinson and Howie Moss of Baltimore, who have accounted for 45 of Baltimore's homers this year, banged successive boundary belts in the seventh, inning last night to enable the Orioles to defeat Newark Bears 4-2.

The pact-setting Montreal Royals increased their league lead to 11 games by trouncing Buffalo 11-4, while the runner-up Chiefs dropped a 3-2 14-inning contest to the tail-end Jersey City Giants.

Montreal broke a 2-2 deadlock by scoring four runs in the fourth frame and clinched the verdict with another four-run blast in the fifth to allow Jean Pierre Roy to coast to his fourth straight victory.

Don Mueller's single with the bases loaded in the 14th inning brought the Giants their victory over the Chiefs.

Rochester eked out a 3-2 victory over Toronto with Chuck Diering trippling in Charley Baron in the seventh inning with the winning run. Bud Byerly went the rout for the Red Wings and yielded only five safeties to gain his ninth triumph of the season.

Al. Wade Hurls Three-Hitter and Never in Serious Trouble

With Al. Wade pitching three-hit ball and the Napanee fielders literally throwing the ball all over the lot for nine errors, the Trenton Flyers, let down their undercarriage and taxied home to a one-sided 16-3 score over the lads from down east in a City Baseball League game at the Alemite Field Wednesday night.

Wade coasted home to an easy win, scattering three hits over the seven inning piece and never being in serious difficulty. He struck out seven and walked two.

On the other hand his mates pounded the offerings of three visiting hurlers for eleven safeties and sixteen runs, six of them coming in the sixth inning when the Naps got careless and could do nothing right in the field.

Napanee scored their first run in the first innings when Jocko caught a fast Wade pitch and blasted it to deep left centre for a home run. They scored again in the second and their final tally came in the fourth.

One hit and three errors paved the way for four Flyer runs in the third. They got three more in the fifth and their big inning came in the sixth when the Napanee throwers got careless and aided and abetted six runners to cross the plate. Kerr's homer in the fifth sent home two runners ahead of him.

Holdershaw paced the Flyer attack with three hits, with Matthews, White and Lee getting two each. Turner, Jocko and Ray Vick were the only Napanee batters to hit safely.

CARDS SET FOR STRETCH DRIVE TO CATCH DODGERS

Enter Half-Way Mark in Schedule Boasting Five-Game Win Streak

By RALPH RODEN
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

St. Louis Cardinals, owners of more pennants and first division finishes than any other club in the National League in the last 20 years appear on the brink of starting another of their famous stretch drives as the second half of the major league season begins today.

Trailing the crippled Brooklyn Dodgers by five games, the runner-up Red Birds enter the crucial stage of the flag race boasting a five-game winning streak.

The Cards have come from behind after trailing in July to win four of their pennants during the late stages of the campaigns.

Perhaps their most thrilling stretch drive was in 1942 when they overcame a 10-game August lead of the Dodgers to capture their first flag in eight years and then go on and take the world series in five games from New York Yankees.

Injuries and the fact that the Brooks have managed to win only nine of 20 games from Western clubs in their home parks may greatly change the complexion of the race when the teams return east July 23.

The American League spotlight will be focussed on Yankee stadium where Bobby Feller of Cleveland Indians and Spud Chandler of second-place New York are slated to oppose each other in a night contest.

Feller, strikeout king of the majors, will be seeking his 16th decision of the year and also will attempt to add to his strikeout total which has reached 190 in 180 innings.

Boston Red Sox, 7 1-2 games in front of the Yanks, are scheduled to meet Detroit Tigers in the opener of an 11-day home stay.

Boston has enjoyed its greatest success at Fenway Park, winning 31 games and tying another in 38 contests including six straight victories over Steve O'Neill's world series champion Tigers.

Schoolboy Police Cut Accident Rate

Castor, Alta. (CP)—A junior police force has solved the traffic problems of this southern Alberta Town.

Established by Chief Constable A. S. Russell, the force consists of a captain, two lieutenants and seven constables, all school students.

The most important task of the junior force is to patrol corners when children are going to and from school. It was organized by Russell following a fatal accident at a busy street corner.

Five minutes before school is dismissed the young officers, clad in neat uniforms, hats and gloves, take up their posts of duty in the town. Authorized to direct traffic they halt all speeding motorists, warning them against fast driving. So far none has needed a second warning and police have yet to receive a complaint.

Each week the members hold a meeting to discuss rules and regulations. Given a test by an inspector of the highway traffic board they showed their eagerness in the job when he failed to stump them.

SACOS DEFEAT MT. VIEW IN CLOSE GAME

Mountain View's up and coming entry in the Belleville Softball Association extended the fast travelling SACOS in a scheduled fixture Wednesday night, bowing to a 4-3 defeat after one of the best games played during the season.

Showing surprising strength the Air Force team has vaulted into softball prominence the last week or so, and with more power in the offing may cause a few surprises in the playoffs.

McCartney, Air Force hurler, was touched for eight hits over the nine-innings route four of them being bunched in the third when Sacos scored all their runs. Gene LaBonne's three-bagger in this frame drove home three runs with Temple and Barriage also connecting safely to help the cause.

Halloran was on the mound for the winners and scattered four hits. Mountain View scored one in the first, another in the third and their last in the sixth. After that Halloran reired
Halloran retired the side in order.

The best SACOS could do after the third, was three hits for no runs off the Mountain View hurler. They threatened in the sixth and again in the eighth, but nothing developed and the potential rallies were cut off.

Score by innings:

SACOS	004 000 00x—4	8	2

The teams:

SACOS: Woods, Barriage, Henn, LaBonne, R. Reid, D. Sword, Wardhaugh, Temple, Halloran.

CHAPTER 4

After a long ride in a crowded street car she opened the front door of the house in Walbrook. Eve was reading in the living room. Somewhere in the house Tommy was whistling. Selina came out of the kitchen untying her neat apron.

"Iris, why didn't you let me know you were coming home to dinner?"

Dinner! Left on a restaurant table! But she was not hungry and in her confusion at finding both Joel and Mark at the office she had forgotten to telephone.

"I'm sorry, Mother."

"It's all right, dear." She patted Iris's arm fondly. "Mr. Christian called just a few minutes ago. Iris, he is such a charming person. So cultured. He said to tell you that he'd call for you at the office tomorrow and take you to dinner. Now that," rejoiced Selina," is the kind of a gentleman I like to have interested in you."

Tommy came down the steps. "Guess what Iris? I have a job — in a gas station. Starting tomorrow. The pay isn't bad but the hours are awful."

Eve closed her book and said, "Mark Christian certainly is persistent, Iris. He didn't ask you to go. He just said he was taking you. You have no choice."

Wearily Iris pulled off her hat. "That's true. I have no choice."

It was Selina who insisted that Iris wear her new spring clothes to the office the next day. She put on the gray dress, gray slipperss, gray coat with a band of fur, and a small gray silk turban.

When she arrived at the office, Louis said, "You look positively bridish, Iris. With a corsage of orchids you'd be properly attired for the wedding ceremony. Big date tonight?" He laughed and took her hand. "I was with Mark when he called last night. It was I who warned him not to mention the fair-haired boy who called for you."

Iris shrugged. "He's poor, Louis, and Mother has ambitions for me."

"I see. Ambitions for herself, you mean. Go out with Mark tonight and forget about the fair-haired lad who seems to think he owns you, about your ambitious mother, and the women who come here because they have nothing more to do than imagine themselves ill. And," he added, "forget about Annette, too."

"I wish I could."

"There's something at the bottom of her actions that puzzles me. It will come to light sooner or later. In the meantime don't worry."

The stream of patients coming in gave Iris little time to remember last night or contemplate this evening with Mark. Yet when the business day was drawing to a close and the twilight colors were streaking the sky over tall buildings, she admitted to herself that she was excited about this promised evening.

Iris, ever honest, planned nothing. Always things were to happen to her, both the high heights of happiness and the pain of misery, unexpectedly. That Mark was the sought-after eligible young man he certainly was made no difference in her attitude toward him. She was one of those unchangeable people, always the same in greeting Louis's patients, at home with the lowliest peddler who came to the door, or drinking tea in Mary North's luxurious apartment. Mary said, "Iris is so concerned with the comfort and happiness of other people she never thinks of herself. Therein lies her greatest charm."

The long mirror in the white dressing room where she went to put on her street clothes and to paint her mouth into a crimson flower gave back the reflection of a girl too loyal and stubborn to admit that the presence of Mark Christian, probably waiting for her now, caused strange new sensations to stir in her. It was to take much agony and many tears for her to realize that on this first evening with Mark she was beating down, pressing down upon the very happiness toward which she had reached forth her hands all her life.

She would have been completely blind if she had not noticed the warm light that suddenly leaped in his eyes when she stepped into the outer office and advanced toward him, smiling. That warmth in his eyes was the only compliment Iris wanted. He said nothing, merely smiled at her, and they went out together.

Tonight the music was not feverish nor was the room crowded. Over a cocktail Iris fell silent, seemingly absorbed in the bright liquid in the thin glass. How different was tonight from the turmoil and rush and shame of last night! Mark's conversation was casual and gay. His eyes revealed unspoken compliments. In the cream colored room, to the strains of low music, burdens seemed to vanish. Somehow all that mattered was this evening with Mark, these few hours snatched from the hurry and conflict of her life.

She looked up. "I don't think anyone has ever told me what your business is. Do you do nothing except play polo and follow the warm climate?"

"I practice law in earnest," he said, "in spite of the fact that most people will tell you I do nothing except play polo. Shall we dance, Iris?"

He did not talk when he danced, as Joel did. He held her close and was silent so that in the future whenever Iris heard this particular song she was always to associate it with him.

After dinner and after conversation that was amusing, he said," Would you like to go for a ride? Supper clubs are for winter but not for the springtime."

He parked the car on a high hill. The sky was clear streaked with patches of light and dark. Below in the valley a thick mist was rising upward.

It was the time and place for confidences even for Iris who was so reticent about her difficulties. With Mark beside her, smoking, his profile carved and strong, she began to talk, clearly and in a low voice. She told him everything of her early life, the small Iris groomed and patterned for a rich husband, about Eve's magical voice, lost to the world, about Tommy, and then finally about Joel.

"I had to tell you this," said Iris. "I had to make you understand things about me you might misunderstand."

"And in the end," he asked, "to whom are you going to be true—to yourself or to your family?"

Her eyes met his in the panel of moonlight that penetrated the car. "That I don't know. Don't judge Joel harshly. One can't be gay and thoughtful when one is wretched. I—I'm the only person who's ever taken an interest in him. His parents died when he was very young and he was passed from one relative to another who didn't want him."

"Have you forgiven him for last night?"

"I suppose I must forgive him for loving me too much," she answered soberly. "Do you see? This evening with you has been wonderful because you have all the material things to make it wonderful. Joel and I have to dine in cheap restaurants. We have to ride on crowded street cars. I'm trying so hard to make myself understood. It's all so mixed up."

He took her cool hand and smiled at her. "Iris, my dear, you can't be true to a dozen things."

"But what I'm trying to say, Mark, is that I shall not see you again."

"You can't mean that."

"I do. I think if—if it were anyone except you, I might do what Mother wants me to do. But I can't—with you. I've told you all this because I wanted you to know that I'm dressed to meet men with money—for Eve's sake, for Tommy's sake, for Mother's sake. Now you understand. It—it's ugly, Mark."

"Truth is never ugly. You're trembling. Come closer, Iris."

He put his arm around her and held her close. A protective gesture only, she thought.

"If I ask for nothing but just to see you," he said, "you can't refuse that. I don't want to love a girl who is engaged to another man. Nor do I want to be married for what I've been lucky enough to inherit. We shall be friends, Iris, but nothing more."

He did not say how much he loved her, how slowly the day had passed for him, and how much her closeness brought desire leaping to hold her closer still and kiss her. He did not say as he thought," Your Joel whom you defend is a weakling — not because he's poor but because he keeps you bound to a promise you made two years ago. Two years make a great deal of difference in the growth of a woman. The woman does not love whom the child loves. Joel is still the adolescent boy, brooding over his poverty and doing nothing to advance himself while you, Iris, have become a woman."

He said to her, "There is too much love that isn't love but attraction between men and women and not enough friendship."

"It has been my experience," she said a little sadly, "that men want to receive but never give."

Give! He thought. "Hedidu.J"

Give! he thought. "He could give her everything in the world for herself and her family! Grimly he thought, "Not yet. I won't buy her. I'll never ask her to marry me until she sees Joel as he really is. If she married me for money, she'd always think she sacrificed herself for her family."

Had Bad Stomach, Backache Felt Tired And Worn Out

Is Delighted with Improvement in Health Since She Learned About Syntona. Says Stomach Felt Better From First Few Doses. Then Nerves Relaxed and Pains Went Away.

"There has been such a definite improvement in the way I feel since I've been taking Syntona that I will be glad to have others know of my experience," said Miss Elizabeth O'Donnell, 239 Clarence St., London, Ont., in a recent statement.

"It is almost like something new for me to be feeling so well, because I had suffered so much with stomach disorders and backache in the past few years that I had become generally rundown. My appetite wasn't very good and what little food I did eat just seemed to sour in my stomach causing gas, shortness of breath and acid risings. I had a dull, aching pain in my back and I used to get awful dizzy spells with spots darting before my eyes.

"Although I was usually exhausted and nervous at the end of my day's work I couldn't sleep, so I felt tired and worn out from the beginning of each day.

"A friend recommended Syntona so highly that I decided to take some and it helped my stomach right from the first few doses. Now, after a few weeks I am ever so much better. My food is digesting once more without causing all that distress with gas and sour risings afterwards. My nerves are relaxed and the pains have gone out of my back, so I can get a good night's sleep, and I arise mornings feeling rested and ready for my day's work. I am free of those dizzy spells and spots before my eyes and I feel like a very different person from what I was only a few short weeks ago."

Good Advice to Those WHO SUFFER WITH PILES

Maybe you are one who is troubled with sore, itching, painful piles, keeping you nervous and irritable, making your every bowel movement a dreaded, painful duty. If so you should not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic.

Rectal itching and soreness or painful bowel movements because of piles are Nature's warning to you and you should take steps now to relieve this condition. We make this generous offer directly to you. It gives you a chance to try a simple, home remedy WITHOUT COST if it does not give you prompt and effective action in helping your pile troubles.

Go to any drug store today and get a package of Hem-Roid, an internal treatment which directs its medical action to correcting the cause of your piles. Piles are really caused by bad circulation of blood in the lower bowel. They are greatly aggravated by constipation and straining in bowel movements.

The Hem-Roid formula is made especially to help you. It acts in 4 ways. (1) It makes your bowel movements easier and less painful; (2) it relieves the terrible itching and burning; (3) it eases the painful soreness; (4) it aids in healing the sore, sensitive pile tumors. The action of Hem-Roid is quick and reliable. Within a few days you will see what Hem-Roid can do for you. It is easy and pleasant to use—gives amazingly quick and effective action.

It seems the height of folly for you to continue to suffer the agonizing torment of piles when so fine a remedy may be had at such a small cost. If you are not completely satisfied with what Hem-Roid does for you—if after using one package you are not greatly pleased—your money will be cheerfully refunded.

Long Arm of Law Does Not Forget Delayed Counts

That the long arm of the law does not forget un-executed charges even if they are of long standing, was learned today in county police court by Bruce Brant of Shannonville who three months after the event appeared in court to answer to an assault charge and also on an intoxication count.

Last March Brant had been charged with assault against another man in Shannonville but before he could be brought to trial, apparently decided that some other part of the country may be more suited to his immediate liking. Early this week Brant returned to the Shannonville district and was promptly booked on the assault charge.

Fine and costs of $17.50 were awarded by Magistrate T. Y. Wills on the intoxication count, while an additional sum of $13 fine and costs were given on the assault count. In default of payment Brant will serve 14 days on the first count and 21 days on the assault charge.

Pleading guilty to a charge of being drunk in charge of a motor vehicle, Arthur D. Ashley, Stirling, was sentenced to ten days in jail, while a further charge of careless driving was withdrawn.

A total of 30 charges were listed for the morning's court session several of them being traffic cases with fines and costs paid out of court, while others were laid over until future courts.

W. J. Norman Spence, Moira, appearing on two counts of arson, was remanded until a future court pending a mental examination.

Dry Weather Will Materially Affect Huckleberry Crop

Continued dry weather will materially affect the current huckleberry crop according to one huckster who offered these berries on the local produce market Thursday morning. Only one vendor offered the berries with price asked being 60 cents the quart.

This was the first offering of huckleberries on the local produce market this season.

Cherries were available in considerable quantity, the majority of them coming from the Niagara district and selling at $2 the basket for the black sweet variety. Red varieties were available at slightly lower prices.

What was claimed to be near the last of the strawberries for the season were quoted at 45 cents the box or at 40 cents by the quantity. Red currants sold at 30 cents the box and gooseberries at 20 cents. New potatoes were plentiful at 75 cents the peck.

RUSSIA EMERGES

planned for this weekend. The ministers are scheduled to approve final drafts of peace treaties with Italy, Hungary, Romania, Bulgaria and Finland on Saturday.

Mr. Molotov urged the ministers not to be governed by "the spirit of revenge" in dealing with Germany.

He urged the immediate creation of a central German administration "as a transitional step toward the establishment of a future German government" with which the Allies eventually could sign a peace treaty.

"Our purpose is not to destroy Germany but to transform Germany into a democratic and peace-loving state," he said.

Wants Four-power Control

He called for the establishment of a system of four-power control over German industries and over key Ruhr plants in particular. At present the Ruhr is administered exclusively by Britain.

Mr. Molotov also demanded that a plan be drafted to assure the delivery of German reparations to the Allies as a means of furthering the "complete military and economic disarmament" of Germany.

France's Georges Bidault supported U. S. State Secretary Byrnes' proposal for a 25-year treaty to insure disarmament of Germany. Mr. Molotov, who previously had described the proposal as "wholly inadequate," said he would study it further.

British Foreign Minister Bevin complained that Russia had prevented fulfillment of Potsdam pledges to allow import and export exchanges among the various Allied zones of occupation in Germany. He submitted a paper asking for immediate consideration of Germany as an economic unit.

VETERAN REPORTS RADIO ACTIVITIES

Here going through some of the 5,000 odd letters acknowledging public service programs broadcast by 81 independent community radio stations, Frederick C. Colborne of CJCJ, Calgary, reported on the activities of the private broadcasters to the parliamentary committee on radio. One of hundreds of World War II veterans who returned to careers in privately operated radio, Mr. Colborne is a former R.C.A.F. wing-commander and holder of the D.F.C. In 1945 he was one of three service men elected to represent the forces in the Alberta legislature. The photo was taken at the headquarters of the Canadian Association of Broadcasters when Mr. Colborne passed through Toronto on his way to Ottawa.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, July 11 —(CP)— The mining groups and the industrials took index losses of .28 to .91 in the early session on the Toronto Exchange today, following a couple of sessions of rallies from Monday's low prices. Western oils had a minor gain at noon. Volume was small at 530,000 shares for the first three hours.

Brazilian Traction gained a point to 23 1-4 but most of the industrial groups were down. Hiram Walker slipped off 2 points. The papers displayed mild weakness.

Among softer golds were Madsen, Pamour, MacDonald, Hasaga, Malartic Gold Fields, Negus and Chesterville. In the base metals mild weakness was displayed by Nickel, Sherritt and Waite-Amulet.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

New York, July 11 (AP)—Selling of steels and profit cashing in Wednesday's buoyant liquors and packers dampened bullish stock market spirits today although assorted favorites put up little resistance.

Trends slipped after an easy start and declines of fractions to a point or more predominated near the fourth hour. Volume picked up at intervals.

Canadians were weak on the big board at noon. Distillers Seagram was off 1 3-8 at 28 5-8, Dome Mines down 1-8 at 23 1-2, International Nickel off 1-2 at 38 1-4 and Hiram Walker down 1 at 144. Canadian Pacific traded unchanged at 19 1-8.

WEEPING TURTLE LAYS 100 EGGS

Canadian Diplomat and Curious Group Confuse 500-Pound Giant

By CLYDE BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Washington (CP)—Thomas A. Stone, counsellor at the Canadian embassy here, experienced something a little outside the diplomatic routine the other night when he stood on a moonlit South Carolina beach and watched a barnacled, 500-pound turtle from the Gulf Stream lay 100 eggs in the sand, all the while shedding copious tears like the Mock Turtle of Alice in Wonderland.

Mr. Stone had heard the Carolina legend that if one was alert on a moonlight night in June, on an isolated stretch of beach, he might catch one of these ageless monsters laying its eggs.

Friends arranged a picnic for him on Bulls Island, about 18 miles from Charleston. When the moon was high the party walked about four miles along the beach to its most unfrequented stretches.

They began to see the deep furrows made by turtles that had laid their eggs and left but finally they found a one-way track leading away from the surf.

About 200 yards inland they came upon a sad-visaged turtle about the size of an office desk, already depositing eggs in a shallow excavation. Its only apparent reaction to the curious group and their flashlights was to weep a flood of tears, until it had laid about 100 eggs the size of ping-pong balls, and laboriously covered them with sand.

Turned The Wrong Way

Then, Mr. Stone said, the turtle made what might have been a fatal error. Confused by the lights and the audience, it turned inland instead of heading back to the sea.

In a moment it had fallen into a deep depression on the upper beach and, because it has only flippers for swimming instead of armed feet like land turtles, it could not crawl out.

"She was pretty close to exhaustion," Mr. Stone said. "Then too, we felt sort of responsible for her predicament."

So the seven men in the group went down into the hole and heaved the helpless monster back to level beach and headed it for the surf.

"Its flippers are not made for moving its heavy body on land," Mr. Stone said, "and it barely made the water. It would move a few feet and then take long gasping breathing spells before it would go on again.

"But when it got afloat it was right at home. Its flippers went into action like pistons and it swam, straight and fast out to sea, travelling down the path of the moon and heading for its playground far out in the Gulf Stream."

THE NEVADA AFTER ATOMIC ATTACK

The bull's-eye of the target that was composed of scores of fighting ships, the U.S.S. Nevada is shown here after the big blast at Bikini. The bomb, of the same type that wiped out the city of Nagasaki damaged her, but the veteran fighting ship didn't break, or even bend, from the cosmic punch. Latest reports are that the old ship will not be among the guinea pigs lined up for the second atomic bomb test.

Million Tons Water Will be Blown In Column Half Mile in Diameter Over Mile High by Atomic Bomb

Aboard U.S.S. McKinley, July 11 — (AP) — One million tons of water — a column nearly a half mile in diameter and 8,000 to 10,000 feet high — will be blown into the air by the underwater atomic bomb, Vice-Admiral W.H.P. Blandy estimated.

The task force commander said ships within the column area 'will get an awful working over' and those near the centre are likely to be tossed into the air "in pieces if not altogether."

Admiral Blandy told a press conference that there will be high waves, as much as 100 feet, flung out from the column but their height will fall off rapidly and probably will not exceed 10 feet by the time they hit the shore of Bikini Island.

Radioactive contamination of the water and ships will be hundreds of times greater than in the previous blast, scientists estimate.

It is planned to explode the bomb about 8:30 a.m. Bikini time July 25 (5:30 p.m. E.D.T. July 24), but no definite program has been set pending later weather data.

Time to Object In World Jaunt

Croydon, England (CP) — A world-wandering journey in which there will be "no such thing as time" is being planned by Sydney Turner, former jet-plane test pilot, his wife and their seven-year-old son. Mr. Turner has acquired a 38-ton yacht, Tern IV, equipped with radio, now lying at anchor in Falmouth Harbor.

"We have sold our home and all our possessions and will wander where we please," he said. "One week we may park the yacht and explore the desert. Then we may land and trek to Tibet. We shall stay in places we like and move on quickly from places we don't like.

"We shall have a whale of a time."

Winston Churchill A Literary Giant

London (CP)—Sir John Anderson, former chancellor of the exchequer told City of London schoolboys recently that Winston Churchill, the greatest living man of words and phrases," in his youth read and read until he was steeped in literature and words."

"His consciousness has ripened into instinct so that he is able now to express what he has to say in a manner which is quite incomparable."

Presenting prizes for the study of Shakespeare and English, Sir John said the art of describing something in as few words as possible was a "great asset."

PRAISE FOR SAPPERS

Felixstove, England (CP) — Sappers of a mine disposal unit who had "de-loused" the local sands were entertained by the town council and told by the chairman: "We thank you for making our beaches safe for holiday-makers."

TOPS IN LIFEBOATS

London (CP)— A new lifeboat developed in Britain is reversible, uncapsizable and self-emptying. In one of a series of tests, the boat retained its stability when loaded with sandbags equivalent in weight to 60 men. The boat has an engine but can be rowed or sailed.

Ex-Mountie Goes On Tour of World

Hodgkiss is working his way around the world, looking for the ideal place to settle. First he worked his way from Vancouver to England and back, then got a job as ship's fireman and went to Shanghai via Honolulu and Saipan. He earned $100, took an air trip to Hong Kong and then obtained passage to Sydney on H.M.S. Euryalus. Now he intends to move on to New Zealand and South Africa.

The former mountie helps pay expenses by selling photographs he takes.

22 JEWS SLAIN ATTEMPTING TO FLEE PERSECUTION

Govt. Prepares To Execute Nine For Kielce Pogrom

Cardinal Puts Responsibility On Jewish Govt. Officials

By LARRY ALLEN

Warsaw, July 12 (AP) — The slaying of 22 Jews attempting to flee a new wave of persecution in Poland was reported today as the government prepared to execute nine persons convicted of instigating the bloody July 4 pogrom at Kielce.

Meanwhile august Cardinal Hlond placed responsibility for "dangerous tensions" in Poland upon Jewish governmental officials.

The Cardinal attributed "deterioration" in the internal situation in Poland "to Jews who today occupy leading positions in Poland's government and try to introduce a governmental structure which a majority of the people do not desire."

Replying to charges by Premier Edward Osubka-Morawski that Catholic church officials in Poland had refused to condemn the Kielce pogrom, the Cardinal said a pastoral letter read in churches July 7 deplored the "tragic and regrettable events of Kielce."

The 22 newly-reported slayings occurred on highways and railroad trains between Lodz and Wroclaw (Breslau) as the victims were participating in the mass flights which followed the pogrom.

Outlaws Blamed

Outlawed bands hidden in the forests were blamed for the deaths.

All reports indicated that while the government apparently was doing its utmost to afford protection to the Jews, anti-semitic acts were spreading throughout the country. Even the use of armored cars and the reinforcing of militia and security police by the government have not halted the upsurge of violence.

The government blames the outbreak on "Fascist reactionaries," and newspapers generally attributed it to agents of Gen. Wladislaw Anders, who commanded the Polish troops fighting in Italy. The press charges these agents with trying to provoke civil war by murdering Jews and members of the Communist-backed Workers Party.

Governmental and other sources said that "if a Polish soldier or politician is killed, nothing is said about it. But if a single Jew is killed, then it becomes an international incident."

The government yesterday concluded its swift trial of 12 persons accused of touching off the Kielce pogrom, which resulted in 41 deaths. Besides the nine men sentenced to death, one woman and two men received jail sentences.

Mihailovic Verdict Announced Monday

Belgrade, July 12—(AP)—The president of the war crimes court trying Gen. Draja Mihailovic and 23 co-defendants announced today that the verdict would be delivered at 8 a.m. (3 a.m. E.D.T.)

Final speeches on behalf of the defendants were completed early today.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, July 12—(CP)—Synopsis at 7:30 a.m.: The Atlantic seaboard and most of Quebec still lie in warm humid air. However, the cooler and drier air mass which has been pushing eastward from the Prairies for the last two days now covers the Prairie Provinces, Central United States and all of Ontario. Southern Ontario will experience ideal holiday weather for the next two days with maximum temperatures in the high seventies today rising a few degrees on Saturday. Thunderstorms are occuring along the leading edge of the cool air mass over the eastern United States and eastern Quebec.

GENERAL STRIKE IN THREE STEEL PLANTS CALLED

Workers Will Leave Their Benches on or Before Next Monday

Hamilton, July 12—(CP)—The United Steelworkers of America (C.I.O.) today called a general strike in the Canadian basic steel industry, to start on or before next Monday, July 15.

The notice of strike action was given in a telegram from C. H. Millard, national director of the union, to the Dominion's three basic steel concerns — Algoma Steel Corporation at Sault Ste. Marie, the Steel Company of Canada in Hamilton and the Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation.

It came just two days after the Dominion government named a controller for the three plants in the hope of averting a nation-wide steel strike which would cut off production of coke needed for fuel and production of steel for use in other industries.

The telegram was made public by Mr. Millard just after noon at the close of a meeting of the union's national advisory committee which has been in session here since yesterday. It said the strike was being called because the union had not received from the companies a satisfactory answer to its demands for a $33.60 weekly minimum wage and a 40-hour week.

Some 14,000 workers are employed in the three plants. It is the first time a walkout has been called in all three at the same time. Three years ago, however, Sault and Sydney workers staged a simultaneous walkout.

The government-appointed controller, F. D. Kilbourn, has proposed a 10-cent hourly increase in the wage rates at the three plants. There was no direct reference to this proposal in Mr. Millard's telegram today but union leaders have indicated they consider it inadequate. The union demands amount to a 19½-cent houdly increase in basic rates at the Sault and Hamilton and a 24½ cent increase at Sydney.

Halifax, July 12 (CP)—Crew members of the Boston trawler Charles M. Fauci today described their experience as "just one of those things" as their damaged vessel was undergoing repairs here after being towed to port by the tug Foundation Franklin.

SIAMESE BORDER ISSUE IS SEEN OF GREAT IMPORT

Bangkok Announces Intention of Laying Issue Before The United Nations

By STANLEY SWINTON

Bangkok, July 12 (AP)—Siam's announced intention of placing the Indo-China border question before the United Nations confronts U. N. with an issue which informed British and American sources here consider as potentially explosive.

Behind the Bangkok government's move lies a frank desire to resolve the prolonged controversy over the Laotian and Cambodian territories before the rains end in October. The Siamese say they fear that unless the issue at least is on the U. N. agenda before the dry season France may reoccupy the territory.

If the French march in, no significant resistance is likely since Siam maintains only token police forces in the areas concerned. Use of force by a major power against a small country, however, would pose a grave international question.

France and Siam

Behind the urgent French desire to regain territories ceded under Japanese pressure after the shortlived "Mekong River war" in 1941 is a desire to rebuild French prestige in southeast Asia.

The Siamese border issue is an especially bitter pill to French pride since Siam's other wartime territorial acquisitions—four British-protected Malay States and two Burmese Shan States—were returned by Siam as soon as Japan was defeated.

The explanation of the Siamese refusal to return Indo-Chinese territories—and the behind-the-scenes reason why the issue was appealed to the United Nations—lies in the internal political situation. Both the present government and previous postwar cabinets realized that Anglo-American refusal to recognize cessions made under Axis pressure makes return of disputed territories inevitable. But no Siamese government has dared to take action because it would mean immediate political disaster.

Drowned Near Gananoque

Gananoque, July 12—(CP)—Julia Teasley, 31-year-old domestic servan of Hamilton, N. Y., was drowned yesterday in the SSt. Lawrence river three miles south of here. Artificial respiration was applied for 1 1-2 hours. Dr. K. C. Gray, coroner, said that death was due to accidental drowning and that no inquest would be held.

Russia Has Received 14 Billions Directly, Indirectly From Germany

—BYRNES.

By ROBERT C. WILSON

Paris, July 12 (AP)—State Secretary Byrnes said in a statement on German reparations today that the Russians already have received directly or indirectly $14,000,000,000 in territory and equipment.

The Russians through Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov demanded $10,000,000,000 reparations of Germany earlier this week.

The council of foreign ministers heard a proposal by Mr. Byrnes for economic unification of Germany but no decision was reached. France demanded that the Saar be excluded from the unification and integrated into French economy, and Russia asked more time to study the Saar, an American informant said.

State Secretary Byrnes of the United States proposed that the Berlin control council of the United States, Russia, France and the United Kingdom be instructed immediately to set up the machinery for such a merger. The proposal was tabled, perhaps for further discussion at the afternoon session.

Threat of Soviet Veto Dooms Proposal For Autonomous A-Agency

By CHARLES A. GRUMICH

New York, July 12 (AP)—Australia's proposal for an autonomous world atomic control agency which would maintain only one ultimate link with the United Nations Security Council apparently was doomed today under the threat of Russian veto when and if it reaches the council.

Soviet delegate Andrei A. Gromyko's flat opposition and his reiterated refusal to surrender the veto on atomic matters were made known as Australian Foreign Minister Dr. Herbert V. Evatt prepared to lay his program before the 12-member U. N. atomic working committee.

After the sub-committee's final meeting an authoritative source said Mr. Gromyko had insisted in secret session that Russia would stand only for atomic control under security council administration without alteration of the veto rights of the big five permanent members.

Under the Australian plan, which has the indicated support of the United States and others, the Security Council would have nothing to do with atomic affairs except to handle flagrant warlike violations of the proposed atomic controls.

Mr. Gromyko's rejection of the Australian plan revived contentions in some circles that the U. N. charter should be amended on the veto subject because it was framed before the atom bomb was unveiled with its decisive potentials for war or peace.

Requests Rules Reviewed

After blocking off Mr. Gromyko's unsuccessful attempt to veto the attendance of Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, Canadian member of the Aomic Energy Commission, from a Security Council meeting two days ago on atomic subjects, Dr. Evatt requested that the veto rules should be reviewed by the General Assembly meeting in September.

A charter amendment, however, can be achieved only by two-thirds vote of the assembly with the concurrence of all the big five powers, thus leaving Russia in position to circumvent Dr. Evatt's efforts in the assembly.

Dr. Evatt said he told Mr. Gromyko that countries having atomic raw materials would not enter into a control program unless the big powers yielded their power of veto on atomics. Mr. Gromyko was reported to have said atomic violations should be handled by the council just as any other threats to the peace.

The Australian announced that the atomic conferees had reached the point where they could put a control plan down in "ABC language" and that this would be undertaken by various sub-committees on overall planning, legal questions including the veto, and scientific aspects for peaceful use of atomic power.

RENEWAL OF FLAG FIGHT EXPECTED IN PARLIAMENT

Committee Accepts Red Ensign With Maple Leaf in Bordered Background

Ottawa, July 12 (CP) — The decks were clear today for a renewal of the flag fight on the floors of parliament itself.

In a half hour last night, the harassed special Senate-Commons committee completed its 14th and final meeting—they began Nov. 27, 1945—with a recommendation of the design for a distinctive Canadian flag.

It was that it "should be the red ensign with a maple leaf in autumn golden colors in a bordered background of white replacing the coat of arms in the fly." It was, further, that it should be so proportioned that the size and position of the maple leaf in relation to the Union Jack in the canton will identify it as a symbol distinctive of Canada as a whole."

That will be the basis of its final reports to the Commons, possibly today, and that will become the basis for the controversy that is expected to see a renewal of the stubborn Quebec stand against inclusion of the Union Jack.

Just where that controversy will lead is a matter of speculation, but the government has been warned that it cannot expect the support of the majority of Quebec Liberals if it persists in having the Union Jack.

Burt of Unanimity

But if there is controversy ahead the committee managed to finish off its thorny task in a burst of unanimity which saw only Wilfrid Lacroix (L-Montmorency) vote against the recommendation of a sub-committee that the ensign, as modified, be the choice. The 21 others present voted for it.

Behind lies the task of choosing that one from some 2,600 submissions. Last to fall was that supported by the Quebec members, consisting of red and white triangles with a green maple leaf in the centre.

Left open in the final recommendation is the job of fixing certain details.

For instance, the white border —a gesture for Quebec— might take several form and the size of the Union Jack will have to be fixed. On the advice of Col. A. F. Duquid, heraldry expert, the one-quarter size of the Union Jack in the present red ensign denotes subservience.

Canadian Steel Dispute Narrows Down to Decision of Union Director

(By The Canadian Press-

Participants in the Canadian steel dispute today looked to C. H. Millard, National Director of the United Steelworkers of America (C.I.O.) for the next move in the dispute which threatens to tie up Monday the three basic steel plants at Sydney, N.S., Hamilton and Sault Ste .Marie.

In conference with the Union's National Advisory Committee in Hamilton, Mr. Millard had before him a proposal by F. D. Kilbourn, Government Controller, for a 10-cents-an-hour wage increase in the three plants.

While Hamilton reports indicated the move would not be satisfactory to the union, a U.S.W.A. official at Sydney said strike action — scheduled for 6 a.m., E.D.T., Monday—might be at least "temporarily postponed" by the government move.

Labor department officials last night revealed that the government-appointed controller was making immediate application to Regional War Labor Boards concerned for the 10-cent increase, which, if approved, would become effective immediately at the Dominion Steel and Coal Company, Sydney, the Steel Company of Canada, Hamilton, and the Algoma Steel Corporation, Sault Ste. Marie.

Whether or not the increase would be retroactive would be left up to the commissioner, Mr. Justice W. D. Roach, who would also make recommendations re-

English War Bride Saved From Lake

Ottawa, July 12 (CP)—Quick action by Donald Brownrigg, 18, of Ottawa, saved an English war bride, in Canada only six weeks, from drowning in Dow's Lake here last night.

Mrs. Maragret Felteau, 26, Ottawa mother of two, was pulled from the water by young Brownrigg, when she sank for the third time some 25 yards from a boom.

Brownrigg said he had been forced to strike the struggling woman on the jaw before he could swim to safety with her.

HIGH TAXATION CRITICIZED IN BUDGET DEBATE

Changes Give Greater Relief to High Income Earners Than to Those In Low Brackets

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 12 — (CP) — A charge that income tax changes proposed in the budget gave greater relief to high income earners than to those in the low brackets was aimed at the government in the Commons yesterday by Stanley Knowles (CCF—Winnipeg North Centre).

Speaking during continuing budget debate, Mr. Knowles said the 1946-47 income tax rates were higher on incomes up to $3,000 than they were in 1941. On incomes between $3,000 and $30,000 the new rates were lower than in 1941.

He said it was his belief that rates in the lower brackets should have been greatly lowered before relief was given those in the high income brackets.

Mr. Knowles was one of 10 speakers to participate in the debate, scheduled to be resumed today. Others included Marcel Boivin (L — Shefford); T. L. Church (PC — Toronto Broadview); H. G. Archibald (CCF — Skeena); G. K. Fraser (PC — Peterboro West); Transport Minister Chevrier; Lionel Bertrand (L — Terrebonne); W. F. Kuhl (SC — Jasper-Edson); G. R. Webb (PC — Leeds) and Wilfrid Gariepy (Ind-Three Rivers).

After the House opened Prime Minister Mackenzie King said he expected to be able to announce today the personnel in the Canadian delegation to the peace conference. It was learned that up to yesterday Mr. King had not invited opposition leaders to attend.

Defence Minister Abbott disclosed that "appropriate" certificates thanking members of the Reserve Army for their service during the war have been authorized and will be issued to officers commanding.

Church Destroyed In Electric Storm

Collingwood, Ont., July 12 — (CP)— Fire last night completely destroyed the 75-year-old West Presbyterian Church, one of the landmarks of the Blue Mountain district, seven miles south of here. A bolt of lightning during a freak electrical storm split the tower in two and started the fire which destroyed the building in one hour.

Mrs. P. A. Little of Owen Sound and her small daughter lay on the floor of their cottage, watching the walls sway back and forth, until the roof was hurled through the air a distance of 400 feet. They escaped injury.

J. Players' store in Collingwood was also struck by lightning, the roof being torn off.

Battleship, Carrier Seen Scheduled To be Nearest Atomic Depth Charge

By ELTON C. FAY

Aboard U. S. S. Mt. McKinley, Bikini, July 12—(AP)—The old battleship Arkansas and the carrier Saratoga are on the hot spot for the second atomic bomb test July 25.

The veteran vessels showed up today among the cluster of ships which appear scheduled to be closest to the atomic depth charge which Vice Admiral W. H. P. Blandy expects to fling ships and parts of ships high on top of a gigantic column of water.

The Saratoga, which was far on the outside of the first target array, steamed into a new inner position today. The Arkansas, the oldest battleship in the United States navy which was damaged heavily in the first atomic blast, was manoeuvred not far from the carrier.

Admiral Blandy told a press conference that most of the changes in the guinea pig fleet lineup would be made near the centre, with the array of ships on the outer fringe modified but little.

The admiral, who is in command of the crossroads operation, announced also that the scheduled explosions hour for the second test would be 8:50 a. m. Bikini time July 25 (5:50 p. m. E.D.T. July 24). He explained that there had been some misunderstanding resulting in the previous announcement of 8:30 a. m. (5:30 p. m. E.D.T.

Sharp Lightning and Deluge Of Rain Accompany Storm

Ripping down out of wind-driven thunderheads, one of the severest electrical storms to whip this area swept over the city and district on Thursday night, leaving in its wake burned barns, dead cattle, damaged crops, and disrupted hydro and telephone services.

The storm struck with a savage fury shortly after nine o'clock heralded by a sudden deluge of rain that drove pedestrians scurrying for shelter. Forked rapiers of lightning zig-zagged down lighting darkened streets and buildings with a weird blue-white light. Rattling detonations, interspersed with vicious crashes accompanied the strange lighting effects of Nature.

A bolt crashed down on the pavement on Campbell Street, the intense heat of the electric charge causing approximately fifteen feet of pavement to raise. A city resident seated in a parked car on an adjacent corner stated that the vehicle was raised clear of its wheels by the lightning.

Prince Edward County and Central Hastings bore perhaps the heaviest brunt of the storm. A barn, owned by Everett Lancaster, East Lake farmer, was struck by lightning and burned to the ground with its contents of the season's crop. A gale-like wind lashed the flames to a fierce intensity and all efforts to extinguish the fire in the blazing building were futile.

Fortunately, Lancaster's livestock were huddled together in a nearby pasture field.

Huddled Under Tree.

Huddled under a tree on the farm of Fred McCaw, at Farnsworth, three miles west of Tweed, thirteen cattle were struck and killed by lightning.

Earl Graham, farmer residing two miles west of the village, found three of his best cows and the herd bull dead this morning as a result of the fury of a lightning attack.

Sweeping over the Tyendinaga district the storm struck in all its fury near the Mohawk Indian Reserve, uprooting a huge tree and sending a lightning bolt crashing through the roof of the residence of Mrs. Frank Doxtator, two miles north of Shannonville.

The storm took a heavy toll of trees and shrubbery throughout the entire district. Heavy limbs were ripped from trees by the high winds and carried for considerable distance in many places. Branch debris littered town, village and hamlet throughout the entire path of the storm.

Lights Flicker

In the city lights flickered off and on, and brilliant flashes of lightning affected Hydro systems. Finally the lights went out but came on after fifteen minutes of darkness. Hydro gangs patrolled the city with full equipment "shooting trouble" wherever it could be found.

Telephones here were not affected to any great extent, officials said, and no damage of a major nature was reported.

Several trees were blown down along the Picton-Wellington highway, and traffic was held up for a considerable length of time. In one place almost the entire crop of hay in a small field was picked up by the force of the gale and whirled high into the air and spread over the surrounding area.

A Wellington motorist was forced to stop his car on his way home from Picton as entire cocks of hay were blown across the highway.

Standing crops suffered heavy damage according to reports garnered from several districts this morning. Ripening grain was hard hit and many fields were reported to have been extensively damaged.

The terrific wind struck heavily in the Mountain View district with the greater part of the damage sustained in that area being confined to trees. Many were blown down while highways and township roads were littered with branch and limb debris. Hydro services in that part of Prince Edward were said to have been disrupted for upwards of an hour.

Niemoeller Plans Lecture Tour To Cities of U. S.

Frankfurt, July 12 — (AP) — Rev. Martin Niemoeller, famed German clergyman who was imprisoned in a Nazi concentration camp for eight years, expects to make a lecture tour of the larger cities in the United States next winter in an "attempt to explain the tired, apathetic state of mind of the German people."

The outspoken Protestant leader, who expressed the view that the United states was "too rapid" in her encouragement of the growth of free political parties in Germany, said in an interview yesterday that he had accepted an invitation to make a six to eight week tour of the United States under the auspices of the World Council of Churches.

"By the time I read America," he said, "the state of mind of the German people may have changed, but at present the people do not yet see what democracy means. They have no aim to live for."

The clergyman, who expects to embark for the United States in mid-November, said "American friends" had assured him that he would be permitted to leave occupied Germany.

Orangemen Parade On Glorious 12th

By The Canadian Press

Residents of many Ontario cities and towns and of centres in Western Canada awoke today to the shrill piping of fifes and the thump of the drums as members of the Orange Order launched the 256th observance of the "Glorious Twelfth."

At many points lodge members, wearing white suits with orange and blue ribbons and carrying bright lodge banners, marched through the streets preparatory to travelling to other towns for regional observances.

Toronto Orangemen assembled at Queen's Park for a six-mile march to Kew Beach in the east end of the city. Kilted pipers led some of the groups to the assembly point.

Good weather for the celebration prevailed in most of Canada. Ontario enjoyed a cool spell, welcome after yesterday's sweltering heat in the central part of the province.

Many war veterans were expected to swell the ranks of the marching lodges and early indications were that the celebration, recalling the victory of the Protestant William III over the Roman Catholic James II on the 70-mile-long Boyne river in Ireland, would be the most rousing in many years.

EXCEEDS WORLD RECORD OF 606 MILES PER HOUR

London, July 12 — (CP) — An official of the Gloster Aircraft Company said last night it was delivering to the R.A.F. for tests a jet-propelled Gloster Meteor IV that "has flown at speeds exceeding the world record" of 606 miles per hour.

TRAIN HELD UP TWICE

Manila, July 12 — (AP) — Masked and armed robbers held up the Tar-gac-san Jose passenger train on two successive nights at the Midway station of Bunos in Neuva Ecija province. Each time they boarded the train as it ground slowly into the station, forced all passengers to lie down in the aisles and made off with valuables and money estimated at between 5,000 and 20,000 pesos — $2,500 to $10,000.

Ralph Turner, School Principal At Coe Hill, Held

Former C.C.F. candidate for Hastings-Peterborough and principal of the Coe Hill public and continuation school, Mr. Ralph Turner, aged 35, of Coe Hill, was arrested in Toronto on Thursday and is being held without bail charged with indecent assault against male persons, otherwise boys in his school under 15 years of age.

According to provincial police here investigation in the case was commenced two months ago following rumors of the school principal's alleged behaviour and after a boy had been expelled from school. Turner also had acted in the role of Sunday School teacher at a Coe Hill church.

Investigation in the case was conducted by Provincial Constable S. W. Palmateer of Bancroft and Constable Ernest J. Keays of Belleville. Turner is being held in Belleville and has been remanded to appear at police court in Bancroft on Wednesday, July 17th.

Formerly of Kemptville, Turner taught school for two years at Detlor in North Hastings and has been at Coe Hill since 1941.

Taft Amendment To O.P.A. Bill Is Defeated

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

Washington, July 12—(AP)—A power drive to clinch price control exemptions for meat, milk and sundry other items gathered steam today as the Senate nudged an Office of Price Administration revival bill toward passage.

Republicans got behind the new campaign after barely failing to rip from the measure provisions which Senator Robert Taft (Rep.-Ohio) said could prevent manufacturers from getting needed price increases.

The Senate still had to take care of a few other proposed amendments before getting around to a vote of its own on final passage of the new O.P.A. bill.

One of the biggest barriers to a final vote disappeared late last night when the Senate refused by a 40-40 tie to delete from the revival bill sections which Senator Taft said would permit O.P.A. to refuse to raise any price ceiling it saw fit.

That action left unscarred a compromise plan, drafted by Senator Barkley, which would allow manufacturers, producers and processors the average prices of their various industries for 1940, plus the average cost increases in the industries since that time.

Just before the Chamber quit for the night at 10:55 p.m., it approved an amendment to assure that price ceilings for logs, lumber and lumber products will be high enough to enable producers to realize at least current production costs on 90 per cent of their output.

World Freedom Of Press Necessary To Preserve Peace

Chautauqua, N.Y., July 12 — (AP) — "If we are to avoid another war, there must be international freedom of the press," declared Frank E. Gannet, Rochester publisher.

Mr. Gannett, in an address delivered at the Chautauqua institution Wednesday night, praised Kent Cooper, executive director of the Associated Press, and Hugh Baillie, president of the United Press, for their efforts to obtain international guarantees of news-gathering freedom, but added:

"Nothing in this direction has been accomplished and nothing will be accomplished until America, with the aid of Great Britain, takes a determined stand."

"In the past few months there have been many quotations from the official newspapers of Russia that certainly misrepresent the facts in the international situation and endanger peace between the two countries (United States and Russia)," he said.

Two Kingston Men Seriously Hurt in Crash

Badly cut by flying glass and receiving other injuries when their truck went out of control and turning on its side crashed into a Hydro pole on West Bridge Street, two Kingston men, Edward Blakely and George Dwyer in charge of a moving van, were admitted to Belleville General Hospital early Thursday evening in serious condition.

According to police reports, the accident occurred as the driver of the moving van proceeding west on Bridge Street was forced to turn suddenly to the left to avoid a car ahead which had slowed abruptly to stop at Kellaway's store.

The moving van, apparently top heavy, tipped on its right side and crashed into a Hydro pole on the south side of the street pinning the driver and his companion in the crushed cab.

Unmindful of a possible explosion as result of gasoline from a ruptured feed line dripping on the hot exhaust, Tom Boyle and J. Keegan with one other man worked frantically to extricate the two men from their trapped position. Driver of the truck received a badly gashed arm, the bleeding being stopped by Mr. Boyle who hastily applied a tourniquet.

As a precautionary measure the local fire department was called and used foamite around the truck to minimize the danger of flames

Driver of the car which slowed suddenly in front of the Kingston truck was David Keene, 268 1-2 Front Street.

Pleading guilty to a charge of stealing a carton of cigarettes valued at $118 from the Canadian National Railways, Glen McAllister, formerly of Toronto, had judgment reserved by Magistrate T. Y. Wills in local police court Friday morning pending the hearing of a second charge against the accused.

McAllister also stood charged with having illegal possession of explosives and when the accused showed indecision in election of trial, the proceedings were laid over until this afternoon.

When arraigned on the second charge by Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, the accused declined the opportunity of securing the services of a lawyer, stating he "did not think it necessary." Accused, however, stated he was not quite ready to elect whether to be tried by the magistrate or by higher court.

"Whether you elect summary trial or trial by a higher court is entirely up to you," reminded the Magistrate, "but remember the county of Hastings is not going to support you until you make up your mind."

When arrested last July 2nd McAllister is alleged to have had in his possession a quantity of dynamite which was stored in a railway station locker at Belleville.

5 Crew Members Killed in Crash Of Giant Aircraft

Reading, Pa., July 12 —(AP)— Five men were killed and a sixth injured critically Thursday in what Transcontinental and Western Airlines said was the first fatal crash of a commercially owned Constellation transport, the world's largest passenger plane now in regular service.

TWA said the plane was on a routine training flight from its base here. The airline's Washington office announced the following crew list: First Officer Douglas Herrien, Alexandria, Va.; Capt. Norman A. Nilsen, Norfolk, Mass.; Engineer John Stauffer, Alexandria, Va.; Charles C. Semola, Arlington, Va.

Capt. R. F. Brown, whose home is in Coco, Fla., was thrown clear of the wreckage and is in serious condition.

Identity of the sixth man was not available immediately. Capt. Nilsen, before he died, told hospital attendants six persons were aboard the plane although TWA records listed only five.

The airliner smashed into an alfalfa field three miles north of here. Eyewitnesses said the plane was afire and obviously in trouble before it smashed into the field.

CARDINAL HLOND'S VIEW

Warsaw, July 12—(AP)—August Cardinal Hlond said last night that incidents such as the Kilece Pogrom of July 4 were precipitated by what he called a "deterioration" in the internal situation in Poland "due to Jews who today occupy leading positions in Poland's government and try to introduce a government structure which a majority of the people do not desire.

ARMS UNCOVERED BY BRITISH IN PALESTINE

British troops, members of the Cheshire Regiment in the Far East, display some of the ammunition uncovered during a surprise search of the collective settlement Jagur, near Haifa, recently. A report from this troubled sector revealed that almost 1,000 of the more than 2,000 Jews seized in the widespread arrests of June 29 had now been released.

Restaurant Men Approve of Brief To Government

Current problems confronting restaurant owners in Belleville and across Canada were discussed by members of the Eastern Ontario Branch of the Canadian Restaurant Association at a recent meeting in Belleville when local restaurateurs unanimously approved of a brief which in the near future will be presented to the government.

Growing costs of materials and difficulty in securing competent help are making it practically impossible for restaurant owners to serve certain items and still remain in business, it stated. To cover growing costs of materials restaurant owners will ask permission of Wartime Prices and Trade Board to increase meal prices accordingly.

Under present regulations many items popularly in demand cannot be served by restaurants because of increased costs. These must necessarily be removed from the menus.

Mrs. F. G. Montgomery, executive secretary of the Canadian Restaurant Association, attended the local meeting and led in discussion of current problems and stated that a brief was in course of preparation for presentation to the government.

Unless some measure of relief in the way of higher meal prices is granted, many local restaurnt owners state they will have to discontinue serving of full course meals and serve sandwiches only.

INTERNAL MATTER SAYS FOREIGN OFFICE

London, July 12 — (CP)—Britain regards the Greek plebiscite on return of King George as entirely an internal matter and will not make suggestions in regard to its form, the Foreign Office said today. Meanwhile, a Foreign Office spokesman continued, Britain will maintain troops in Greece for an indefinite period to maintain order if armed force should again be necessary.

Mayor Requested To Call Meeting Regarding Parade

Victoria, July 12 (CP)—City council yesterday has instructed Mayor Percy E. George to call a conference of ministers of all churches other than Roman Catholic for an expression of opinion from them on whether the city's streets should be used for a procession of the "most Blessed Sacrament" in connection with the forthcoming Roman Catholic centenary celebrations here.

Mayor George was also instructed to obtain legal advice as to whether the council had any legal power to prevent such a procession. The action followed a two-hour discussion of a letter of protest to council by Rev. J. B. Rowell, President of the Canadian Protestant League, Victoria branch.

The letter listed objections to the celebrations including:

Use of public parks for celebrations of grand pontifical mass "while all Protestants believe in full religious freedom for all, yet such practices as may be offensive to other religious bodies should be confined to the buildings or premises of the churches concerned" the letter stated;

Announcement that Mayor George will appear as a guest speaker along with Cardinal J. C. McGuigan, Archbishop of Toronto, and Premier John Hart of British Columbia.

"May I ask, is it the intention of the Mayor to be co-speaker with Cardinal McGuigan as Mayor and representative of the citizens of Victoria, or as a private citizen?" Mr. Rowell inquired. "If as the former, then I make bold to say there are thousands of Protestant citizens the Mayor will not represent."

TRENTON

Rotarians Hear About Uglier Parts of War

Trenton — Speaking to the Rotary Club on Monday evening last Rev. A. S. McConnell, M.E., rector of St. George's Church said: "People over here should know something about the uglier parts of the war". In a highly personalized address, the padre said his remarks would be "meandering and on behalf of the army padres overseas".

Remarking that "twenty of us looked after 16,000 men," Mr. McConnell said that his associates were wonderful chaps without any of the prejudices of denominationalism.

"On the continent we had our first skirmish of battle. It scared us to death at first but as we went inland, fighting became commonplace." Not unusual was the scene when he and Rev. Father Nathan each quickly gathered his flock together in separate corners of a field to administer communion at a time when strenuous fighting took place around them. A terrifying and tragic experience was when they were bombed by the R.A.F. by mistake.

"Fighting through France was the toughest bit of work in the world for the Canadian army," the padre said. "We carried around in our pockets, Jewish, Protestant and Catholic burial service texts which were accepted by each faith. When a boy's comrade was buried there was real sorrow in his face. At first they couldn't seem to believe what was happening. Later on they took it better and took their share of burial duties."

Padre McConnell said that although this sort of thing is hard to explain, people here should know because these are the scenes which stick in the soldier's mind.

He was impressed by the way the Belgian and French civilians went about their ordinary business in the open whereas soldiers would have been shot. In the final days of the war he saw the impressive "big show on the Rhine" when a massive smoke screen shielded the Canadians while gun emplacements were dug and ammunition brought up.

Closing with a word about padres Mr. McConnell said that the clergymen investigated many overseas marriages and found, in the main, that they were the type which might be expected to last. Padres were given many awards, during and after the war, indicative of an appreciation of having performed a useful service.

The speaker was introduced by Herbert Smith and thanked by Herbert Ditchburn.

Hot Sun Ignites Boxes In Window.

Fire from an unusual cause started a small outbreak in the window of Fern's Food Market on Front Street. Hot rays of the sun coming through a plate-glass window concentrated on some glassware on display to ignite small cartons behind it.

Neighbors noticed the smoke and called the fire department as the store was closed. Just as it arrived Leroy Reid came along with the key to the store. When the door was opened the blaze was soon extinguished.

The Ladies Auxiliary to the Quinte District Police Association entertained the gentlemen to a sumptuous picnic dinner at the Tourist Park on Dundas Street, Belleville, on Sunday afternoon last. Many police departments were represented from the outlying district.

Thomas J. Bata, head of the Bata Shoe Company, Batawa, it is learned, will marry Miss Sonja Wettstein of Zurich, Switzerland, the wedding to take place in Switzerland in November. Mr. Bata has been in Europe for the past few months and this interesting announcement was made from Zurich, on Wednesday last. The marriage will unite two families which have been friends for many years.

Read Grain Club Plots Inspected Boys Praised

Read Grain Club plots were scored by Harry W. Burns, Assistant Agricultural Representative, and a meeting of the club was held in the Parish Hall, Read, Tuesday evening.

Mr. Burns complimented the boys on their plots and discussed the characteristics of the different varieties of oats with them. Ajax was sown this year by all members of the club and is proving very favorable to conditions in the district.

A brief talk on grain judging followed, after which the boys judged and gave their reasons on a class of oats.

The boys were also given instructions regarding the preparation of their grain for the Achievement Day which will be held in conjunction with Shannonville Fair on September 21st.

Drugs Addiction Less Prevalent In Berlin

By HAL BOYLE

Berlin, July 12 —(AP)— Narcotics addiction is less prevalent today in Berlin, a city of fear and frustration than in New York or Hollywood, where life holds more security.

That is the opinion of Arthur Giuliani, United States Military Government Narcotics Control Officer and former agent of the Treasury Department's Bureau of Narcotics.

"There has been a slight increase in the use of narcotics among professional men, but it hasn't reached the proportions of a major social evil," he said.

This contrasts with the situation in Germany after the First Great War, when narcotics addiction became so widespread that the government was forced in 1928 to employ drastic curbs.

"Most of the present day addicts are physicians, victims of neurosis or German war wounded," said Mr. Giuliani.

"Very few druggists become addicts. I suppose they see too many victims themselves and what it does to them.

"There is no marijuana smoking here," Mr. Giuliani said, "the chief types of addiction are morphine and cocaine and synthetic narcotics made from coal tar."

Powdered opium sells illegally in Berlin's threadbare underworld for $1,200 a pound. So far no organized gangs have been found specializing in supplying the "unnkies" or addicts. Narcotics are just another sideline to black market operators dealing in cigarets, food and other scarce commodities. Supplies are looted from German army dumps.

"The Wehrmacht had literally tons of narcotics — enough to last Germany for at least ten years," said Mr. Giuliani. "The supply was scattered throughout the four zones. As the troops retreated they were told to blow up these narcotic dumps. But nine times out of 10 they failed to do so."

SAYS MISTAKE ON CARD HELPED IN ELECTION

Beatrice, Neb., July 12—(AP)—E. G. (Ned) Maxwell believes that a printer's mistake on his campaign card was a major factor in his victory in the race for the Republican nomination for sheriff. The printer had misspelled a word and every time Maxwell handed out a card he said, "there's a mistake on this card. Can you find it?" as a result, Maxwell said, his cards were read more thoroughly than those of other candidates.

Western Crops Above Average Says Commissioner

Winnipeg, July 12 (CP)—From the northwestern Ontario border to the Rockies hopes rose today that western Canada's praries would yield "better than everage" crops to restock the nation's almost empty granaries.

The optimism was tempered by realization that harvest time was still weeks away and in those weeks nature, storm, disease and pests could despoil the fertile lands. But the farmers' confidence was not without reason.

The situation was summed up by George McIvor of Winnipeg, chief commissioner of the board general condition of the western crop is much better than it was at this time last year." But all official comment is tinged with caution.

Despite the fact some areas in Manitoba and Saskatchewan still show effects of early drought, the crop outlook has improved materially in the last three weeks. In Manitoba particularly, prospects are bright in comparison to a month ago.

Alberta, blessed with plentimoisture, is said to have its best crop in years.

Approximately 25,650,000 acres have been sown to wheat in the three provinces—3,000,000 acres more than Ottawa sought in its long-term plan for starvation relief in Europ and Asia. If all goes well as much as 450,000,000 bushels might be harvested. But to reach that figure a lot of good fortune would be needed.

A general picture of the three provinces shows wheat averaging about 18 inches in height and 80 per cent in shotblade. More than 25 per cent is in head. This time last year it was shorter and between 60-70 per cent in shotblade although some was reported in head in Manitoba as early as July 4. It was nearly the end of July before it generally was in head.

British Services Aim at 100,000 Recruits Each

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 12 (CP)— Britain's three armed services are out to get 100,000 men each and strong competition has developed for potential recruits.

Besides stepping up pay rates all three have more or less streamlined their uniforms and improved conditions of service.

The R.A.F. has drawn up what so far is the most inviting pay scale while the army has done most in matters of dress. The navy as yet has announced little beyond an impending change in working dress.

The R.A.F. is not recruiting for air crew, though some commissioned and non-commissioned air crew are being retained. Conditions under which officers stay in have yet to be made public, but re-enlisting N.C.O.'s and other ranks receive enlistment allowances and gratuity guarantees.

Otherwise R.A.F. air crew henceforth will be recruited from the ranks of those who enlist in the ordinary way for ground crew and who subsequently apply for selection as candidates for air training.

R.A.F. pay is roughly equivalent to what civilians would receive in the corresponding trades. New quarters will provide individual rooms and more and better married quarters are planned.

The army places great store by its new walking-out and working uniforms. The dress uniforms resembles the pre-war "blue patrol" worn by British army officers, but is of better material. Dress forage caps will be worn off-duty, with peaked type reserved for parade.

Food Poisoning Creates Panic In Atlantic City

Atlantic City, N.J., July 12 —(AP)— Mass food poisoning created near panic in Kaufman's hotel here early today. Guests collapsed in the lobby, hallways and bedrooms of the five-storey hotel and 13 persons were taken to Atlantic City hospital.

Earlier reports from physicians who answered emergency calls estimated that 300 of the 400 registered guests had been stricken.

Mrs. Bertha Kaufman, one of the hotel's owners, was quoted by Police Captain Howard Lewis as saying that "only 40 guests were stricken."

"The rest became hysterical and thought they were," she added.

She attributed the food poisoning to cream puffs, baked at the hotel and served as desert at the evening meal.

Those taken to the hospital were released several hours later. None was reported in serious condition.

Newsprint Upped By $6.80 Per Ton By Three Firms

Montreal, July 12—(CP)— A price hoist of $6.80 per ton in the standard price of newsprint to customers both in the United States and Canada was announced today by three manufacturers. The increase was effective today.

The companies were Consolidated Corporation Ltd., Great Lakes Paper Company, and International Paper Sales Company Inc., which is the sales outlet of the Canadian International Paper Company.

A press release by the International Paper Sales Company referred to a price rise to United States customers, which it said was brought about by the recent revaluation of the Canadian dollar.

Later, however, E. L. Crooker, vice-president of Canadian International Paper, confirmed that the price increase also extended to customers in Canada.

The price of newsprint is variable in different cities, both in Canada and the United States. The present increase, for instance, brings the standard price of newsprint delivered at New York City to $73.80 a ton.

The price increase by the three companies followed announcement in Toronto Wednesday that Abitibi Power and Paper Company Limited had notified its customers in the United States of a similar rise and announcement of coresponding action in Vancouver yesterday by Powell River Company Limited.

From World's Granary

Canadians learned this week that this country has met her objective in the first half of the year by the exporting of four million long tons of wheat and flour — the equivalent of 150,000,000 bushels of wheat.

Trade Minister McKinnon, making public these figures, praises the co-operation of wheat producers of the Prairie Provinces. There were heavy marketings last fall along with the marketing of nearly 60,000,000 bushels of wheat in the January-June period, which is normally a time of relatively light marketings. In addition Canada has shipped to Britain from the Prairies 231,000 long tons of oats in the six months for human use. From June 30 last year to June 30 this year Canada exported 372,000,000 bushels of wheat.

Though this has left the carryover of wheat at minimum levels, it has made possible the relief of hunger to a large measure in Europe and elsewhere.

These figures give Canada a proud place before the world which already knows what this country has done in the war effort. Besides all these shipments Canada was able to provide other countries with nearly 160,0000,000 bushels of wheat and much flour, India, Belgium, France, Holland and Norway receiving such food.

That Brown-Hued Nickel

Most persons have been deceived some time or other no doubt by the brown nickel which has earned for itself a hearty opposition so strong that now it has been decided that no more of these will be put into circulation. That means there will be no more of them and also that those which are in circulation will be withdrawn as rapidly as possible. This may take a year and a half before they have largely disappeared.

This coin was constantly belittling itself. Made in the size of a nickel but not in the nickel's color, this coin has gone about often passing for a one-cent piece for though bigger than the copper, it is not so very much larger and it resembles much the copper in color. Canadians want a nickel that looks like nickel and looks like a five-cent piece, one that does not pass around looking like one-fifth of its value.

As for the mistakes and confusion it has caused they must have been many. Some persons rather than carry them have no doubt thrown them into a container to be disposed of when enough have been gathered. These will now likely come forth out of or be extracted from their hiding and be gathered into the place from which they will not be able to emerge to fool people anymore.

This coin must have caused on occasion many persons to think that they were short-changed when one of these passed into their possession. This would naturally call for an explanation or suspicious scrutiny at very close hand. Then too there have been mistakes which were not discovered all because of the color of this piece of coinage.

Science in the News

Science occupies a large place in the news today. Yesterday it was a story of the possibilities of the rocket with predictions of a range of twenty thousand miles and with a speed great enough to girdle the globe in about one hour and a half. As an AP writer said, in speaking of the search for a 2,000 mile test ground for these missiles the hint is that the next need of scientists will be "a private planet of their own about the size of the earth" in order to hold tests.

Ever since the summer of a year ago when the first two atomic bombs were dropped over Japan, the speculation and talk of mankind has been this latest missile which was given a new test the week before last at Bikini with the plans for the dropping of another bomb in a short time to explode under the water of the Pacific. This it is said will hoist a million tons of water high into the atmosphere as a mighty column.

These inventions and discoveries are amazing because they are new and because mankind in general has not been brought close to them and because outside of the scientists few men have very definite notions about them except of their power.

This development has filled human life with more wonder than followed the days of the First World War. There were great predictions of the advance of the airplane after the First World War in which it was used as a weapon. Aviation grew under the auspices of peace and made fast strides to change many of the ways of living. The coming of the Second World War gave aviation a mighty spurt forward with developments in the years of war which could not have been looked forward to because they were so far ahead of human prediction. Aviation, since the war ended a year ago, is not halting. It is being used in the development of trade and transportation. At the same time there has entered into the world this mighty force of atomic energy which in time may create wide modifications of the ways of life because of the possibilities of the use of this power for civilian use.

At the same time as the march of these developments there go on discussions for the permanent peace of the world with the effort to reach security and assure the unrestricted development of democracy.

In a very true sense the people of this age are living in a wonderful and epoch-making era of the world's history.

History in Letters From Soldiers

Public libraries and historical societies will miss the bus if they fail to acquire the largest possible collection of eyewitness accounts of World War II. Official documents and the writings of the higher-ups come to them as a matter of routine, but they should not be satisfied with these alone. They should also acquire the letters written home by the men in the planes, in the foxholes, tanks, prison camps, aircraft carriers, all other classes of naval craft, and shore bases. Cherished as they are by the wives and parents of servicemen, these closeups of history will not be hard to get. It would be a cause for pride to any family that libraries and historical societies want for permanent possession these footnotes to the history which their young people had a hand in making. These personal chronicles of World War II will increase in interest and in value with the passing of the years, and it is only common prudence for the present possessors to see that they have proper protection from fire and loss.

Honor Inventor of Bicycle

A little more than a century ago this blacksmith saw a local carpenter astride his dandy-horse — a frame and wheels propelled by pushing the ground with the feet. That gave Macmillan a thought. In June, 1842, he proudly rode his new home-made pedal-propelled contraption seventy miles to Glasgow. It became known as the bicycle, and he became known as "The Devil on Wheels." Achieving a speed of eight miles an hour, he was once fined for "furious driving."

At the recent memorial ceremony in Scotland, Sir Harold Bowden, president of the National Committee on Cycling, estimated that 70,000,000 bicycles are in use the world over.

Fewer Clergymen in Britain

A rather arresting — and rather disturbing — sentence from a recent University Sermon at Cambridge by the Bishop of Liverpool: "In the thirteenth century there were about 57,000 clergy in this country ministering to a population of 3,000,000. Every fiftieth man in those days was in Holy Orders. Today the population is twenty times as great, and there are about the same number of clergy and ministers of all denominations. One in every thousandth man is a clergyman."

SIFTING THE MAIL

I sift the morning mail to see
Just what it holds of joy for me.

I put the glass-front bills aside.
(Why start the morning teary-eyed?)

I let the one-cent matter wait.
I know just what it comes to state.

Each circular has news to tell
Of stuff the sender wants to sell.

I'll read it, though there's naught I lack,
But first I'll finger through the stack

To see if there is one today
From daughter Jannie, far away.

Yes, and another surely penned
In the handwriting of a friend.

Let business wait! My first concern
Is news of those I love to learn.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS.

20 YEARS AGO

JULY 12TH., 1926.

The city is filled today with visitors from far and near to see and take part in the mammoth Orange Walk; over one hundred lodges are present.

Extensive alterations and improvements are being made to the former Anglo-American Hotel Block on Front Street.

Mrs. Henry Alford, North Front Street, is one of the first if not the first, to enjoy new potatoes and beans from her garden. The potatoes are of good size and well developed, considering the backward season.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred McCargar and son, Lorne, of Moose Jaw, Sask., are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Ray Carr, Chatham Street, and other relatives.

30 YEARS AGO

JULY 12TH., 1916.

The staff of the Thompson Furniture Company of this city did the street decorating in Trenton for the celebration there today.

Chief of Police John Newton has returned home from Kenora, Ontario, where he attended the annual convention of the Chief Constables' Association of Ontario. He was elected a member of the executive committee.

40 YEARS AGO

JULY 12TH., 1906.

The 12th. of July is not being celebrated in this city today. The local Orangemen went to Trenton for the big celebration in that town.

It is estimated that 1500 persons went to Trenton today on the boats for the Orange celebration there.

The members of the Boys' Brigade in connection with St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church are in camp at Twelve O'Clock Point and they are having a wonderful time.

Contractor Frank Dolan of this city is making arrangements to commence shortly on a large contract for cement sidewalks in Brockville.

Mr. James Meagher of Buffalo, N.Y., is visiting friends here.

50 YEARS AGO

JULY 12TH., 1896.

Yesterday was the hottest day of the season so far; the thermometer registered 92 degrees in the shade at noon.

Messrs. James and John Van-Allen of Rochester, N.Y., formerly of Belleville, are renewing acquaintances in town.

Messrs. S. Clarke, J. Thompson and Charles Schuster wheeled to Campbellford today.

Mr. W. C. MacLean, a popular old Belleville boy, left today for Montreal, after spending a two weeks' vacation with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Donald MacLean, Alexander Street.

Mr. Frank Dixon of Toronto is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Dougall, Hotel Street. He is a brother of Mrs. Dougall.

Mr. Charles Brockhurst, of Buffalo, N.Y., is visiting relatives in the city.

Mr. and Mrs. Claud Armstrong have returned to Toronto after spending two weeks' vacation here. Mr. Armstrong was a former member of the staff of the Dominion Bank here.

Bracken Criticizes Peacetime Budget In Network Speech

Ottawa, July 12—(CP)—In the second of a series of free broadcasts allotted to political parties, John Bracken, Progressive Conservative leader, Wednesday night criticized the federal government's first peacetime budget in an address over the CBC trans-Canada network.

The opposition leader dealt particularly with the government's proposal to establish new relations with the provinces on an individual basis. This, he said would "result in a maximum of ill-will and minimum of efficient co-operation."

In addition, the policy substituted "coercion for conference and dictation for consultation."

The Progressive Conservative party stood for adequate federal aid to the provinces on the basis of fiscal need, he said.

Canada needed a different attitude by the Dominion government toward preservation of the federal system: "A policy not of usurpation of provincial rights by coecion, but of strengthening the fiscal position of the provinces by co-operation; a policy not of maximum centralization and threatened heavy taxation, but of maximum provincial autonomy strengthened by federal aid; a policy in the economic field not of rationed scarcity but of full production of needed goods."

The government's post-war administration had resulted in shortages and lessened incentive. It had failed to accomplish "effective" reconstruction in Canada.

The "minor tax reductions offered in the budget were "nothing but political propaganda as far as this year is concerned." There could be no worthwhile reduction of taxation until the government put a stop to its extravagance.

Official Inquiry Into Killing Has Been Ordered

Guelph, July 12 —(CP)— Official investigation opened today into the killing of 18-year-old Donald Parks, prisoner at the Ontario Reformatory here who was shot fatally by guards after what was described as an escape attempt in which Parks attacked a guard with a pair of tailor's shears.

Parks was shot and killed late yesterday. He had fled under a hail of bullets from guards' guns across the lawn in front of the reformatory and was in a field across the highway when a bullet struck him in the head. He had been hit in the legs twice before that.

Three guards were involved in the shooting, one armed with a rifle and the two others with revolvers.

Col. Hedley P. Basher, governor of the reformatory, will open the official inquiry today. An inquest will be held some time next week.

Col. Basher said that Parks drew the shears from his clothing as he and other prisoners were being marched back to their quarters after the day's work in the tailor shop. As the gang reached the prison yard Parks was said to have attacked guard Reuben Biddle with the shears and then made a break for freedom. He was pursued by guards Laverty, Hesky and Haveline and finally dropped, fatally wounded, in the field. Prison officials said an autopsy will be performed.

Calculated Attempt To Discredit Union Says Harry Davis

Toronto, July 12 —(CP)— Harry Davis, vice-president of the Canadian Seamen's union, in a statement last night asserted that his arrest earlier yesterday on a charge of robbery with violence was "a calculated attempt to disrupt negotiations and to discredit the union."

He referred to negotiations between the union and Great Lakes shipping operators being conducted before Mr. Justice S. E. Richards, federally-appointed conciliator of the wages-hours dispute. Davis is one of five men who have been charged in connection with the abducting and beating and robbery of Alex Morrison, a Toronto private investigator, who was taken from his hotel at Port Colborne by five men on June 20 at the height of the C. S. U. strike and found hours later, dazed and beaten, on the highway.

ROOKIE CONSTABLE PRAISED

Niagara Falls, July 12—(CP) —High praise from senior officers and firemen went to a rookie constable, Thomas Keep for the rescue of a local resident from the third floor of a building here. Smelling smoke, Keep turned in the fire alarm, rushed into the house to rouse the occupants and found Jack Campbell unconscious with a mattress smouldering under him.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

POISON IVY

For sheer lack of space I discontinued filing remedies from readers for ivy poisoning.

But I'll mention here a few remedies that seem rational — to me — hoping you don't know how irrational I am.

One woman's doctor suggested keeping dressings wet with lime water, another suggested applying zinc oxide ointment, a third prescribed a drugstore lotion, all with no results. She continued to suffer excruciating discomfort from pain and itching which prevented sleep nights. Her country doctor finally advised her to use Epsom salts (magnesium sulfate) about four ounces (6 heaping tablespoonfuls) dissolved in a pint of hot water, keeping the affected skin surface wet with this constantly. She kept white stockings on her arms and kept them saturated with the solution. "It worked like magic."

Another woman used thin slices of bread moistened with cold water and thickly spread with baking soda, placed on the affected skin. "It gave instant relief". When the bread dried out she removed it and applied fresh bread and soda, moistened and spread with the saleratus as before, retained with bandages.

A man says his father suffered for years from ivy poisoning, and found no satisfactory remedy until he tried keeping the affected surface covered with dressings wet with 5 per cent potassium permanganate solution. "This is marvelous — stops itching immediately and heals blisters quickly, but of course is repulsive in color." Potassium permanganate makes a violet-red colored solution in water and stains skin and dressings or clothing, and these stains are difficult to remove. Three level teaspoonfuls in a pint would be approximately 5 per cent solution.

Several readers have found momentary application of water as hot as bearable — say by holding the affected area of skin under the stream from hot water faucet — will bring relief for a while for the itching when the itching drives one — now I wonder if that was what made me the way I am. It was about twenty years ago that I became involved in a mess of poison ivy when I went out in swim trunks and ran the lawn mower around the overgrown yard of a cottage on Canandaigua Lake — the battle began in July and lasted for nearly a year. The itching — I still feel mad when I think about it, for it was just after my own bitter experience that the new one-two-three shot treatment came to my notice.

This new treatment is neat, simple, available wherever there is a physician to administer it, and although it is no sure cure it does bring prompt and grateful relief in most cases of ivy poisoning. It is an intramuscular or deep hypodermic injection of a dose of ivy toxin, a minute quantity of this so-called antigen, once a day, for one, two or three times — in many cases only one or two doses may be necessary.

For the relief of the maddening itching that persists in some cases for months or years after the original attack of ivy poisoning, this ivy antigen treatment is, I think, the best bet — and in such circumstance I believe the smallest dose not oftener than twice a week for not more than six doses would be well worth trying.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

What to Do

We have a great bunch of quicks here in ———— so I ask your advice. What would you do if your heart pounded hard and fast all the time and especially on any exertion and if you were so tired all the time. (Mrs. T. P.)

Answer—I'd consult a physician.

No Horse Sense

Any one with a grain of horse sense would know that if a person were to go out and run around in the snow barefoot or half naked in the winter time he will certainly catch cold. (J.F.P.)

Answer—I wouldn't know — I have no horse sense. I have done exactly that many times, but I didn't catch anything.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Why wasn't the year 1900 a leap year?

According to the Gregorian calendar, which was introduced by Pope Gregory in 1582 A.D. and which was adopted by Great Britain and the English Colonies in 1752, every year whose number is divisible by four is a leap year, with the exception of those years whose numbers are divisible by 100 and not 400.

Thus the years 1700, 1800 and 1900 were not leap years, while 1600 was and 2000 will be.

The Gregorian calendar was a modification of the Julian calendar, which was introduced by Julius Caesar in 46 B.C. Roman astronomers at that time fixed the solar year at 365 days and six hours.

The extra six hours were withheld and added to the calendar as a 366th day every four years.

The Romans called this the "bis-sextile year, the term being from "bis," twice, and "sextus," sixth. It was so called because it followed February 24, the sixth day before the calends of March, and consequently was counted as a second "sixth" day.

Under the Gregorian system the odd or "intercalary" day is added after February 28. But it was found that the addition of a whole day every fourth year is a few minutes too much to make the calendar year come out even. This was adjusted by omitting the extra day — February 29 — in every concluding year of the centuries except when the year's number is divisible by 400.

"Leap year" as the English name of the bis-sextile year antedates the Gregorian calendar several centuries and goes back at least to the 13th century. It is supposed to have been suggested by the fact that in leap years any fixed date after February "leaps over" a day of the week and falls on the next weekday but one to that on which it fell the year before.

BOY HONORED FOR COURAGE

Chatham, July 12 —(CP)— Fiftenn-year-old Herbert Morgan, who ignored a spray of stray bullets and the fact that he was a poor swimmer to go to the rescue of a chum, has been presented with the Dow award for civilian courage. Morgan's chum, Walter Davidson, 14 died from a bullet wound received when swimming. Chatham city council has recommended a Royal Humane Society medal for Morgan.

The provisional International Aviation Organization, which was set up at a United Nations Conference in Chicago last December, and which recently was given a permanent home site in Montreal, Que., has approved a proposal providing for ships at strategic points in the Atlantic from Canada and the U. S. to Great Britain and Portugal, as illustrated above. As floating communication stations, the vessels would maintain constant watch on plane positions, provide meteorological observations and engage in emergency rescue work. Canada has peculiar circumstances in its favor as a strategic aviation centre and aviation may prove to be one of the most important factors in future world affairs.

Howard Hughes Suddenly Takes Turn For Worse

Los Angeles, July 12 (AP) — His battle for life suddenly weakening, Howard Hughes, 41, beckoned his doctor to his bedside last night and whispered a halting story of the cause of his fiery crash Sunday in an experimental plane.

Explaining carefully that the rear set of propeller blades on the right engine of his twin-engined plane had suddenly reversed pitch during the first test hop, the millionaire maker of planes and movies said:

"It felt as if some giant had the right wing of the airplane in his hand and was pushing it back and down.

"Tell the army to look in the wreckage, find the rear half of the right propeller, and find out what went wrong."

In a bulletin on Hughes' condition, issued when he disclosed the airman's first words on the cause of the crash, the doctor said:

"Howard Hughes has suffered a turn for the worse in his fight for life. His left lung has failed to respond and is still functionless. He is surviving through the restricted use of his right lung, to the extent permitted by his crushed chest, which includes nine broken ribs."

Hughes' XF-11 photo-reconnaissance craft, said to be the world's fastest long-range plane, struck and set afire three houses and a garage in Beverly Hills before crashing and exploding in a vacant lot.

REFUSES TO BE LAUNCHED

Brussels, July 12 —(AP)— "Koning Albert," a new Belgian motor vessel of 2,920 tons, stoutly refused to be launched after Queen Mother Elizabeth had christened it with the traditional champagne bottle. When the wedges had been knocked away and the "Koning Albert" still remained motionless, a huge tree trunk was used as a buttering ram. This being unsuccessful, four powerful tugs had a go at it but the wires snapped and the ship remained on the ways.

Briefs From Britain

HIGH TAXATION

No Special Provision

Finance Minister Ilsley said the recent change in the exchange rate of the Canadian dollar made no special provision for the protection of exporters who had not completed a transaction, exceptions were those who held forwarding exchange contracts with the Foreign Exchange Control Board.

Suggestions for reduction in government expenditures to assist in reducing taxation were made by Mr. Fraser who said he had gone through the estimates and had found reductions in only four government departments. All the others had increases.

He suggested a reduction in the staff of War Assets Corporation, which had 7,000 employees with a salary which he estimated at more than $1,100,000. Expenditures of the Canadian information service also could be cut down.

Mr. Fraser asked Veterans Minister Mackenzie if he could say how much it had cost to "tear down" part of Toronto's Sunnybrook Veterans Hospital to put in an elevator which had been "forgotten."

He also expressed criticism of the government's cost-of-living index, which was made up of items which the consumer could not buy, such as rice, raisins, currants and canned peaches.

Praises Assistance

"Has the minister seen any canned goods?" interjected a member.

Mr. Fraser said the index also contained such unobtainable items as rationed foods, men's topcoats, men's suits, men's shirts and children's shoes.

Mr. Fraser said he had forecast May 25 there would be no income tax reductions because of the continued "waste and extravagance" of government departments. As examples of "extravagance" he pointed to the Film Board and to a now discontinued Prices Board radio serial entitled "George's Wife," which cost more than $4,000 weekly for the English version and more than $1,000 for the French version.

Mr. Webb said he wanted to thank the government for its aid to the farmers, "belated and inadequate" though it was. Assistance for agriculture was at least a step in the right direction.

The government had done nothing to assist those who helped the country get its real wealth. They should get a fair share of the national income.

There also was nothing in the budget for the secondary services and industries.'

Production was being paralyzed and risk capital frozen by the government's failure to have a policy and stick to it. The daily life of Canadians was affected.

Average Earner Hit Claim

Business was unable to produce because of taxation and price controls. Production would avert the danger of inflation and provide "real" employment, thus promoting labor peace.

Mr. Webb said the new exemptions on personal income tax should have been higher and more immediate. The present tax rates left the average wage earner little more than enough to live on.

Mr. Knowles read tables which he said showed that under proposed income tax changes single persons and married persons without children would get greater relief than a married person with two children.

The relief for a single person making $1,300 annually would amount to $51; for a married person without children to $31, and to married persons with two children to $14. As to incomes from $1,500 to $5,000, the greatest relief went to married persons without children. From $5,000 to $200,000 the single person got the greatest relief.

Mr. Kuhl took issue with charges that private enterprise had failed because it had not provided employment. It was not the object of private enterprise to provide employment. Its job was to produce goods no matter how many hands it required.

Mr. Boivin, covering a wide range of topics in his speech, called for a general amnesty or a summary conviction of 30 days for army deserters.

Mr. Church said there was over-taxation in Canada and the people were losing confidence in the government.

Mr. Bertrand urged abolition of the penalty for filing income tax returns when the delay is not the fault of the taxpayer.

Mr. Gariepy, who adjourned the debate, called for the appointment of a diplomatic representative to the Vatican.

UNION OFFERED

garding hours of work, union security, and other matters in dispute. If the commissioner recommended the 10-cent increase be retroactive the controller would make further application to the regional boards.

The U.S.W.A. National Advisory Committee already in session at Hamilton to consider the government's Wednesday move appointing a controller over the plants, had this latest development before it for discussion today.

Yesterday Mr. Millard said the newly appointed controller "is controller in name only" and actually the companies still were operating the mills and reaping the profits. The issue still was between the steel workers and the companies, "which could settle the dispute by making an adequate offer."

Meanwhile Mr. Justice Roach met in Montreal with company and union officials in closed discussions from which no statement by any of the three parties was forthcoming.

The union, representing 14,000 workers in the three plants, has asked a basic wage of $33.60 weekly and a 40-hour week.

BANKING IN ACTION

Warehouses bulging with the commerce of a continent—spices, canned goods, furniture, metalware—with all the requirements of a nation. The steady flow of these goods from factory to warehouse and on to the retailer and consumer is an example of "Banking in Action".

BANK credit and essential banking services figure largely in the operations of Canadian wholesale trade. The Canadian Bank of Commerce numbers among its customers many of the most successful wholesale houses in Canada.

In addition to other services we supply working capital for the purchase of goods from the manufacturer and the expenses involved in their sale to the retailer. We also assist the wholesaler in obtaining payment for the goods by undertaking collection of drafts all over Canada and abroad. These various operations greatly facilitate the flow of trade and benefit the ultimate consumer.

If you have a business problem which entails any banking service, see our local Manager. What Banking in Action has achieved for the wholesaler, it can do for you.

Sir Frederick Grant Banting—A Tribute. By W. E. Robinson.

+ + + An Achievement—and an Inspiration + + +

MAY 16TH, 1921, he stood in a small, dingy room in the Medical Building of the University of Toronto, a self-appointed seeker, untitled, unpaid, but sustained by a conviction that he was on the track of a great discovery.

His name was Frederick Grant Banting, Canadian Surgeon, and he had sold his office furniture and instruments to provide funds for his living costs.

He believed he had the key to the dread riddle of diabetes, a disease that had baffled medical science since the dawn of history. Medical opinion was skeptical, but physiologists and biochemists added their efforts and soon the rumour was whispered in hospitals and stricken homes "Banting of Toronto has discovered a treatment for diabetes".

From all over the continent, haggard, doomed diabetics came to Toronto, hoping against hope, their very lives at stake in Banting's grim race to perfect Insulin in time.

The rest is history, as is the fact that Sir Frederick Grant Banting died as he had lived—in the service of his country and of humanity. Today, 25 years after his discovery, his work has saved uncounted thousands of lives, and the story of his achievements has become a glowing example and an inspiration to all Canadians . . . giving us an assurance of an ever-increasing measure of health and prosperity in the Canada Unlimited of the future.

WEDDINGS

FIERHELLER—FITCHETT

A quiet but pretty wedding took place in St. James Baptist Church parsonage, Hamilton, Ontario, on July 6, when Mary Marguerite, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Fitchett, Trenton, became the bride of Arthur Elmer Fierheller, Hamilton, son of Mrs. L. Kennedy and the late Mr. E. E. Fierheller, Tillsonburg. The Rev. R. Ziemann officiated.

The bride looked lovely in a floor length gown of white satin and lace with a veil of tulle illusion caught with orange blossoms. She carried an arm bouquet of Talisman roses and white sweet peas. Mrs. Elmer Bradshaw, sister of the groom, was matron of honor, wearing a floor length gown of pink net over taffeta with matching headdress with a bouquet of pink roses and sweet peas.

Kelly Family Holds 17th Annual Reunion

Ideal picnic weather prevailed all day on Wednesday, July 3rd., 1946, when the seventeenth annual Kelly reunion was held at Crescent Beach, Oak Lake. Members of the large family began to assemble by eleven o'clock and at one all sat down for a bountiful repast, after grace had been sung. Following the dinner, the meeting was called to order and the secretary presented her report as capably as usual.

There were eight births, and two marriages, and of the number of years the family has been gathered together, this is the first year there were no deaths. The minutes were unanimously voted correct.

The president made a few remarks and then called on Rev. Mr. Beazer for a few words and also Mrs. Beazer. The following were elected to hold office for 1947-48: President, Samuel Kelly, moved by Roy Bartlett, seconded by Murray Morgan; Secretary, Mrs. Annie Lowery, moved by Mrs. Blake McMullen, seconded by Muriel Van DeBogart; Press Secretary, Mrs. Allan Van DeBogart, moved by Muriel Finkle, seconded by Mrs. Murray Morgan. Sports Committee, Chairman, Allan Finkle, moved by Wm. Kelly, seconded by Mrs. Roy Grooms with the following assistants Georgina Goodfellow, Harry Morgan, Bessie McMullen, Billy Kelly.

A discussion as to the time for the next reunion and the place where it will be held resulted in the decision of Crescent Beach, Oak Lake on the first Wednesday of July, 1947. The retiring president then called on the new president for a few remarks and the meeting was adjourned. The crowd then went to the sports field where the following sports were held: Boys and girls race, 6 and under, Helen Kelly, Ruth Morgan.

All taking part received a prize. Girls under 10, Marion Kelly, Ruth Morgan; Boys under 10, Harold Kelly, Gary Kelly; Girls under 14, Dorothy Kelly, Aileen Morgan; Boys under 14, Harold Kelly, Don Baldree; Girls over 14, Shirley Kelly; Boys over 14, Harry Morgan; Five minute race Ladies, Mrs. Allan Van DeBogart; Five minute race, Gents, Roy Morgan; Paper plate race, Roy Morgan and Madeline Kelly; Cracker and Whistle race, Ladies, Helen Bartlett; Cracker and Whistle race, Gents, Murray Morgan; Shirt and Tie Race, Harry Morgan and Georgina Goodfellow; Bean count, Samuel Kelly; Youngest baby on grounds was 13 months old Gwenythe Coombes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reg. Coombes; Oldest couple on grounds, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Grooms

The program of sports concluded with a peanut scramble, free for all.

Several of the families enjoyed picnic supper together and as the good-byes were said, all departed, feeling the outing had been a day well spent and looking forward to the family reunion another year.

N. Z. SERVICEMEN GO FOR NEW JOBS

Wellington, N.Z. (CP)— Only one in every three servicemen demobilized in New Zealand has returned to his pre-war employment. A total of 47,164 have returned to their jobs, while 35,127 have taken up new employment on their own initiative.

The Rehabilitation Department has placed a further 18,279 in new jobs, including 2,770 trained at government centres where discharged servicemen are taught a trade. A further 3,358 of these placed by the department have received subsided wages while training with private employers. The remaining servicemen are either not yet ready to take jobs or have re-entered the services. Only 155 are unemployed.

"Shining Missiles" Are Reported Seen

Stockholm, July 12 — (AP) — Shining missiles seen travelling at great altitude with high speed caused speculation today that Russians are conducting rocket experiments on Baltic bases.

Similar sights two months ago were reported from about 10 places in Sweden and several places in Finland.

The newspaper Aftonbladet quoted a Swedish bomb technical expert as saying the sights occurred too frequently to be 'celestial phenomena.

How You Can Lose Weight

Ann Miller exercises to stay in the pink.

By HELEN FOLLETT

In the springtime, gentle Annie, when the bathing season is in the offing—only two months away—the girl of the too-abundant shape should make an effort to get in better form. Bathing suits are revealing. They make a girl painfully conscious of the spread amidships, thick thighs, ankles that are heavy. She desires above all things in this troubled world to flaunt a fine figure.

There are ways of doing it. There are chances of reform even for the middle-aged woman who has acquired what is known as the housewife's droop, too much flesh below the waist—front, back and sides. So why not up and at the fat cells, tell them to scat and begon?

Weak Spirit

The trouble with reducing is that the spirit is weak. Few candidates for slimness continue long enough the diet that is fat-free, low in sweets and starches. If they'd shake off the extra tonnage, they'd not only look better but feel better. Excess weight is a health menace of the first water.

Live mainly on lean meats, fish, poultry, green salads, vegetables that grow above ground, butter-milk, cottage cheese, fruits. Avoid butter, cream, fat meats, pastries, macaroni, cereals, or a least cut them down.

Take tea and coffee clear. Now don't shed tears, Missus Hippy. You'll like clear tea and coffee after you get used to them. After all, you are working in a good cause, the cause of health and good appearance.

Every morning, every night, have ten minutes of exercise. Bend. Throw the arms out at the sides and pivot at the waistline. Place the feet far apart, have the arms extended on a line with the shoulders, drop the torso until the buttocks rest on your heels.

Up on theh toes, then at it again. Thighs will lose surplus inches, ankles will be trimmer, the circumference of the section below the waist line will be smaller.

If possible, have a brisk walk every day. Don't weaken. Continue for three months and you will be rewarded.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

This Stepdaughter Wants to do What's Right

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am a junior in high school. My mother is soon going to be married for the second time, and I have several questions that are puzzling me.

1. After her marriage, what should I call my stepfather? My own father is living, and so I would not want to call him "father." Ever since I have known him, I have called him and referred to him as "Mr. Smith." Should I continue to do this? Or what would suggest?

2. Shall I call his sisters "Aunt" or continue to address them as "Mrs." or "Miss" as the case may be?

3. How should I introduce my stepfather to my friends? Should I say that he is my stepfather or just introduce him as "Mr. Smith?"

4. When my mother's name changes, am I supposed to change my name from (let's say) "Jane Doe" to "Jane Smith", or do I remain "Jane Doe"?

5. Can you suggest some ways for me to feel at ease with my stepfather so that neither of us will be strained?

J. D.

1. What name you finally choose to call your stepfather will depend on how your relationship with him develops. Since you have been calling him and referring to him as "Mr. Smith", it's best for you to continue with this until after the marriage .... and then you might very soon after talk over this name-question with your mother and possibly with your stepfather too. The decision might be for the use of "Uncle Richard" this title seems to be an ever-present help in this and similar circumstances, or your devotion and admiration of him may urge you to call him "Dad".

2. I suggest that you continue to call his sisters "Mrs." or "Miss", until you get to know them better too, when they may suggest you call them "Aunt"

3. Yes, when introducing your stepfather to your friends, it's sensible to make the relationship clear by saying, "Miss Brown, this is my stepfather, Mr. Smith", or "Miss Brown... my stepfather Mr. Smith."

4. Your name does not change when your mother changes her name by marriage....you remain "Jane Doe" unless at some future time your stepfather suggests adopting you and changing your name to "Smith", and you agree to this procedure.

5. The fact that you ask this forthright and constructive question means that you're very far along on your road to establishing a fine, understanding relationship with your prospective stepfather. It takes two to put a "step"-relationship on a good and friendly basis, and the chances are that if you keep your adaptability polished up and your tact on tip-toe, your stepfather will meet you more than half-way and you will both "feel at ease" and will charmingly understand each other's point of view.

There is no rationing of eating enjoyment, and a veal cutlet dipped in milk, rolled in well-seasoned crumbs and given a slow oven bake should be a happy choice for Sunday dinner. Veal takes kindly to braising too, and from your half-pound purchase you should have sufficient, augmented with vegetables, for Monday's top-o'-the-stove meal. A crisp salad plate with devilled egg and cheese wedge is a quick trick for a summer night when the mercury bespeaks freedom from kitchen drudgery. Wednesday's meat loaf will provide for a guest, plus a left-over for Thursday's meal. Friday's fish will bring you all the goodness of the sea. And a fine finish to a week of good eating (which, incidentally, sparesf you a token) would be a lamb chop with fresh mint sauce as its flavour partner.

The Attractive Woman Is One Who Keeps Herself Occupied

Vivacious Paulette Goddard is al ways on the go, doing something inter esting

By HELEN FOLLETT

If a woman is to be fully alive, hang onto her youth, if she is to be contented and happy—and that is the goal of all of us—she must have some interesting project or work to do, something to excite enthusiasm within her soul.

Acivity will keep her on her toes, her blood streams galloping. She can't just plug along, be of no use to herself or anyone else, and be attractive or interesting.

State of Self-Indulgence

When one drifts, lives in a state of self-indulgence, one learn nothing new, never gets places. Many a family has a member of that type. Lets the others carry the load. Never lends a helping hand, never offers gifs of time, labor or money.

And how does she look?

Every year her face takes on more sag and wrinkles. Every year her voice is oftener raised in complaint. She is, really, just sitting around waiting to die.

No woman should permit herself to slump, to go to seed. She should be up and doing for her own sake as well as for the sake of those who have to live with her. Activity is the law of life.

Much Work

There is much work to be done in this world. Various charitable projects are anxious and eager for help. With the world in a pitiful condition it is wicked shame for a woman to be idle, worthless, of no account

Let the subject of this sad tale come to life, get busy, stop being selfish; she will drop ten years from her faded appearance. It is never too late to youthify, to perk up. With new interests, with zestful work to do, she will find renewed energy.

A good start along the new road would be an afternoon spent at a beautytorium, getting an up-to-the-minute hair-do, a facial to restore bloom to her cheeks, new polish for her nails. How one looks has a lot to do with the way one feels.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Interfering With a Son's Romance Is Dangerous Business

There are certain things mothers never seem to learn. Even though they may have seen other mothers meet disaster in a given situation, they'll go right ahead and try the same thing themselves, kidding themselves along with the false assurance that they're different, and "it can't happen to them.

One of these things a lot of them never learn is to keep their hands off their sons' love affairs. And in this, it's more often the mother of an only son who makes this mistake than the woman who has several sons.

It's perfectly understandable, of course. For the "Mother knows best" complex is practically born in women, and they feel they know better than the son himself what sort of woman will make him happy. More than that, there's apt to be a little subconscious jealousy in a mother that makes her instinctively want to keep her son to herself as long as she can, before giving him up to another woman. She honestly believes that her objections to her son's choice of a wife are for his own good. And sometimes they are. But because it so often happens the other way, the wise mother will stop and annalyze herself a little, when she finds herself violently objection to her son's romance, to make certain that something of this natural maternal reluctance to lose her son isn't masquerading in the guise of legitimate concern for his welfare.

That's what I'm wondering about the situation described in the following letter.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I am a mother of three children whom I love dearly.

"My only son has been recently discharged from the army, and since that time has been going with a local girl who is a few years older than be and who has been married. From all reports, she is a nice girl, and a perfect young lady, but I strongly object to this friendship on the grounds that she is older than he is, and also because of her marriage to a serviceman which was annulled.

"We are a religious family, and I am doing everything in my power to break this up as he is my only son and I want him to find a sweet young girl his own age, instead of a girl who married and then decided it was a mistake. Some think I am unjust in my feelings toward this girl, but I believe I feel as any mother would about her only son.

"What do you advise me to do in this matter, continue to atempt to break it up by telling him how strongly I dislike his seeing this girl, or let things take their course?

"Anxious Mother"

Whatever your reasons for your disapproval of this situation, Anxious Mother, trying to break it up is the most dangerous thing you can do. For the more you argue against this girl, the more your son will defend her, and before you know it, you may build up in him a resentment against you that will destroy whatever influence you may have with him and drive him into the very thing you wish to avoid.

You'd be much wiser to keep still about the whole thing, hard as it no doubt will be for you, and it may blow over itself. Certainly it will be more likely to than if you keep stirring up an emotional storm over it. And if it doesn't — if these two come to love each other sincerely— it may work out much better than you think. Such objections as you raise have been met by many couples, and successfully worked out in a happy marriage.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Naturally Curly Hair

In earlier days the finger wave was used for Those beautiful white wigs

The finger wave is the child of the permanent. The first hard-boiled treatments left the feminine head looking like a floor mop. The frizz had to be under control. So the finger wave came into action, formed undulations. It has been flourishing ever since.

It is not a new idea. In the white wigs that were worn at time of Marie Antoinette it was used for waving those beautiful the French court. For many years it has been the means of putting an attractive crimp in demountable hair. A hair stylist didn't have to be very bright to discover that this method could be used on the cash customers that trailed into the beauty shop.

The finger wave will strengthen a hafy-hearted wave. Curly girls who aren't as curly as they would like to be should indulge in these treatments. In time, they will produce a charming pattern. The natural wave often suffers from neglect. The slightest sign of soap deposits left on the silken shafts will discourage it, make tresses go straight and limp. Certain hair dyes will destroy it. With such a blessing, surely one should not begrudge the time necessary to give it vitalizing attentions.

Dust and soap deposits weaken the natural curl because they prevent the absorption of moisture from the air. Moisture tightens the shafts, sends them into spiral. Of the girl finds herself lamenting a lost wave, she should change her shampoo medium. Many a lovely head of hair, subjected to home shampooing, is never really free of soap scum. There should be three soapings, as many rinsings. A bath spray and a strong current of water should be employed.

When the shampoo is finished, turn on the hot water faucet in the bathtub; give the glorious crown a steaming. It loves moisture, responds to it quickly.

Sometimes the vinegar rinse will weaken the natural wave. There is no reason for having it if the shampoo is thorough.

While the hair is wet, sweep it straight from the forehead and the sides of the head, using the fine teeth of the comb for this purpose. Then give it a push forward. The strands will fall properly, forming a pleasing design.

If the hair isn't curly enough —if Mama Nature was not lavish —— one can have a permanent. But the operator must be expert, else the wave will be too strong and the result will be kinky, almost unmanageable.

Fine Farm Home Burned at Kirkwall

Galt, July 12 — (CP) — One of the finest farm homes at Kirkwall, east of Galt, was destroyed by fire Wednesday night. It was the property of Robert Parker. His wife said she was awakened about 3 a.m. by what sounded like an explosion and found flames racing near a refrigerator.

By telephone and a roaring auto horn neighbors were awakened and they saved all the contents of the house except those of the kitchen. No estimate of the damage was made.

TIMMINS YOUTH PAYS DEBT BY SAVING YOUNGSTER'S LIFE

ALPHONSE DESJARDINS wins Dow Award

THE DOW AWARD is a citation for outstanding heroism and includes, as a tangible expression of appreciation, a $100 Victory Bond. Winners are selected by The Dow Award Committee, a group of editors of leading Montreal daily newspapers.

LAST December, Mayor Brunette of Timmins, Ontario, saved a young accident victim's life. Last month, Alphonse Desjardins, the older brother of that victim, repaid the Mayor for his good deed.

The Mayor's 3-year-old son was playing in the sun near Gillies Lake. Like most children he was fascinated by the water : : : and, suddenly, as his curiosity brought him to the edge of the dock, he lost his balance and fell in.

Desjardins, playing ball nearby, heard screams. Racing to the dock he saw the baby struggling in the water — face down! Without hesitating, Desjardins plunged in and brought the boy to the shore . . . then helped giving artificial respiration until the lad was revived.

For his presence of mind and quick thinking, we are proud to present The Dow Award to Alphonse Desjardins.

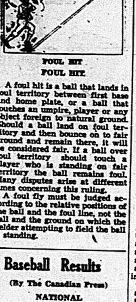
BASEBALL RULES

ILLUSTRATED BY HILLCRAY

Fair Hit

A hit is considered fair when it lands on the playing field between home plate and first base, or home plate and third base, or anywhere in the outfield between those boundaries. When a ball hits a player or umpire either on or over fair territory, the ball is declared fair.

A ball that is hit and lands on fair ground before reaching first or third base and then goes foul after it has passed the infield marking, is considered fair. A ball that strikes either first or third base and then bounds into foul territory is also considered fair.



FOUL HIT

FOUL HIT.

A foul hit is a ball that lands in foul territory between first base and home plate, or a ball that touches an umpire, player or any object foreign to natural ground. Should a ball land on foul territory and then bounce on to fair ground and remain there, it will be considered fair. If a ball over foul territory should touch a player who is standing on fair territory the ball remains foul. Many disputes arise at different times concerning this ruling.

A foul fly must be judged according to the relative positions of the ball and the foul line, not the ball and the ground on which the fielder attempting to field the ball is standing.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George E. Carver, Sports Editor

Almost a Record

If Walt. Gerow, Jr., had swung blindly at that pitch flung by "Smoky" Smith the other night in the SWACOS-Batawa game, instead of scooting the pill for a base-hit city and District League here would have constituted something like a record in baseball circles. The game would have been the only one, as far as this corner can ascertain where two pitchers slung no-hit performances in the same game. As it was, the game was a tough one for Ernie Smith, SWACOS righthander, to lose, after chucking a no-hitter, and the big boy scraped the bottom of the tough-luck barrel in losing the nod. The score was 2-0 and both runs were scored on bobbles.

And speaking of records, Farley Faulkner, writer, author, soldier and bowler, egad, set something of a mark in toppling the maples at the Bowl-O-Drome on Wednesday night. Bowling against Walter Moore in a friendly joust, the former newspaperman, decided to constitute himself a one - man team of five and had the addicts nearby nearly pop-eyed with his performance. He atomiced the maples consistently and rolled up the fine five-game score of 3985, something that hasn't been approached by any of the crack bowling squads of the city. His games scores were 814, 807, 799, 732, and 833. A neat performance in any man's league. The scores were verified by Mr. Moore and Manager George Barnes of the Bowl-O-Drome.

That baseball "epic" at Fenway Park, Boston the other day when the American League Atomics Bikini'd the National Leaguers in a whirl of Williams, Feller, Newhouser and Keller diamond calisthenics, has caused the baseball writers of the U.S.A. to delve deeply into the archives and come up with some pertinent facts of games played in the yesteryear when Walter Johnson, Stuffy McInnis, John Sullivan Babe Ruth et al were in their baseball prime.

It was in 1916 that the Red Sox squared off against an All-Star combination from the rest of the league as a benefit for the family of Tim Murfit for the family of Tim Murnane, one of the baseball writing titans of a generation ago. Behind the gilt-edge pitching of a youthful Boston ace, Babe Ruth, and a couple of other stalwart citizens, the Red Sox defeated the All-Stars, 2 to 0, when Duffy Lewis hit a double off Walter Johnson to drive in both runs.

The All-Star outfield on that momentous occasion almost could stand intact as an all-time trio since it merely consisted of Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker and Shoeless Joe Jackson. In the infield were Stuffy McInnis, Ray Chapman, Rabbit Maranville and Buck Weaver, with Steve O'Neill the pilot of the American League steamroller today, serving behind the plate.

There were some interesting sidelights to that affair. The rifle-armed Jackson won the throwing contest for distance and, oddly enough, none of the catchers was able to peg a ball through an open barrel perched on second base. So Dutch Leonard, the Pitcher, nonchalantly whirled one through on his first and only try. The first-base umpire was the immortal John L. Sullivan, who actually had the temerity to call out the prankish Maranville on a close play. The playful Rabbit came storming at him with upraised fists. "Get out of here, you little bum," roared John L., so the little bum scrammed.

There's good floodlight fare for baseball fans down Kingston way on Saturday night when Manager Ben Lady's Ponies take on the Ogdensburg squad in a double-header with the second game under the arcs. The Ponies, 'tis reproted, have been serving up a good brand of baseball of late and local fans who haven't seen them as yet will get a good opportunity to see the Limestone lads in action come Sat. evening.

The "knights of the satchel" will forsake their brief cases, sample trunks and revive their stock of after-dinner stories at the annual Commercial Travellers Lawn Bowling Tournament scheduled for the Boulevard Club greens, Toronto, on July 19. Information to date is that 64 rinks are expected to compete and the day will end with a bang-up entertainment, banquet and presentation of prizes. Holders of active or honorary commercial travellers certificates are eligible. So it looks like a big time in the big town on that date.

Tonight at the Hume Arena, the scowling Mr. Henning, he who was raised amid the corn of Iowa, will attempt to dismember one Warren Bockwinkle, who first saw the light of day down in the blues country, St. Louis. Now Mr. Bockwinkle is a rugged sort of a gent who takes his wrestling seriously is impervious to threats, and has shown to date that he has a capacity for absorbing punishment. M'Sieu Henning who disdains the nicer things of groandom, is not averse to tearing up a ten-inch plank, and draping it around an opponent's ears; atop his cranium, the southern part of his lap or whatever piece of the enemy's anatomical structure is prominent at the moment. And Mr. Henning refuses positively to scare. He's tried it so many times looking in a mirror that he is immune to anything a foe has to offer. Mr. Bockwinkle, too, does not shiver easily. He is the type who would dub Frankenstein, "Milquetoast" and believe it himself. So it should be fireworks at the Hume Palace this evening. Toar Morgan meets Goon Henry and Pat Flanagan will collide with Leo Numa, on the same card.

Three Canadians In Second Stage Of King's Prize

By WILLIAM BOSS

Bisley Camp, Surrey, England, July 12 — (CP Cable) — Three Canadian marksmen competing in the first post-war Bisley yesterday won their way through to the second stage of the King's prize competition, premier event of the Empire rifle shoot.

The second stage today will reduce the field from 300 to 100 for Saturday's final phase.

The Canadians — competing individually because Canada has no team entered this year—are Capt. R. W. Hampton, formerly of Guelph; FO. G. Giles of Ottawa and Lt.-Col. P. J. Martinshon of Quebec.

Capt. Hampton yesterday tied for first place in the Conan Doyle Statuette competition with a perfect score of 10 bullseyes at 500 yards range. Capt. Hampton was picked for Canada's 1940 Bisley team but the meet was called off.

Other Canadians competing are Capt. D. C. Cullington and Maj. W. T. Gildren, both of Toronto, and former members of the Queen's Own Rifles Shooting Club.

Law of Averages Catches Up With Workhorse Bobby Feller In 9-1 Loss to the Yankees

Before 56,243 Fans in Stadium Fireballer Was Derricked in Fifth

By RALPH RODEN
Associated Press Sport Writer

Working in and out of turn doesn't prolong the career of a pitcher even if that hurler is Bobby Feller, star righthander of Cleveland Indians and one of the best to toe the rubber in baseball history.

Gunning for as many major league pitching honors as possible including Rube Waddell's strikeout record, Feller has a number of times this season requested Manager Lou Boudreau to work him ahead of schedule.

The law of averages and nature caught up with the fireball king before 56,243 fans in New York's Yankee Stadium last night. Granted permission to make his third start in five days and with only one day of rest, Feller was blasted for nine runs and 11 hits in five innings as the Yanks whipped the Indians 9-1.

Before bowing out at the end of the fifth, Feller fanned five batters to bring his season's total to 195 in 185 innings, a pace that should beat Waddell's 1904 mark of 343. Spud Chandler allowed the Indians five hits as he coasted to his 13th victory of the season and his fifth straight over the Tribe. The loss was Feller's sixth against 15 wins.

Sox Noses Out Tigers

By winning, New York managed to stay within 7 1-2 games of the pace-setting Boston Red Sox who nosed out Detroit Tigers, 3-2 in ten innings.

Chicago Cubs, behind the three-hit tossing of Johnny Schmiz blanked Brooklyn Dodgers 1-0, but the Dodgers maintained their five-game National League lead over St. Louis Cardinals as New York Giants trounced the Red Birds 13-3.

Harry Brecheen was nursing a 1-0 lead for the Cards until the fifth inning when the Giants staged a seven-run rally that was highlighted by Johnny Mize's 18th home run.

The triumph moved the Giants into a fifth place tie with Boston Braves who dropped a 8-2 contest to Bucky Walters and Cincinnati Reds.

St. Louis' Browns collected only two hits off Penetanguishene's Phil Marchildon but the Browns bunched them along with three walks to tally four runs in the seventh inning to defeat Philadelphia Athletics 4-3.

POINT ANNE WINS OVER GOODMANS IN 11TH INNINGS

Juniors Practically Lost Game in Third When First Baseman Dropped Two Throws

Staving off the Goodman Juniors bold bid for victory when the kids staged a two-run tying rally in the ninth, the Point Anne softball squad scored two runs in the eleventh to win 6-4 in a thrilling battle at the Fair Grounds last night.

The youngsters practically lost the game in the third when first baseman D. Adams dropped two easy throws for sure outs that resulted in the Ox Pointers shoving over three runs for what appeared to be the ball game.

Brother Al Adams on the mound for Goodmans allowed fourteen hits, the most of them scattered with the exception of the fourth when Point Anne touched him for three and the eleventh when he was nicked for another trio, one of them a home run by Horewood.

Gave Three Hits

Don Boyle did the pitching chore for the Pointers and let the Goodmans down with three hits. Errors by his mates and a solid clout by Rollins enabled the kids to send over the tying pair of runs in the ninth after they had whittled the four-run Ox Point lead down to a pair over the eight inning route. Boyle struck out ten and issued four walks. Adams struck out four and walked one.

Point Anne got their fourth run in the fifth when Whalen's single drove in Horewood who had doubled ahead of him. Goodmans whittled away at that lead and scored singles in the sixth and seventh. Came the ninth, and they were still two down, when the Point Anne infield bobbled and aided by Rollins' solid sock to centre the kids sent the tying run across the plate.

The squads battled on even terms during the tenth chukker then Horewood put the game on ice with a homer. Whalen followed with a single and Don Boyle's third hit of the night sent home the sixth run. The kids went down in order in their half of the inning and the ball game was over.

Horewood paced the winner's attack with a homer, a double and a single. Whalen and Boyle got three each while "Pop" Murney Green got a pair of base socks.

Adams, Murney Green Jr. and Rollins were the only Goodman batters to connect safely off Boyle.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON JR.

New York, July 12 (AP)—The National Public - Links Gold Championship, which starts a week from Monday at Denver, not only is the largest golf tourney on record but probably is the most strictly amateur of all.. It drew more than 3,500 entries which were whittled down to 192 through sectional qualifying rounds, and they all were guys who play because they like the game and who pay for every round as they go.

From Bad to Worse

When Bob Higgins, Penn State football coach, heard that Brooklyn Dodgers had signed Joe Tepsic, he sadly scratched Joe's name off the grid roster and moaned: "The guy goes all through Guadalcanal and then winds up in Brooklyn. You'd think he had had enough combat."

Today's Guest Star

B. M. Atkinson, Jr., Louisville Times: "Pork is so costly now housewives will shudder every time they see a football kicked around... Thanks to Mike Jacobs, though, there are still twice as many hams as there are pigs."

Cleaning The Cuff

The Yankees won't return to Panama for training next spring but Luisin Rosario expects to sign with Larry MacPhail today for them to play five games in Puerto Rico next February..... Rosario also hears that the Yanks will make a four-game trip to Venezbuela under the sponsorship of a Caracas brewery.

Toronto, July 12 (CP)—Eastern Canada's tennis players believe not only in keeping it close to home but right in the family. For instance five brothers and sister combinations were entered in various events at the Eastern Canada tennis championship at the Toronto Lawn Tennis Club.

Best-known was blonde Pat Macken, 19-year-old member of Canada's leading tennis family—the Montreal Mackens. Pat was the first girl to win the Quebec junior ladies' title three years running—1943-1944-1945.

A Toronto family—the Platts—contributed four entrants to the tournament—Ursual, 23, Ruth, 19, John, 17, and Don, 16. Don won the junior boys' title while John was defeated in a five-set match in the semi-finals of the junior men's competition. Ruth was Ontario junior girls' champion in 1939.

Top-seeded in the ladies' doubles were Dorothy and Kay Hurst, Toronto, sisters and present Ontario ladies' doubles champions. Kay was a pre-war winner of the Western Ontario title and Dorothy won the Ontario junior ladies' crown in 1939.

The Moses of Toronto— Syd and Aubey—and the Swifts of Ottawa—Sonia and Peter,—rounded out this miniature gathering of the clans.

A team of eight rifle shots at Sarcee matched skill with a similar team in Southern Rhodesia, Africa. Each team shot on its own range and cabled the scores across the world to their opponents. Several members of the Alberta team will receive championship spoons from the Southern Rhodesia National Rifle Association.

Later or sooner, most bridge players learn what is correct for an opening lead. By then, they also know the correct discard that should be played on partner's first lead.

Sparked by a combination of these two, step three falls into an easy pattern. The leader knows what his second lead should be. His second lead is determined by the first discard.

Now, the plot thickens. Partner of the leader must know what to lead in return. When it comes to return leads, several angles must be considered. Among them is what shows up in dummy.

Would it take much time to review all the holdings involved in return leads? You should live so long. More practical is it to pick up a few principles and combine them with experiennce.

What card should you return in the suit led by partner? From three or less to start with, return the highest. With more, return the fourth best. Except when dummy cards advise otherwise.

With south as declarer in spades, the hearts are as shown here:

WEST	EAST
♥Q J 10 3	♥K 8 6 2

SOUTH
♥A 9 4

West leads heart queen. East throws the eightspot on it, a come-on encouraging discard; asking west to continue that suit when he can.

South wins that trick with the ace. But later, suppose east gets into the lead before west. East will return a heart. Which one? His highest, or his lowest, or the one in the middle?

The return lead from east should be the deuce; fourth best of his original holding in that suit. It tells partner he started with four. Partner thus knows how many hearts are in south.

Many players do not draw so fine a bead when shooting back a lead. In a very close contest, however, sharpshooters find it handy.

The little blond starred in the bedroom drama until it was suspended. Defying superstition, she took the "F. A." script out of its folder and replace it with "The Late George Apley." but the substitution is only tempory.

"The picture will be started again in September," she said, "and as far as I know, I am going to play Amber." This despite the fact that Gene Tierney, Vivien Leigh, Susan Hayward, Lana Turner and others have been rumored for the role.

Peggy is certainly the popular favorite on her home lot. Although she had been there only a short while, she seemed to know everyone from the company cops to top producers.

During the showing it was so quiet you could hear a corpse drop. Strangely enough, the only one to guess whodunit before the last reel was Thad Brown, Los Angeles deputy Chief of Police.

In the film palaces...."Lover Come Back" is a perfectly agreeable domestic farce which will startle no movie goers but should please most. Lightweight acting duties are deftly handled by George Brent and Lucille Ball, who appears in a new gown approximately every 100 feet of film. Robinson Promised Bout With Servo If He Beats Curcio

(By The Canadian Press)

Beaten only once, by Jacob Lamotta, in his career of 89 pro bouts, Sugar Ray Robinson, contending welterweight, faces Joe Curcio of Newark tonight at New York and, if he climbs over this rugged barrier, Robinson has been promised a try at Roy Servo's title next month. Promoter Mike Jacobs is counting on staging the championship go in Madison Square Garden Aug. 23.

Infielder Oscar Grimes was released last night via the waiver route by New York Yankees to Philadelphia Athletics, thus bringing the Yankee roster down to the 30-player limit.

Feature of the English cricket test trial yesterday at Lords was the taking of four wickets for 7 runs by Bill Voce, playing for England against the rest. Peter Smith, for the rest, bowled three wickets for 15 runs.

Henry Cotton, former British Open golf champion, yesterday won the French International Open on the St. Cloud-course with a 72-hole total of 269, carding 66's for his second and fourth rounds.

20-Year-Old Southpaw for Jersey City Wins Last Four Starts

(By The Associated Press)

Dick Hoover, rookie lefthander of Jersey City Giants who jumped from the United States Navy to the International League late in June, is making an impressive showing in his first season of triple-A ball.

The 20-year-old portsider was hammered from the hill in his first two starts but since then he has racked up four straight victories, going the route on each occasion.

Last night, he turned back Syracuse Chiefs, 2-1 on six hits for the Giants' third straight victory and their fourth triumph in their last five outings.

The front-running Montreal Royals increased their margin over Syracuse to 12 games by staging a five-run rally in the 6th inning to defeat Buffalo Bisons 7-2.

Entering the sixth frame on the short end of a 1-0 count, the Royals' Red Durrett smashed a three-run homer to pace the attack.

Jack Banta went the route for Montreal and gained his eighth victory of the year while Rufe Gentry went the distance for Buffalo and suffered his fourth setback of the season.

Baltimore Orioles and Newark Bears were not scheduled and Toronto and Rochester were rained out.

Solvent Big Factor In Picture Cleaning

Toronto (CP)—Pictures, like people, often acquire ailments and require treatment. Physician for ailing canvases is George J. Harbour of Hull, Que., a restorer of fine paintings for some 57 years.

Mr. Harbour made a trip to Toronto recently to restore three paintings at Osgoode Hall to their original tone and quality. With the years they become dulled under several layers of protective varnish and a thickening film of grime.

The first step in the restoration of a picture, Mr. Harbour says, is to set out large-headed tacks at 12-inch intervals around the frame. To these tacks attach strings which cross the face of the picture, checkerboard style. Thus a small area is worked on at one time, and the final effect is more uniform.

The most important step is to find the proper solvent to remove the accumulation of varnish and grime. "The range of solvents is about 10," says Mr. Harbour. "One solvent might clean one painting, but ruin another. The materials are dangerous if not properly handled and," he warns, "the layman is likely to clean until he has bare canvas."

CHAPTER 5

"I've never told anyone so much about myself, Mark."

He laughed. "And if you hadn't, did you suppose I would have brought you out here in the collegiate manner, made love to you, and then lost your address? A man," said Mark, "having kissed you, my dear Iris, might forget your address and even your name but I doubt he'd ever forget you. I'm not going to kiss you," he continued, smiling at her. "I'm going to take you home. Of course, if at any time you'd like to be kissed, then I shall be glad to accommodate you."

"You're making fun of me, Mark."

"We shall see."

She was glad when she had said goodnight to him and had gone to her room that Selina did not appear and question her. Iris's head rang with unasked questions. All her life she had felt so utterly alone in every undertaking and decision; alone all her life, she had knocked vainly against a closed door. Not so tonight—for Mark became in Iris's mind not only a man of rugged good looks but a well of wisdom and a tower of strength. She did not stand alone any longer. And at her dressing table, her face pale and happy between the small amber lamps, she hummed a low melody of the song that brought him so vividly to mind.

The gay mood continued all the next morning. Louis, unknown to her, often smiled at her and thanked a kind goddess for the slippery street and taxi smash that had brought Iris and Mark together. The gay mood continued—until late that afternoon she heard Joel's pleading voice over the telephone, asking her to see him tonight.

To the amusement of his secretary and the despair of the telephone operator, Mark had spent the past two hours that morning calling teachers of voice and piano. Voices from excited Italian to gutteral German had replied negatively to his question, "Do you have Miss Eve Wade as a student?"

He grinned at his secretary. "Now I begin the letter 'S', Miss Enders."

"A needle in a haystack," she replied, laughing.

When he repeated his question to a certain Mr. Sabine, he heard in response, "Yes, Miss Wade is one of my pupils."

Mark said, "Splendid. I'm coming to see you this afternoon." The thin masculine voice protested and Mark said, "At three. Thank you. I think what I have to say will interest you."

At three o'clock that afternoon he stood before a shabby city house. The little black sign tacked to the window-sill read, "R. Sabine, Teacher of Music." "This," thought Mark, "is where her voice is probably being more ruined than cultivated."

He rang the bell and a small lame man with a pale timid face opened the door and led the way to a small living room furnished only with a large piano and two chairs. Mark, in spite of the wealth which fortunately was his, was keenly conscious of wasted talent and wasted lives. With money for proper training perhaps this failure of a man might have been a successful musician. It occurred to him that it was not for Iris, whom he loved, but for Eve, whom he did not know, he was doing this so that her lyric voice and talented musical fingers might not be lost with the pathetic sign, "Eve Wade, Teacher of Music" to signify her failure.

"I have come to make you a rather unusual proposition," said Mark, passing cigarets to the little man. "I want you to tell me frankly what you think of Miss Wade's voice."

"I have never heard a more beautiful voice. I have taught her all I know both in voice and in piano. I am only a mediocre musician...."

Mark nodded. "I understand. That's why I'm hare—because I want her to have every opportunity and no expense spared in the development of her voice."

Mark smiled. "No."

"She is a beautiful girl, Miss Wade, but she cares only for her music. What is it you want me to do?"

"I thought perhaps you could arrange a contest with ten thousand dollars as a prize." He smiled. "It need not be unfair since Miss Wade has a superior voice."

"Oh, she has, she has! There's no doubt of it. You wish to remain unknown?"

"Yes. You'll probably have to give an imaginary name to the donor and I want no publicity that can possibly be avoided. Have the contest among your own pupils. Hire a small concert hall, if you like. You can select the judges."

Sabine's eyes filled with tears. "This is so good of you, so good and kind."

"I shall make it worth your smile," said Mark with an embarrassed smile.

"No, no! I want nothing." He looked at Mark. "It is too late for me, you see. But she is young. When she sings I see her in opera. That's all I want—to see her in opera."

"And when she's there, you shall have a box seat."

Sabine laughed. "And an opera cloak? If you don't tell me who you are, I can't let you know how she is progressing."

Mark gave him his card. When he left, the little man's thin fingers gripped his firmly and there were tears in his eyes again. Driving back to the office, Mark felt that of all the things he had done in his life this would give most opportunity and pleasure to others. Not only was he giving Eve her chance, but the success that the little maestro had missed would be lived and enjoyed by him in his most gifted pupil.

Iris hurried through Gwynn's Falls Park to meet Joel. How many, many times she had taken this path to meet him during the past two years! She had walked through snow and sleet and rain and had bowed to the wind on her way to a certain rustic bench beneath a tall tree.

Storm clouds obscured the moon tonight. The air was damp and heavy with rain.

"Yes."

When she was close he took her in his arms and kissed her.

"I'm sorry, Iris. I didn't mean to be so brutal. I'm like that when I think I'm going to lose you. You said I didn't have any pride. No man can have any pride when he sees the girl he wants to marry being offered in marriage to the man who can pay the highest price for her. Can you blame me? You're the only person I have in the world, the only friend I have, Iris."

She drew away from him, took his hand, and led him to the rustic bench.

"I'll never treat you like that again," he said. "I swear it, Iris. It's such hell to be so helpless."

"I know, Joel. I know. It isn't your fault. It isn't mine. We can't control circumstances. You let your temper and jealousy blind you."

"I'm going to make more money. I've got a plan."

"But it might jeopardize your position at the bank. I don't want you to do that. "We'll have to let time work these things out for us."

"If I had money and a little left over to help your family, would you marry me?"

She answered quickly, "Of course, of course, dear," and lowered her eyes at unwanted thoughts that filled her mind. Mark, why did I have to meet you and be shown through you what Joel lacks? You make him seem so small and weak-willed in comparison with you. Mark, how dare you make me turn away from Joel by blinding me with your money and charm and all the things Joel has never had?

"Iris, I'll never embarrass or humiliate you again."

"It's over. I've forgotten it."

"Do you remember the first summer when we used to walk here?"

"We didn't argue then," said Iris.

"We planned to be married. I begged you to marry me then but you couldn't. If I'd ever lose you...."

"I shall always come to you when you need me," she said, looking up as the first drops of rain fell. "We've got to hurry, Joel; You didn't wear a top coat! We'll have to run."

Water was dripping from the brim of his hat and soaking through his suit when they reached Clifton avenue.

"Get a cab," said Iris.

"I didn't bring enough money with me."

Tommy greeted her at the door.

"Mrs. North is on the telephone, Iris."

Mary's cheerful voice came back. "Hello, darling. I can't keep up with you since Mark has attached himself with such devotion. I'm giving a party Saturday night and Mark will call for you, and this time," Mary added, laughing, "I won't accept the excuse of an automobile accident."

"You know I'll love to come, Mary."

She was knitting in her room when Eve came in breathless with excitement. She took Iris by the shoulders and cried, "I know I'll win! I just know it! I can't fail!"

"What are you talking about, Eve?"

"A musician in New York, an old friend of Mr. Sabine, is offering ten thousand dollars for the pupil with the best voice. Oh, Iris, it means studying under the best teachers. It means—a chance in a lifetime!"

"When is all this going to happen?" "And you haven't won it yet, dear," said Iris, smiling.

"Saturday night. You must come. I want you and Tommy and Mother there."

Iris shook her head. "Saturday night. I can't, Eve. I just promised Mary I'd come to her party and I can't disappoint her again. But I'll think of nothing else and as soon as it's over and you've won, call me."

When Eve went out she paused at her knitting, remembering what Louis had said recently. "Fate practices a subtle art." Eve's opportunity had come, an opportunity as golden as her voice. Would success for Eve diminish her responsibility? There were her mother and Tommy to think about still. Berhaps Joel would ask her to marry him now and Iris knew if he did she could not give him an answer. Vainly she tried to close her mind to the truth—that it was Mark whom she loved and Joel whom she pitied and to whom she felt bound—by promise and by duty.

Madoc

Madoc — On Sunday morning union services were held in St. Peter's Presbyterian Church with Rev. A. Poulter of Trinity United Church in charge. With Mr. Shortt in charge, boys from the Community Camp, Moira Lake, were in attendance. A very pleasing solo was rendered by Master Ronald Elmy of Belleville, with Mr. Alex Gordon of Belleville, as organist for the service.

Miss Marion Burnside of School of Nursing, Royal Victoria Montreal, is spending her holidays at her home in Madoc.

Mrs. Fred Nayler has returned home from Toronto much improved in health.

Mr. and Mrs. Gammage and sons are camping at Sunrise Point, Moira Lake. Mr. Gammage was a former manager of Madoc branch of the Dominion Bank.

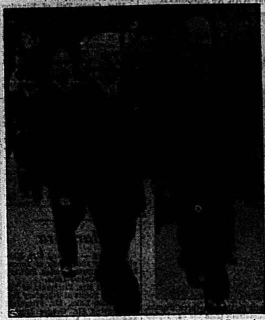
FORMER DICTATOR WALKS TO DEATH



Ion Antonescu, former premier and virtual dictator of Rumania, is shown, left, as he walked to the spot where he was shot by an execution squad as a war criminal. With him, right, is George Alexiana, former governor of Transylvania, also executed as a collaborator, and Mihai Antonescu, rear, former vice-premier.

Haying Accidents Cause Deaths Of Two Farmers

London, July 12 (CP)— Two district farmers were fatally injured during haying operations yesterday and one other man was seriously injured in a fall from a ladder. John Cryderman, a Camden township farmer died in hospital from head injuries suffered when he fell from the top of a load of hay in his barn. His head struck on the cement floor and he died shortly after.

Norman Murray, 45 of nearby Kerwood, died in hospital from a broken neck suffered in a fall from a hay rack. He was drawing hay on the farm of his father, John F. Murray, when the wagon hit a bumper which polted him off the rack.

Raymond Hayworth of Exeter was taken to hospital with facial injuries suffered when he fell from the top of a ladder against a two-storey building he was painting.

Fire and Explosion in Fisher Boat Works

Detroit, July 12 — (AP) — Two persons were badly burned and an estimated $50,000 worth of boats destroyed last night in a fire and explosion at the Fisher boat works on the Detroit River. The blast shook the ground three blocks away and sent flames shooting above the tree-tops. Cause of the explosion, which occurred on the cruiser Dickie-Joe, was undetermined. Joseph H. Dancy, 48, owner of the Dickie-Joe, and his son Joseph, Jr., 24, of Detroit, who were aboard, received critical burns.

HAMILTON SYNDICATE BUYS STREET RAILWAY

Hamilton, July 12 (CP)—The Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission today announced the sale of the Hamilton Street Railway to a Hamilton syndicate for $1,400,000. The new owners will assume control Sept. 16.

BOLT STRIKES WEATHER OFFICE AT MEMPHIS

Memphis, Tenn., July 12(AP) —Sgt. Robert J. Doverspike of Kittanning, Pa., weather forecaster of the United States army ferrying group here, officially predicted: "Considerable thunder storm activity Thursday afternoon with accompanying lightning." The progiostication materialized more forcible than he expected. During an afternoon thundershower, lightning struck the weather office, Doverspike said he was "tapped on the neck" by the bolt, but was not hurt enough to be sent to hospital.

POLICE HAVE 40-HOUR WEEK

Sudbury, July 12 — (CP) — The Police Commission yesterday instructed Chief of Police Fred Jarvis to draft a work schedule for a 40-hour week to be started Jan. 1, 1947, for all members of the Sudbury force.

Policemen here now work 9-10 hours a day, Chief Jarvis said.

New Zealand Papers Copy English Style

By WILLIAM STEWART

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Wellington, N.Z. (CP)— New Zealand newspapers, in keeping with the manner of the people of the Dominion, are generally moderate and still observe the old, English style of running classified advertisements on front pages with news stories inside.

A newcomer to the metropolitan daily field, the Southern Cross, an evening Labor paper in Wellington, appears with front-page news, as also does the Star-Sun, an evening paper in Christchurch, most important city on the South Island.

Many New Zealanders regard Auckland's New Zealand Herald as the newspaper in the Dominion. With a daily circulation of about 115,000, it claims the largest sales. As a morning paper the Herald shares the Auckland reader field with the evening Auckland Star which has a circulation of about 100,000 copies daily.

The dailies in Wellington, the capital, such as The Dominion, a morning paper, have circulations of about 70,000,—but with the exception of The Southern Cross, follow the same English style of news presentation.

Apart from reports sent in from various localities within the Dominion by special correspondents, the papers get most of their domestic news through the co-operative New Zealand Press Association.

Foreign news dispatches which appear in print bearing the time of receipt as well as date, are distributed by the Press Association from Australia through an agreement with Australian Associated Press which supplies Australian papers with their foreign coverage. Some of the New Zealand papers have their own correspondents in London.

Generally speaking, the New Zealand papers carry few comic strips, but have good political cartoonists. The most famous New Zealand political cartoonist now abroad is Low of the London Evening Standard who after his start here, made his way to London via Australia.

The back pages of the New Zealand dailies are filled with advertising for moving pictures, public meetings and other popular events. These back-page advertisements, usually of single-column width, employ the device of repetition as a means of catching the eye.

In one of these ads, there will be five lines made up only of the repeated name of a theatre, five or six lines simply repeating the name of a movie star, a half-dozen repetitions of picture title, and then several more lines naming a band leader over and over.

University Student Doubles as M.L.A.

Winnipeg (CP)—University students must envy a contemporary of theirs who not only is the youngest member of the Manitoba legislature but also a member of the veterans' April class at the University of Manitoba.

Ronald Robertson, M.L.A. for Roblin, Man., is 25 and a veteran of five years in the R.C.A.F. Being an M.L.A. hasn't hampered his relations with his class mates because not very many of them know it. If they did, they'd probably have a lot of advice for him to hand on to the government.

Robertson is believed to be the first Canadian legislator to attend university while in office. He was elected last October. Next year he hopes to go into law, and he is taking second year arts as a preparation. Like a lot of student veterans, he is married and has a small daughter.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, July 12 — (CP)—Further losses were boarded in the early session on the Toronto exchange today by the mining groups and the industrial stocks. Western oils showed little net change and they were in dull trade. The action was dull over the board, reducing the volume to 476,000 shares for the first three hours.

The liquor, paper and steel issues weakened and the utilities held firm. Hiram Walker was down 2 points.

The gold group had a few gainers, including MacDonald, Hasaga, Preston, O'Brien, Osisko, Aumaque and Nib Yellowknife.

The market was active and stronger for International Uranium and Steep Rock firmed five cents. Noranda and Hudson Bay were lower.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

New York, July 12 (AP)—Most stock market customers deserted the buying side today and leading issues generally reached for lower levels.

The direction turned downward after selective early recoveries failed to hold. Losses of fractions to 2 points or so—there were isolated wider dips—hit virtually all departments by midday with steels in supply. Dealings, active for a while, tapered later and extreme setbacks were reduced in most cases near the fourth hour. A few aviations weakened.

Canadians on the big board at noon had a downward trend: Distillers Seagram 27 2-8 off 1, Dome Mines 23 1-4 off 1-4, International Nickel 37 3-4 off 7-8 and Hiram Walker down 1 at 142.

HOGS

Toronto, July 12 —(CP)— Grade A, dressed, bacon-hogs, were unchanged at Hull $21.75 delivered, unchanged at Stratford, to farmers $21.15, to truckers $21.30, in markets reporting early today.

Barrie was unchanged $21.25 delivered.

Australia Plans Big Development In Darwin Area

By JACK HOLDSWORTH
Canadian Press Correspondent

Canberra (CP)—The federal government has drawn up big development plans for Australia's frontier province, the Northern Territory, and its capital, Darwin.

The Territory covers an area of 523,000 square miles in the extreme north of Australia. It is of vital defence importance with Darwin and its harbor and airport providing the gateway to Australia from the East and Europe.

It is a tropical region of sweltering heat and torrential rains, of areas untrodden by the white man, but roamed by aboriginal tribes, of contrasting barren and well-watered, timbered regions, sparsely populated and little developed.

The government's plans call for the erection of a garden city in Darwin with accommodation for 15,000 civilians and a garrison force of 10,000, as against a pre-war population of nearly 3,000 out of the Territory's 5,000 inhabitants exclusive of aborigines.

The project will cost $108,000,000. Darwin was heavily bombed by Japanese aircraft during the war, and is still largely in a blitzed condition. Only about 170 of the town's original 400 homes are inhabitable. It came under military control in 1942, and all civilians were evacuated. Since then it has been returned to civilian control, and about 3,000 now are living there.

The housing shortage has become so acute that many people are living in tents, iron and hessian huts and sheds made from packing cases. Many are also using abandoned army and air force camps outside Darwin.

Isolation Overcome

But the war, although it has created housing problems, has also solved one of the main problems of Darwin and the Territory—isolation.

Darwin lies hundreds of miles from the nearest capital city and before the war relied mainly on shipping for its supplies. There were a few roads leading into the Territory from the south, but these were in bad condition and often impassable because of floods. Air services were few and not very frequent.

But during the war, a north-south highway linking Darwin with Adelaide in the south was built with a branch road running through to Brisbane. Dozen's of airfields were also constructed.

Frequent air services have been started and these, in conjunction with the good overland route, have brought many parts of the Territory within 48 hours reach of a capital city.

This is expected to result in a big development of the Territory's potentialities. At present, the main industry is cattle grazing, with a goldfield at Tennant's Creek, and pearl fishing at Darwin.

But gold has recently been found in other areas, and experts say that the Territory is potentially rich in other minerals. Experiments have proved that rice, tobacco, coconuts, mangoes, cotton and peanuts can be successfully grown.

Edinburgh Plans Music Festivals

Edinburgh (CP)—The pre-war music festivals of Salzburg, which attracted musical pilgrims the world over, is to be emulated here.

Edinburgh plans to hold annual festivals along the same lines, and arrangements are already complete for the first—running three weeks through August and September of this year—which it is hoped will attract 100,000 visitors from all parts of the United Kingdom.

Three theatres, a royal castle and Holyrood Palace are to be used as settings for the Operas, symphony concerts, ballet and plays to be presented. Orchestras from all parts of Britain and Europe have been hired to perform while top-flight artists will include favorites of the American concert-halls.

A new note in international festivals of this type will be in the inclusion of folk and Scottish dancing—and bagpipe music.

RECALLS OLD CUSTOM

The practice of having the horse of a deceased military officer led in the funeral procession is a survival of the ancient custom of sacrificing a horse at the burial of a warrior.

SAVING SUMATRANS FROM WAR AFTERMATH

With 400 major operations to its credit in the last three months, the 124 I.G.H. (26 Ind. Div.) is saving Sumatrans from the Jap legacy of disease and starvation. Civilians, who received no medical attention for more than three years, come to the hospital in a very bad condition, and receive the same treatment as the soldiers. Women and children are worst affected by the ravages of war, and much Indian and British blood has gone into Indonesians needing transfusions. Many lives have been saved in the Nedan area, where the 124 I.G.H. operates, and Sumatrans have fullest confidence in the treatment that the army hospital gives them. Picture shows Sister Clenys Edwards, of Treherhart, S. Wales, nursing a sore-ridden child.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was looking at the somic page without much expression, and ma said, William, I've got more than half a mind to call up the radio station the broadcasts The Cutting Family and tell them I'm going to stop using Sapalox soap.

I never noticed any Sapalox soap lying around, pop said, and ma said, Well, I haven't actually tried it yet, but I've been intending to, so the principal is the same. You wont believe it when I tell you the number of trials and tribulations that have gradually piled up on that poor Cutting Family, she said.

Then maybe you better spare me the harrowing details, as long as I'm not going to believe them anyway, pop said, and ma said, Now William I've suffered with the family for weeks, so it wont hurt you to listen to a quick review of the situation. Mr. Cutting had been having difficulty with his breething when he went up the stairs at his usual impetuous 2 steps at a time, but just like a man he refused to consult a docter, and now this morning it developed that he fainted at his office, and poor Mrs. Cutting was forced to pace the hospittle corridor outside his room while 2 heart specialists hovered over him behind the closed door. And of course this had to happen just when their daughter Gloria is seriously thretening to kill herself because Tod Rockledge cant seem to get over his infatuation for what that awful Sandra Marways, and little Johnny Cutting has run away from home suffering from some fancied childish injury to his pride. It's juts too much, it's an imposition on the public, ma said.

But for Peet sake I thought you injoyed suspense, pop said, and ma said, I do, of course, when the solution is just around the corner the next day, but this morning the announcer calmly stated that The Cutting Family is going off the air for the summer in its present intolerable situation, and that's what I call downright cheeting.

The result being she still claims she's going to write and tell the radio station what she thinks of Sapalox soap.

GUARDS WINNINGS RIDING ON TRAIN

Johannesburg (CP)— After winning £1,280 ($6,210) when he backed the double at a race meeting, a Johannesburg native spent a worried, sleepless night.

How could he keep the money safely? He went to the police and asked for protection. He was advised to spend the night, with his wealth in a cell, but this did not appeal to him.

Finally he worked out a plan more to his liking. He decided to patronize the South African Railways and, for a modest sum, passed the hours of darkness riding by train between Johannesburg and Pretoria.

The following morning he banked most of his money on fixed deposit, placed some in a savings account and kept over a few pounds with which to celebrate.

CASTLE WINE POTENT TOMMIES TAKE COUNT

Edinburgh ((CP) — Three young soldiers went to jail for 14 days each after they were found drunk in a wine cellar in the Duke of Montrose's Buchanan Castle, Stirlingshire.

The cellar was literally swimming with old port and littered with bottles.

"The bottles was all dirty and cobwebby," said one of the privates in defence. "We might have been poisoned, drinking that stuff."

AXIS PRISONERS LEAVING INDIA

New Delhi (CP)—A mass "personally-conducted" exodus of war prisoners interned in India during the war is now under way. In all, more than 73,000 Axis subjects were brought to India during the course of the war—68,390 Italians, 2,543 Japanese and 2,400 others. As many as 1.770 Japanese civilian internees have already left India for Singapore.

Deaths among prisoners of war in India totalled 579 Italians and 280 Japanese, the majority from malaria. Seventy Japanese died from wounds received on the battle field.

FOREIGN MINISTERS FAIL ON AGREEMENT

STRIKE OF 200,000 WORKERS AT TRIESTE ENDED

Called by Labor Leaders to Protest Fascist Aggression

City Remains Quiet, Only One Case of Violence Reported

Trieste, July 13 (AP)— A general strike which had affected 200,000 workers and had paralyzed this disputed city for two weeks was declared officially at an end today.

A notice in today's Gironale Alleato, official organ of the Allied military government, appearing over the signatures of seven left-wing pro-Yugoslav labor groups, announced that the strike had ended as of midnight.

The decision was taken, the announcement said, because of action by Allied authorities "dissolving" the strike committee.

The strike was called by pro-Yugoslav labor leaders July 2 to protest what they described as "Fascist aggression."

Trieste remained quiet today with only one case of violence reported over the past 48 hours —the fatal beating of a worker accused of strike breaking.

Impressive Rites For Wm. J. Motz, Late Publisher

Kitchener, July 13 —(CP)— Civic representatives, business associates, representatives of the Catholic Hierarchy and scores of friends paid final tribute today at St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church to William John Motz, president and publisher of the Kitchener Record.

Solemn Requiem High Mass was celebrated by the pastor, Rev. R. S. Dehler. Following the mass, Father Dehler praised the contribution Mr. Motz made to Canadian journalism and to the welfare of his community.

In the sanctuary, were priests from all parts of the diocese. Others attending included Rev. A. L. Winger, Provincial General of the Congregation of the Resurrection, and Rev. George M. Murray of Ravena, N.Y., president of St. Jerome's College Alumni Association.

Mr. Motz, who died Wednesday in his 76th year, was laid to rest in Mount Hope Cemetery, where Father Dehler assisted by Father Murray, officiated at the burial service.

Honorary pall-bearers included: R. B. Hara, advertising manager of the Toronto Telegram; F. I. Ker, president of The Canadian Press and publisher of the Hamilton Spectator; Duncan MacInnes, secretary of the Canadian Daily Newspapers Association; W. J. J. Butler, advertising manager of the Toronto Globe and Mail; H. B. Burgoyne, publisher of the St. Catharines Standard; Allan Holmes, publisher of the Galt Reporter; Charles Bruce, general superintendent of The Canadian Press; C. J. McTavish, president of the Ontario Provincial Dailies Association and general manager of the Owen Sound Sun-Times, and Charles Dingman, publisher of the Stratford Beacon-Herald.

Active pall-bearers were: T. H. Kay, Eric Gardner, A. H. Lowe, W. J. Besserer, all of the Record staff, Dr. L. V. Lang and W. J. McGibbon, K.C.

Suggest Other Dates For Australian Vote

Melbourne, July 13 — (Reuters) — Victorian Members of Parliament are frowning on Sept. 28 as the federal general election date because the football final will be played that day.

They claim the game will attract 80,000 people which will effect polling figures.

Other suggested election dates have been turned down for various reasons.

UNION PREPARES WAY FOR A FULL STRIKE MONDAY

Head of Union Declares Order - in - Council as Undemocratic

(By The Canadian Press)

Various departments of the three great basic steel plants in Canada were being closed today, and the strike of steelworkers at these plants was expected to be 100 per cent effective by 7 a. m. Monday.

The steel strike was called Friday by the United Steel Workers of America (C.I.O.) which claims a union membership of 14,000 in the basic producing plants of Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation at Sydney, N.S., Algoma Steel Corporation at Sault Ste Marie and Steel Company of Canada at Hamilton.

The union demands a 40-hour work week with a minimum weekly wage of $33.60, which is estimated at an increase of 19½ cents an hour at Hamilton and the Sault, and 24½ cents at Sydney.

The walk-out of the steelworkers Monday will bring to around 50,000 the number of striking Canadian unionists. The others include 7,200 United Electrical Union members in Ontario, 11,000 United Rubber Workers Union members in Ontario plants, 6,000 United Textile Workers Union workers in Ontario and Quebec, 5,000 United Auto Workers Union members at Chatham and Windsor and 2,500 miners of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers in British Columbia.

Mental Education Urged For Survival In Atomic Age

New York, July 13 (CP) — Dr. G. G. Chisholm, Canadian delegate to the United Nations Health Assembly, in an address to the assembly yesterday advocated mental education for children as a psychological weapon for survival in the atomic age.

The delegates were urged by Dr. Chisholm and other speakers at the session to place provisions for world-wide mental health in the constitution they are drafting for a world health organization.

Children should be taught "intellectual honesty" rather than the concepts of good and evil in morality or politics as advocated by authoritarian churches and parties, said Dr. Chisholm, deputy health minister in the Dominion and president of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene.

Rumor of Attempt On Life of Tito Said Entirely Untrue

London, July 13 — (Reuters)— A spokesman for the Yugoslav Embassy in London said today that a Rome report last night of an attempt on the life of Marshal Tito, Prime Minister of Yugoslavia, is "entirely untrue."

The report, which came from Minos, a new right-wing Italian news agency, alleged that Tito had been shot in the stomach and was in serious condition.

No confirmation for the story could be obtained in any quarter, the Yugoslav spokesman said.

MEMBER WANTS SALES TAX TO REPLACE INCOME

Also Requests That Tax Exemptions Be Raised to $1,500 And $3,000 Respectively

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, July 13 AP)— A suggestion that income tax exemptions for single and married persons be raised to $1,500 and $3,000, respectively, and that the loss of revenue be made up through a 10-per-cent retail tax was advanced in the Commons yesterday by a Quebec Liberal member while appeals for government economies were heard from opposition benches.

Ludger Dionne (L-Beauce) urged imposition of the tax not only to replace the loss of revenue from income tax but also to protect the people against black market operations.

He suggested that stamps be used to indicate the true value of articles. As an example, if a manufacturer made a pair of shoes that retail for $5 he could place on them a 50-cent stamp. The consumer immediately would know the ceiling price for the shoes was $5 and would pay no more.

Shortly after he made the suggestion during continued budget speech debate, Alan Cockeram, (PC-York South) urged that the number of officers in the forces be cut down and the strength of the civil service in the Defence Departments reduced.

Other speakers in the day's debate included Defence Minister Abbott, Wilfrid Gariepy (Ind.-Three Rivers), Donald Fleming, (PC-Toronto Eglinton), Hazen Argue (CCF-Wood Mountain), J. O. Gour (L-Russell), A. M. Nicholson (CCF-Mackenzie) and D. G. Ross (PC-Toronto St. Paul's).

Several announcements preceded resumption of the debate.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced he will go to the Paris peace conference July 29 and be assisted by Health Minister Claxton, Hon. Georges Vanier, Canadian Ambassador to France, Hon. Dana Wilgress, Canadian Ambassador to Moscow, Norman Robertson, undersecretary of State for External Affairs and Arnold Heney, clerk of the Privy Council.

New Suspects Reported Named In Spy Inquiry

Ottawa, July 13 —(CP)— The final report of the Kellock-Taschereau Espionage Commission will likely be tabled in the Commons Monday, it was learned Friday.

The Ottawa Journal reported it would name seven new suspects, six of them "more or less obscure persons, the seventh reasonably well known to the general public."

The Journal said one of them was "implicated in bribery as well as betrayal of secret information to Russia."

It added:

"In the report Mr. Justice Robert Taschereau and Mr. Justice R. L. Kellock name seven new suspects and tell the detailed story of their implication in the Red spy plot which already has brought 14 men and women before the courts.

"Of the seven new suspects, four live in Ottawa and one of them is accused by the Royal Commissioners of having accepted bribes of 'some size' from agents in the employ of the Soviet Embassy here. . . .

"While the names of the new suspects have been listed by the commission with full details of their complication the responsibility for their punishment rests with the Department of Justice, on the basis of the report, the Department will decide the sound of the evidence and order charges and arrests made.

Course Taken May Lead To Decisive Showdown Over Big Power Veto

By CHARLES A. GRUMICH

New York, July 13 (AP)—Advocates of Australian-American proposals for an autonomous international atomic control agency today pushed ahead doggedly on a course which may lead to a decisive showdown with Russia over the big power veto in the United Nations.

These proponents conceded that Russia could block any move to amend the charter on the veto question, simply by invoking the veto itself. Nevertheless, they proceeded on their course, with the suggestion that the charter and the set-up of the U.N. itself might prove to be outmoded in the atomic age.

These factors emerged after yesterday's acrimonious three-hour session of the 12-country atomic working committee at which:

Bernard M. Baruch, of the United States, said that Dr. Evatt's summation as chairman "conforms basically to the United States proposals." Apparently referring to a Russian demand for immediate destruction of atomic bombs, Mr. Baruch added that "a stolen expression of pious intent is not sufficient. .protection;"

Soviet delegate Gromyko said he saw no reason why exchange of atomic secrets should not be started immediately among the United Nations; and,

Dr. Evatt was reported by a witness who asked not to be identified, to have accused Mr. Gromyko of obstructing progress on his report by "talking too much." Mr. Gromyko was said to have reported: "Not half as much as you."

Russia Outvoted Twice

Mr. Gromyko was outvoted twice when he tried to oppose motions to establish 12-power committees.

Mr. Gromyko voted affirmatively, however, on a motion for a third committee, which would be concerned with exchange of scientific data on the atom but would not divulge the secrets as quickly as the Russians would like. Mr. Baruch said secret information would not even be discussed at this stage of the deliberations.

It was Mr. Baruch who made the broadest hint that the U. N. might be shaken up.

"I digress here to remind all of us that when the United Nations was founded the atomic bomb was unknown. Therefore, it is apparent that the processes set up in the charter did not — could not—deal with this pregnant subject.

"It is obvious that an offender should be debarred from sitting in judgment in his own guilt."

All 12 nations in the atomic energy commission will be represented in the three committees set up to handle overall problems; legal questions including the veto, and scientific and technical information which would be exchanged among the U. N. when all the controls are set.

FOOD PROSPECTS ACROSS DOMINION MUCH IMPROVED

Fruit and Vegetable Scarcities Due to Small 1945 Yield Soon Will Disappear

Ottawa, July 13 CP)—Present supplies and future prospects for food across Canada have improved "greatly" in the last month, with indications that fruit and vegetable scarcities due to small 1945 yield soon will disappear, the Prices Board said today.

The Board said its monthly national survey has indicated that edibles from orchards, gardens and fields are coming on the market in increasing supplies.

New potatoes appeared in limited amounts in almost all Canadian markets while New Brunswick predicted the largest potato crop in a decade. In the Windsor area destruction of vegetables and tobacco as an aftermath of the recent tornado necessitated considerable re-planting. Sweet potatoes were scarce.

Not Sure Draftees To Get New Medal

Ottawa, July 13 (CP)—Among other things, the question of just who will get the new "war medal, 1939-45" was obscure today and Government sources said they could throw no light on it.

Veterans Ministers MacKenzie revealed yesterday that it will be revealed yesterday that it will be Canadians who served in the forces at home or abroad during the Second Great War. But whether they will grant it to NRMA men who declined to go active is not known publicly at present.

Such details of the medal's scope and range of award are expected to be announced shortly. Its design will be decided in London by, the War Office. Its purpose is similar to that of the Victory Medal granted after the First Great War.

SUGGETS BOARD OF APPEAL FOR RADIO DISPUTES

Association of Broadcasters Sees Present Set-up as Undemocratic

Ottawa, July 13 (CP)—Possibility of a re-allotment of responsibilities within the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation was seen today in a suggestion by Revenue Minister McCann, whose portfolio includes CBC jurisdiction, that operating and general administrative duties should be separated.

Dr. McCann made the suggestion as the Commons radio committee yesterday rounded out its questioning of members of the Canadian Association of Broadcasters representing independent radio stations. The committee discussed a C.A.B. suggestion for the establishment of an independent board of appeal to arbitrate in radio legislation and regulations.

The private station operators said they considered the present set-up, in which the CBC is both engaged in radio operations and at the same time is supreme authority on regulations, was undemocratic.

The Association recommended an appeal board to which both private stations and the CBC would have access in the case of disputes.

Sees Scope Within Present Set-up

"I think there is sufficient scope within the present set-up," Dr. McCann said. "You could have an operating division of the CBC and the Corporation itself acting as an arbitrator in disputes.

Arthur Smith (PC - Calgary West) suggested that already existed but Dr. McCann said there

AUSTRALIANS GET TAXATION RELIEF IN NEW BUDGET

Concessions Given To Modest Wage Earners Who Make Up 85 P.C. Taxable Population

By WILLIAM STEWART
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Sydney, Australia, July 13 — (CP Cable)—Concessions intended to bring relief from high wartime taxation rates to modest wage earners who make up 85 per cent of the taxable Australian population, were announced yesterday by Prime Minister Chifley, national treasurer.

Income tax cuts on a sliding scale of from seven per cent of the previous rates on salaries upward of $15,000, to 40 per cent on the smallest incomes, were announced in a general financial statement which the Prime Minister and Treasurer submitted to the House instead of a detailed budget.

No budget will be presented to parliament until after the general elections, due about the end of September, when the Labor government seeks to return to office.

In the case of small wage earners with dependents, exemptions were increased on income taxations, but taxes remained unchanged for social services taxation which is collected in combination with the income tax rates. Social services taxation, however, is based on a separate scale, equivalent to about one per cent of yearly earnings of $330 and increasing by a small fraction for higher incomes.

Under the new tax scales, a single man will be exempt from taxation on earnings up to $330 a year. He will start paying social services taxes at that figure and become eligible for income tax at $340.

This is how the new rates will affect a man with a wife and two children and earning $25 a week—which is said to be a fair average wage for an Australian worker who belongs to a labor union and whose earnings are fixed by the industrial courts:

Price of Cigars To be Increased

Montreal, July 13 (CP) — The nickel cigar, which even before the war became a six-center, is ready now to move into the "two-fer" class—two for 15 cents. Other brands will likely move up accordingly, it was learned authoritatively today.

The reason, say these sources: effective June 28 the government increased the cigar tax and changed the taxation system from a graduated method to an ad valorem tax, which now is 33 per cent. Higher labor, leaf tobacco and wrapping costs are said to have played a part in the increased price to the smoker.

2 Liners Docked For Labor Dispute

Detroit, July 13 (AP) — Some 600 passengers on a Detroit and Cleveland Navigation Company liner made a late trip to Buffalo last night and 400 on another boat were delayed in their cruiser to Mackinac Island as the result of a labor dispute here.

Protests from the Brotherhood of Locomotive and Steamship Clerks (A.F.L.) over the firing of an employee kept the two liners docked in the Detroit River several hours while the passengers awaited outcome of the company-union discussions.

Both vessels sailed late in the evening after company officials announced the union had agreed to have workers return to the boats and discuss the case further Monday.

Russia, Allies Reach Parting Of Ways on Germany

Molotov Refuses to Support Plan to Administer Reich

By LOUIS NEVIN

Paris July 13 —(AP)— Indications that Russia and the western allies have reached a definite parting of the ways on both the present administration and the future of Germany, were seen today following last night's adjournment in disagreement of the Foreign Minister's council.

The ministers adjourned at 9:10 p. m. after a 28-day session which produced several compromises on vital issues — including the internationalization of the Adriatic port of Trieste. They will meet again next fall. The 21-power peace conference will open here July 29.

On the question of Germany, the ministers failed to reach any major agreement, despite lengthy debate.

Foreign minister Molotov of Russia refused to support a United States plan for a central economic administration for Germany. This proposal was backed by foreign minister Bidault of France in a remarkable concession, when he agreed to go along with the state secretary Byrnes of the United States if the coal-rich Sarr Valley was not included .

Mr. Molotov asked further time to study the condition— endorsed by Britain and the United States — that the Sarr be placed under the French supervision.

Reiterates Offer

Mr. Byrnes then reiterated his offer to merge the U.S. occupation zone of Germany economically with any other zone.

The possibility that Britain might be willing to fuse her zone with that of the United States was seen in a statement by British delegation sources that their government was giving sympathetic study to the United States offer.

These sources said Britain's problems in Germany were similar to those of the United States and that Britain was spending £80,000,000 $320,000,000) a year in her zone and the United States $200,000,000.

Both American and British informants said that these expenditures were necessitated because goods could not be exchanged among the four zones, under the present setup.

No Compromise on Austria

The ministers also failed last night to reach any compromise on the Austrian question. Here, again, Mr. Molotov blocked a United States proposal—to establish a special commission to draft a peace treaty with Austria.

Mr. Molotov also declined to permit authorization of a commission to define German assets in Austria, a British informant said.

United States sources said Mr. Molotov's opposition to any immediate decision on Austria was linked with his assertion that several hundred thousand displaced persons with pro-Hitler leanings still are in Austria. The Russian Minister has declared that these persons must be deported.

Byrnes Desires Ministers' Meeting After Peace Treaties

Paris, July 13 (AP) — State Secretary Byrnes of the United States, declared today he wants another foreign ministers council to take place immediately after the impending peace conference adopts the peace treaties.

His intention to urge another foreign ministers session prior to the United Nations meeting in New York, tentatively set for September 23, was disclosed at a press conference before he left by air for Washington.

Reviewing the council's work, Mr. Byrnes remarked that internatiopalism of Trieste would be a good experiment in international co-operation.

Expect Final Vote On Loan to U. K.

By FRANCIS M. LE MAY

Washington, July 13 (AP)— A final vote was expected today in the House of Representatives on the proposed $3,750,000 British loan, with proponents arguing that the outcome will determine whether the world looks to Washington or Moscow for leadership.

Critics contended Russia might consider the loan an "overt act," and said it is more likely to promote war than peace.

As the House came to the showdown, Speaker Sam Rayburn (Dem.-Tex.), predicted ratification by 20 to 50 votes. The Senate has approved the transaction, 46 to 34.

The latest polls of House members showed 188 for the credit, with 163 against and 82 undecided or not reached.

First major test today was expected to come on an amendment by Rep. E. M. Dirksen (Rep.-Ill.), proposing that Britain put up collateral for any money advanced.

Other amendments expected would:

Require Britain to deed to the United States, in consideration for the loan, certain island areas in the Atlantic where the United States now has 99-year leases for military purposes.

Require that interest on the loan begin immediately, rather than at the end of the first five years.

Provide that the interest rate be raised from two to four per cent.

Negotiators Study Admission Of 10,000 Jews

London, July 13 — (CP)—British and United States negotiators today met for the second time at 10 Downing Street, in hopes of speeding a final decision on admission of an additional 100,000 Jews to Palestine.

The discussion — described by British and American sources as being at "an official level" — was understood to be on military and political consequences in the Holy Land if recommendations of the British-American Committee on Palestine are carried out.

The British negotiations, who already have moved toward one of the avowed preliminaries — the disarming of illegal Jewish underground forces — were reported to be raising the question of informal assurances of United States military assistance if fresh immigration should cause large-scale disturbances.

The United States consistently has offered technical and financial support in implementing the recommendation on 100,000 Jews, but has withheld commitment on military aid.

Meanwhile, support of British counter-measures in Palestine came from a British Rabbi, Dr. Israel I. Mattuck. Speaking at the Liberal Jewish Synagogue in London, he commended action against the "terrorism of Palestine," and declared:

UNDISCLOSED SUM TAKEN FROM SAFE

With all the earmarks of a professional safe breaking job, the safe at the Quinte Dry Beverages, Station Street, was cracked some time during the night and an undisclosed amount of cash and valuables taken. Discovery of the break-in was made shortly after seven o'clock Friday morning.

Local police investigating the safe cracking job were unable to state the amount of cash taken from the safe, but stated the safe had been blown by a charge of "soup". Entry to the building had been gained through a skylight, it was stated.

Glen McAllister Given 3 Years On Theft Charge

Glen McAllister, formerly of Toronto, was sentenced to three years in Kingston penitentiary when he appeared before Magistrate T. Y. Wills in city police court here yesterday. McAllister pleaded guilty to the theft of cigarettes valued at $118 from the Canadian National Railways and elected trial by judge and jury on a charge of having illegal possession of explosives.

McAllister was apprehended by Canadian National Railways police when he stole a carton of cigarettes with the key to a locker containing some 22 sticks of dynamite later being found on his person.

Appearing in court during the morning McAllister pleaded guilty to the theft of cigarettes but declined to elect on the second charge of having explosives.

In the afternoon he elected trial by jury and was committed following taking of evidence during the preliminary hearing when the Crown brought in a surprise witness. The Crown's witness was James Cox, of Toronto, who said the day prior to McAllister's arrest he had travelled with the accused from Brockville to Belleville.

Cox testified that McAllister had with him a haversack containing dynamite and that he had been with the accused when it was placed in the locker at the Belleville station.

Cox had escaped apprehension when McAllister was arrested but was picked up in the city following his return from Toronto when local police received a tip he had been associated with McAllister.

Egg Prices Up To 50c Dozen

Price of eggs jumped to 50 cents per dozen on the local produce market this morning as local poultry keepers reported a falling off in production. The 50 cent price was general, being a five cent increase from last week's quotations.

What was claimed by growers to be virtually the last of this season's strawberries sold at 40 cents the box. Red currants sold at 25 cents the box, gooseberries at 20 and 25 cents. Black sweet ccherries brought $2 the small basket or 40 cents the qt. box. Locally grown Montmorencys sold at a slightly lower figure.

On the vegetable market cauliflower brought ten and 25 a head with cabbages bringing the same figure. Potatoes were plentiful and brought 70 to 75 cents the peck, while carrots, beets and onions sold at dime the bunch and radishes at a nickel. Peas sold at 45 and 50 cents the quart.

The offering of fowl on the inside market was not large with broilers bringing a general price of 45 cents per pound. Mature fowl ranged from 40 to 47 cents per pound according to quality.

Belleville Barbers To Petition Govt. To Lift Prices

Barbers of the Belleville zone will petition the government for an increase in rates for services, it was learned here today. The suggested increase calls for the price of haircuts to be upped to 50 cents and shaves to 35 cents.

The increase is necessary, the barbers feel, because of the rise in the cost of living, lack of competent help because of prevailing wage scales, and especially the increased cost of supplies.

The barbers stated, through their official representative that they had approached the city council here and were advised of a favorable reception if they contacted the proper government authorities.

Peterborough barbers at a mass meeting recently also petitioned the government for a similar rise in service charges.

Audrey Rattray, Montreal, Almost Instantly Killed

Audrey Isabel Rattray, age 24, of 3464 King Edward Avenue, Montreal, was almost instantly killed Friday evening when a tire blew out on the auto in which she was a passenger, the vehicle going out of control and turning over three times. The accident occurred ten miles east of Belleville on Highway No. 2.

The car was driven by Douglas Rattray, age 28, brother of the deceased girl. Rattray was thrown out the left door of the car and over a fence into a field as the car rolled down the north curb of the highway. The girl fell out the left front door as the car came to rest. Miraculously Rattray escaped serious injury.

According to police reports the party had left Montreal at mid-afternoon and were travelling west when the accident occurred.

Miss Rattray was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Rattray of Montreal and was a member of the United Church. She is survived by her parents and two sisters, Mrs. C. P. Dutton and Mrs. J. B. Brewer, and two brothers, Douglas and Leonard, all of Montreal.

The body will be forwarded this evening from the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street, to Montreal, where the funeral will take place.

Three Frankford District Persons Hurt in Accident

Three Frankford district persons are in Belleville hospital as result of a partial head-on collision Friday evening which occurred on a sideroad north of the red schoolhouse on the 5th. concession of Sidney Township.

In hospital are Gerald Foster, 21, of Frankford, driver of the southbound car, and two passengers who were riding with him, Miss Vera Holden, 20, and Ronald Patrick, 19. Driver of the northbound vehicle, Mr. Earl Lidster, of Belleville, was not injured.

According to police reports the accident occurred at the top of an abrupt knoll on the sideroad just to the north of the concession. Foster was travelling south intending to turn onto the 5th. Concession when his auto collided with the northbound Lidster driven vehicle.

Junior Farmers Interested In Plowing Contests

Members of the Sidney township junior farmers are very much interested in the 1946 junior farmer plowing competitions and have suggested that the county organization at its next meeting arrange for place and date for a competition. Applications for judges will be made immediately to Mr. J. A. Carrol, secretary of the Ontario Plowmen's Association.

The June meeting of the Sidney junior farmers was addressed by Harry W. Burns, assistant agricultural representative, who described the common barberry and how it acts as the intermediate host for the fungus causing stem rust of grain and the European buckthorn which performs a similar function in the spread of leaf rust in oats.

H. Lynn Fair, agricultural representative suggested the club set an example to other clubs in the county by commencing a common barberry and European buckthorn clean-up. This suggestion was acted on by the club which voted that the clean-up campaign be commenced immediately. Don Nicholson, president of the club, was in the chair.

L.O.O.M. Defeats Kingston Team

Trenton — In an exhibition game here on Wednesday evening the Loyal Order of Moose softball nine defeated the powerful Canadian Corps team from Kingston by an 8 to 6 score. Errors were directly responsible for three of the tallies checked up by the Limestone City representatives.

Burrows started on the mound for the locals and with the score tied in the sixth inning was relieved by Rosenplot who held the Kingston boys to one hit in the final three innings.

The lineup of the teams and the score by innings are as follows:

Kingston—Baker 2b; Nouray c; McGregor 3b; G. Smith lf; McGregor ss; Moore cf; K. Smith p; Maybee lf; Casterton 1b; Donnley ss. (Donnley relieved McGregor in the 7th inning).

In the local softball schedule the Moose are well out in front with Wooler and Rocks being tied for second spot, and the I.O.O.F. but one game behind. Army and Navy with but one win to their credit are two points ahead of Batawa who in six starts have failed to win a game.

In the Junior division the three teams are closely bunched and while at this point Bonds appear to be the ultimate winners Noonans and Freemans are so closely bunched that anything can happen in the four games remaining to be played.

Top Ranking Officials Heard By Optimist Club

"Teach our youth brotherly love, freedom of speech, freedom of religion and there will be less fear of the atomic bomb," so stated Frank Mallory, Past Governor District No. 15 Optimist International, in a stirring address delivered to the local Optimist Club at their bi-monthly meeting held at St. Andrew's banquet hall.

Mr. Mallory recalled that one of the first actions taken by Adolf Hitler in his stride for power was to dispose of all service clubs because of their international bond of friendship. Therefore now that the work of manning the bombers, protecting the convoys and engaging in combat on the field of battle has been so valiantly accomplished, never before has the need for the work of these service clubs been so acute. We must now be sincerely aware of the value of our Optimist slogan "Friend of the Boy" and it is our responsibility to save the youth of our time from the inevitable repercussions that follow a struggle.

Mr. Mallory quoted Drew Pearson's remark that the present year would present the greatest wave of delinquency ever known. He stated that this fact has now become a reality and only through our service clubs, churches and schools can we hope to counteract this situation.

The speaker urged the Belleville club to immediately adopt a task to join in this great work and thereby benefit the youth of our community.

Before terminating his address Mr. Mallory complimented Belleville on their fine club and Optimist International on their post war program.

The speaker was introduced by Vice President Douf MacDonald and thanked by Optimist Tom McCauley. The meeting ended with the singing of "O Canada."

Music Pupils Pass Exams

Congratulations to Geraldine Farrar, who completed Grade I and Grade II Theory and Grade VIII piano in seven months.

Mid-winter examinations held at Albert College in February: Grade III piano, Joan Baker (pass); Grade II piano, Marvin Hayne, honors; Grade II Theory, Donald Forsyth, 1st. class honors.

The Whitehouse Beauty Salon, 66 Dundas St. West, Trenton, announces their new radio program every Monday and Thursday at 11.30 a.m. The program is to be "Aloha Land", tantalizing music from the strings of "Lukewela's Royal Hawaiians." This is an N.B.C. Thesaurus program presentation. The program will be presented over the new community station at Belleville which will be opening in a matter of two or three weeks. The dial position of Radio Station CJBQ will be 1230.

Canadian Wins Conan Doyle Cup at Bisley

By STUART UNDERHILL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Bisley Camp, Surrey, England, July 13 — (CP Cable)—Capt. R. W. Hampton, formerly of Guelph, today won the Conan Doyle Challenge Statuette in the morning shootoff of the National Rifle Association's annual meet, a few hours before he and 99 other marksmen began firing in the final round for the King's prize.

The Conan Doyle contest over a 500-yard range, first was fired Thursday when Capt. Hampton finished in a tie with seven others. In the shootoff today, three marksmen finished their eight shots with possible 40s and each was given one more round.

Experts said today that conditions for the afternoon running off for the King's prize were "perfect"—a windless day, slightly overcast. Each marksman fires 15 shots each over 900-and-1,000-yard ranges in the contest for the King's Prize.

Picton, July 13—More than 250 young men and women of the townships of Athol and Hallowell who served in the armed forces, were guests of honor at a reception held in Picton armouries Wednesday night. During the evening they were presented with attractive framed certificates. Lists of those who served was read by the township clerks, Norman Fennell of Athol and Clarence Mallory of Hallowell. The presentations were made by the Reeves, Lyle Branscombe and Warden Earl Brummell. James dec. Hepburn M.P.P., acted as chairman and short addresses were given by the reeves, George Tuskin, M.P., Major Ray Young and Deputy Reeve D. O. Reynolds.

A musical program was presented by 'Red' Newman and a group of artists from Toronto. The dinner was served by the Legion Ladies' Auxiliary at long tables decorated in red, white and blue with flowers also in this color scheme. The platform was decorated with flags, flowers and welcome home signs. Mrs. James Hedges, president of the auxiliary was presented with a book by Ross Munro, in appreciation of her services. General arrangements were in charge of Phil Dodds.

Most Perfect Clock in the World

Quartz crystals have some extraordinary properties and uses. They regulate broadcast frequencies to keep them in exactly the right wave-bands; they give precision to the radio pulses of radar; they make possible 600 simultaneous conversations along two wires; and Ritchie Calder here explains how it is done in London Calling.

I have just been setting my watch by the most perfect clock in the world, a clock which would take 165 years to gain or lose a minute. In other words, it is accurate to within a thousandth part of a second per day. We speak of a 'split second'; try to imagine a second split into a thousand parts.

This clock is the quartz crystal clock which the scientists of the British Post Office have produced. Eighteen such clocks are being installed in the Time Department of the Royal Observatory to control radio time-signals and to check the earth's rotation—eighteen of them, each checked against the rest, because even a thousandth part of a second per day is too big an error for the precision work our astronomers do today. Three have been in use at Greenwich for the past year.

This marvellous time-keeping is due to a little bit of quartz no bigger and scarcely thicker than a postage stamp. It watched them slice up boulders of Brazilian quartz with diamond-edged circular saws, and grind the slices and trim them with incredible accuracy into shape. And then, in an operation that looked as difficult as trying surgically to remove the appendix of a flea, they soldered tiny wire terminals to the face of the quartz.

Now, when energy from a valve amplifier is put into this slice of crystal it vibrates. It goes in and out like a concertina, with this slight difference: this particular concertina goes in and out 100,000 times per second or 360,000,000 times an hour. You can't feel it vibrate, but you can see it vibrate if you dust the crystal with a very fine powder. The powder is shaken like flour in a sieve.

In my wrist-watch, the balance wheel oscillates five times to register a second, 300 times to register one minute and 18,000 for an hour. In the quartz clock the crystal vibrations number 6,000,000 to the minute. These vibrations cause similar oscillations in the valve-amplifier, and these elecertcial oscillations operate the clock. You can imagine the delicate workmanship which goes into the mechanism of that clock in order to convert these vibrations faithfully into a record of time. But, obediently, and at precisely the right 100,000th. part of a second, they put the 'pips' into the BBC broadcasts.

There is a big demand for these clocks from Europe and elsewhere.

Quartz crystals have other jobs to do besides time-keeping. They are the traffic policemen of the ether. They regulate the broadcast frequencies and see that they keep in exactly the right wave-bands.

The success of radar, the method of detecting incoming aircraft by means of reflected radio-pluses, of bringing our own 'planes exactly over their target, of revealing that target, no matter how dark or how cloudy, by means of radio-signals reflected back off cities or factories, depended on the precision given by quartz crystals. The crystals which made the first thousand-bomber raid on Cologne possible were made at the Post Office Research Station at Dollis Hill, London. Altogether, 30,000 crystals of radar type were produced in four years.

One of the most remarkable feats of the quartz crystals in their job as traffic-policemen is to be found in the 'co-axial cable' system. If you have ever watched a telephone engineer repairing an ordinary telephone cable, you have seen the enormous bunch of wires, each of which he has to connect to its twin. Imagine a bunch of 660 wires! Well, in the co-axial cable these 660 have been reduced to two, but, thanks to the quartz-policemen, these two carry 660 voice-circuits which means 660 conversations simuleaneously.

And, as a footnote, here is another new trick of the British telephone engineers. Radar depends on a pulse being echoed back from an obstacle. The Post Office telephone engineers have borrowed this radar-echo. If there is a fault in the co-axial cable, they send the pulse like an electric ferret along the cable. When the fault is encountered, back comes the echo, draws a diagram on a cathode screen, and tells the engineers to within a matter of yards where the fault is.

Arrest and Trial Of Those Responsible

Jerusalem, July 13 —(CP)— The arrest and trial of Jewish agency leaders and other Jews "responsible for the state of affairs in Palestine" was demanded yesterday by the Arab higher executive committee.

The committee, in a letter to Lt.-Gen. Sir Alan Cunningham, Palestine high commissioner, said Jewish leaders were responsible for "the wave of murder, destruction; intimidation and incitement which has swept the country and resulted in a serious loss of Arab and non-Jewish life and property."

Charge Laid Against Colonel

Frankfurt, Germany, July 13—(AP)—The United States army today announced that Col. Lester A Webb, of Macon, Ga, was held in Frankfurt in connection with an asserted attempt to smuggle $12,386 worth of gold bullion, Swiss coins and watches out of Switzerland

The army's Public Relations Divison said charges had been preferred against Col Webb and that he would be tried soon. Col Webb had been in Switzerland arranging for United States military personnel to attend Swiss colleges

LIBERTY GRANTED 3,000

Madrid, July 13 — (AP)—The Cabinet of Generalissimo Francisco Franco announced in a communique today that conditional liberty had been granted to 3,000 prisoners. The communique did not state whether those affected were political prisoners or whether they had been released as yet.

IN MEMORIAM

BRASON — In memory of a loving mother, Mrs. M. J. Brason, who died July 13th., 1945, and a dear brother Ernest M. Juby, who died July 13th., 1930.

Friends may think the wound is healed
But they little know the sorrow
That lies within my heart concealed.
Their memory is as dear today
As in the hour they passed away.
— Carrie.

WATTS — In memory of our beloved father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. William Watts (Cannifton), who passed into the Great Beyond.

Not one day forgotten, until we meet again to part no more, through the power of the Blood of Jesus.

Taxes at Peak in 1943

In 1943 when taxes were at their peak because of the war, this worker had about $3 of his weekly $25 deducted at source. In January this year when the first post-war reductions became effective, the amount dropped to roughly $2.50 weekly. And under the cuts announced yesterday, the reduction comes down further to about $2.

Deductions under the social services tax start from what this man earns over $13.50 weekly. His income tax deductions start from his earning over $23 weekly. Formerly the latter deductions started at about $21.50 weekly salary.

The worker continues to receive exemption for such items as union dues and insurance payments.

Demobilization Exceeded

The affect of the tax on a person earning $16,000 a year was that the government will take about $9,300 where it had been taking $10,000. Taxation on this bracket was about $11,300 at the wartime taxation peak.

Mr. Chifley told the House of Representatives that Australia's demobilization target of 400,000 service personnel out of service by June 30 was exceeded by 50,000 and that 400,000 more persons engaged in civil production than a year ago. The total now is estimated to be just over 3,000,000 men and women working.

Government levies on their income and taxation from other sources raised just over $1,000,000,000 during the past fiscal year. Total government revenue was approximately $1,140,000,000.

Australia's total expenditure during the year was approximately $1,630,000,000, with a war expenditure of $1,100,000,000.

Possibility of Probe Of Institution Seen

Halifax, July 13 —(CP)— The Halifax Herald said in a newspage story today that the shackling of four boys at the City Industrial School last month might lead to an investigation of the operation of the institution, including its corrective training program.

The boys, it was stated, were shackled to prevent them running away at a time when the school was experiencing numerous disappearances of its inmates.

The school, which has about 100 boy inmates, is a private institution financed partly by the Provincial Government and partly by grants from Nova Scotia municipalities.

Trim New Craft Boosts Sailing In Nova Scotia

By JACK TRACY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Halifax (CP)—The white-sailed fleets are skimming the waters off Halifax again as the first peacetime season has brought the greatest revival in the port's century and a half of yachting history.

The arrival of a dozen new Bluenose Number One design boats has helped give yachting its spurt. The craft are owned by members of the Armdale Yacht Club, one of the youngest squadrons on the coast.

The new 23-foot yachts were drafted along the lines of their namesake, the undefeated champion of the International Fishermen's Races by W. J. Roue of Halifax, designer of the famous Bluenose which was lost off Haiti early this year.

The Bluenose yachts have a 16-foot waterline and a 775-pound lead keel. They have a slippery light displacement hull and broad decks.

The Armdale Club, whose membership has grown from 10 to 300 in a decade, brought them here to promote class racing.

During the war when the harbor mouth was blocked by a submarine boom, Armdale yachtsmen were confined to the narrow, sheltered waters of the Northwest Arm of Halifax Harbor. With the new type craft, club members who were formerly devoted to snipe-racing have extended their activities seaward.

Entry in Big Race

The young club this year ventured into mid-ocean racing. For the first time its burgee was carried in the international Newport-Bermuda race by Don Duff's 50-foot Cyclone.

Another member, Roy Tidman, former Halifax news cameraman, has readied a 54-foot yawl which he intends to sail around to the Pacific Coast.

The Armdale club, with its 65 small boats, has made yachting popular among all classes here. But the Royal Nova Scotia Squadron, senior club in North America, is planning new activities.

Its nearly 300 members are getting set to race for the three chief trophies, the Prince of Wales cup donated in 1860 by the Prince who was later to become Edward VII, the Winona Cup and the Coronation Cup donated by Commodore Thompson of the Royal Kennebecasis Yacht Club of Saint John, N.B., a half century ago.

It will be the first time in seven years that all three cups will have been up for contest. The larger craft of the R.N.S.Y.S., needing sea-room for their racing, were forced to lay up during the war or move 30 miles down the shore to Hubbards on St. Margaret's Bay.

The R.N.S.Y.S., which as the Halifax Yacht Club was granted a Royal Charter nearly a century ago, is one of the few yacht clubs in the world to fly the White Ensign.

Bombs to Blast Guardian Island Of German Ports

London (CP)—The saga of Helgoland, ancient dwelling place of gods and Germany's North Sea Gibraltar in two wars, will be ended abruptly this summer by a British demolition squad.

The mile-long island fortress, 30 miles off the estuaries of the Elbe and the Weser, is to be blown from the earth's surface in one gigantic explosion which will leave only a few barren rocks for sea birds to rest on.

This, a senior naval officer has said, will be Britain's answer to the Helgoland dilemma. It is also expected to satisfy English ornithologists who contended the island was essential to migratory birds.

After VE-Day, Allied bombers kept right on pasting Helgoland and its satellite sand pit, Duene. Their airfields and submarine pens were used as targets for devastating practice raids. The island's normal 3,000 inhabitants had been evacuated, of course. The final coup de grace will be delivered with several hundred tons of planted explosives, rendering the island permanently uninhabitable.

British naval strategists have not liked Helgoland ever since whitehall traded it to Germany in 1890, for Zanzibar in the Indian Ocean. The British had seized Helgoland from the Danes in 1807.

Natural Outpost

Red sandstone cliffs, rising to a green plateau 200 feet above the sea, made the island a natural outpost guarding the German ports of Hamburg, Cuxhaven, Bremerhaven, Emden and the Wilhelmshaven naval base.

Unfortunately Helgoland could also be viewed as an offensive spearhead pointed at the British Isles.

Under the Versailles treaty, the fortress was dismantled and Germany was told to keep Helgoland as a resort for birds, sunbathers, and fishermen.

Nevertheless Hitler commenced its rearmament as early as 1936.

In ancient times, before the sea eroded it to one-fifth its former size, Helgoland was believed to have been a favored haunt of the northland gods whom the Nazis later revered. Its name in German means "Holy Land."

In addition to guns, the Nazis girdled the island with granite slabs and an iron chain as protection against the ocean's whittling.

Black Market African Style

Johannesburg (CP)—A new form of black market was brought to notice recently. A large chain store, which operates a "natives only" counter once a week to help natives obtain goods which they might otherwise have to buy at black market prices in some location shops, discovered recently that natives queuing for a limited quota of tea were selling their places in the queue for 50 cents a time.

To save those at the tail of the queue from a long and fruitless wait the store had issued as many tickets as there were half-pound packets of tea, and the rest of the queue was told that there were no further supplies.

A number of those with tickets had promptly begun to bargain with the less fortunate customers and tickets were changing hands freely at 50 cents a time.

The store now has stopped the ticket system, and customers queue till there are no more goods left.

Legion Closes Atlantic House

Halifax (CP)—The serviceman's "big brother" during war years—the Canadian Legion Atlantic House in Halifax—has gone out of business.

Housed in a century-old mansion originally built by a wealthy brewer, the centre during the war did everything from battle, argue and plead in the fighting man's behalf to lending him the odd dollar when he went broke. It also gave him free counsel when he ran into difficulties with his wife or mother-in-law.

Primarily an administration centre, Atlantic House also maintained recreation facilities for the man in uniform. Officials estimate that some 200,000 servicemen benefitted from its services during the war.

Arthur F. MacIsaac, personal services officer at Atlantic House, expressed the Legion's thanks "to all those organizations and individuals who co-operated with us during the war and helped us to solve the problems of servicemen and veterans."

An indication of the work done by Atlantic House is that, during 1945 alone, 6,259 letters were written on servicemen's behalf and 14,524 cases were handled. Through the centre, women of Legion auxiliaries took a total of 202,281 parcels and presented them to returning members of the services.

Atlantic House, on downtown Hollis Street, is a monument to mid - Victorian architecture. Through the majestic entrance back to the butler's pantry, the building presents a luxurious lay-out of halls and chambers bedecked in mirrors, marble, and carved cherubs.

Built during the 1840s when Hollis Street was the fashionable district of the city, it now stands out from its plain surroundings like a rose in a mud-patch.

Many a fighting man who sought and obtained assistance in time of need will keep a warm spot in his heart for old Atlantic House. To many it was mother, attorney, and big brother — all rolled into one.

Capital Closeups

By DOUGLAS HOW
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, July 13 CP)— The big Irishman with the big words stood up and began to speak at 3:30 p.m. He planned to talk for a half hour, he said later, but one thing led to another and it was pretty hard to cut it short. But by 5:53 he had said enough to get across his views on the government's plan to increase Commons' seats from 245 to 255.

The big words were there again, the big gestures, as Senator G. G. McGeer of Vancouver propounded his dislike for the plan he referred to as "this magnificent exhibition of political calisthenics on a mathematical trapeze."

He quoted the biblical references Justice Minister St. Laurent had used to explain why the minister thought the government would never ignore the provinces in any future tampering with that section of the B.N. Act which deals with the right to use the French language in parliament.

"'It is not the manner of the Romans to deliver any man to die, before that he which is accused have the accusers face to face and have license to answer for himself concerning the crime laid against him.'

"There was no statute, there was no law that this be done, but there was the concept in the Roma nconscience that it was the proper thing to do."

There, biblically, the minister rested his case. From there the big Irishman took it up.

"I only want to say that if the security of our provinces and minorities is no better than was the security of St. Paul in the hands of Festus and Agrippa, we are in a very sorry plight...... from church history and tradition, we learn that Paul was taken out on a Roman holiday and thrown to the lions....

"Why not go a little further? There was another great Roman authority on whom the carpenter of Nazareth depended — Pontius Pilate. He had the same arbitrary powers at Agrippa and Festus enjoyed when they carried Paul to Rome, either to be butchered to make a Roman holiday or to be eaten by lions in a Roman circus."

Spelling: The veterans' committee of the Commons laughed this week when Lt.-Col. Cecil Merritt, V.C., (PC-Vancouver Burrard) arose to proclaim "there was considerable merit in what the last speaker had to say." Grinning, he hastened to add "that word has just one 'R' and one 'T'."

HIRE COURT DRESS FOR ROYAL VISIT

Canterbury, England (CP) — Boys of the Upper Sixth form will wear court dress—hired for £2 ($9) a day—when the King and Queen visit King's School on July 11.

All have been measured for tail coat, white waistcoat, wing collar, white bow tie, black court breeches, black silk hose and pumps with black silk bows. They are to be the royal escort.

The King will present the school—oldest in Britain—with its Royal Charter, a legacy of Henry VIII, who gave it the name King's School.

Saves 200 Lives 21-Year Record

Regina (CP)—Mile-long Wascana Lake which fronts Saskatchewan's legislature here has taken 22 lives in the last 11 years—but Pete Shepherd has pulled more than 200 drowning people from its grasp in the last 21 years.

Life saving director and bath house attendant at the artificial lake's bathing beach, Mr. Shepherd says people will continue to drown in the tiny lake as long as they fail to realize that one can drown in six feet of water as easily as six fathoms. In past years he saved an average of 10 persons a year but the figure has dropped recently.

The bath house is equipped with the latest life-saving devices including inhalators and oxygen for emergency use. The newest piece of equipment is a "teeter" smilira to those in children's playparks on which the drowning victim is placed face down and the movement of the "teeter" forces air into the lungs and water out of the stomach.

But despite all equipment and vigilant lifeguards, Mr. Shepherd believes that the unpredictable human factor can still make a "sucker" out of science.

URGES MORE DIGNITY IN JUVENILE COURTS

Leeds, England (CP)— The "sports jacket and flannels" atmosphere of juvenile courts should be replaced by more dignity in order to impress young offenders, Home Secretary Chuter Ede said here.

"I don't think that a juvenile is impressed when he sees a man he knows to be a policeman sitting in the court in tennis shirt and flannel slacks," he said. "The law is a majestic thing, and has got to be a little more majestic than it is today, because the law is an expression of the consciousness of the community."

Mr. Ede said he did not plan to reorganize the juvenile courts "but I believe we shall have to get away from some of the sloppiness."

Canada's Battle in Normandy

The third of a series of volumes has been issued by the Department of National Defence with the aim of providing the people of Canada with authentic historical information on "The Canadian Army at War." This tells of the Canadian Army's part in the initial and all-important stage of the campaign of victory in North-West Europe. Lieut.-Gen. Charles Foulkes, Chief of the General Staff in a foreword says that "the operations in Normandy produced perhaps the most remarkable and significant victory in modern history; and in that victory Canadian forces played a very distinguished part."

This is the last volume of the series. It is proposed to publish at the earliest possible time a comprehensive one-volume historical sketch affording a brief but accurate account of the work of the Canadian Army in all theatres throughout the war. There will be an Official History proper which it is hoped to produce in the course of about five years. This latter will consist of four volumes and will give more detail of the events on the basis of a complete examination of all available sources of information.

The present volume based on preliminary survey of official records of the Canadian Army deals with the period June 6 to September 1, 1944 and was written by Col. C. P. Stacey, O.B.E., Director, Historical Section of the General Staff.

The decisive battle in North-West France in the summer of 1944 was won, he says, by men of many nations, Britain, United States and Canada, contributing the largest components, and Poland providing a fine division, the French of the Interior and subsequently regular forces playing essential roles and Belgium, The Netherlands and Czechoslovakia all playing their part. The author says "If it was a triumph of many nations, it was also a victory shared by the three fighting services."

Of the importance of the Battle of Normandy he writes: "It had been an extraordinary campaign. Within ninety days the Allies had invaded the Continent, built up vast armies on its soil, inflicted a most serious and far-reaching reverse upon the German army and liberated from its control the capital of France and the greater part of the country. The enemy had suffered tremendous losses. The total casualties of the Allied forces in the campaign in North-West France had risen by the end of August to about 200,000 of all categories; but the German losses in prisoners alone already surpassed this figure, amounting to better than 210,000."

Of Canada's service here it is said these "very heavy Canadian losses were part of the price of a victory that well deserves to be called magnificent; magnificent as a feat of arms, more magnificent as a blow for human freedom against the bloodiest tyranny our age has known. The course of the history of the world had been changed and changed vastly for the better . . . In this campaign Hitler lost the army that was his best hope of staving off disaster. The formations destroyed there could not be replaced. By cracking his whip he brought into existence Volksgrenadier divisions and the Home Guard known as the Volkssturm; but these were no substitutes for the men who were now in the Allies' prison cages or in the myriad graves about Falaise. Given continued pressure exerted by the Russians in the east and the Allies in the west, his position after August 1944 was hopeless. In Normandy he lost the war; and Canadians of future generations will recall with pride how much the blows struck by their army did to bring him low."

Vacation Spirit

Millions upon millions are holidaying on this continent of North America with holidays and travel stressed more than ever before. The removal of restrictions of other years, the sense of freedom in the era of peace which has begun, the foresight of tourist agencies and government departments in pointing to the natural beauty of Canada and the United States, have built up an atmosphere and spirit of enjoyment of nature and relaxation in the vast outdoors of this great continent. Not only are Canadians and Americans visiting one another's countries but Canadians are visiting other parts of Canada and Americans other parts of the United States. The more this spirit develops the greater will be the throngs who will take to the open road, to the woodlands, to the lakes and the rivers and the summer homes in myriads of centres of summer vacationing. Holidays are for all now. Everyone realizes their need and value.

Out of this must come health and the relaxation which is the great factor in health and restoration of frayed nerves and tired bodies.

The season is but a small part gone and there is given every promise that the sights of crowded caravans of people bent on holiday freedom are but the glimpse of what will continue for the rest of the season and on into the autumn for many and a sign of what the coming years will produce and develop in touring and travel.

Food Saving

Preparation of meals according to the rules of modern nutritional science will actually save in quantity as well as quality, declare food authorities at Ottawa. Nutrition experts of the Department of National Health and Welfare urge housewives to study approved methods of food purchase and preparation, and point out that, with millions going hungry abroad, there are sound humanitarian, as well as health, reasons for such care in handling foodstuffs.

Don't Sell A-Bomb Short

One thing the Bikini bomb test proved. The atomic bomb still is the most monstrous weapon of destruction ever conceived. One of the few men in the world, if not the only one, who has seen three of the four atomic explosions — William L. Laurence of this newspaper — reported from the press ship Appalachian, off Bikini, that it still inspired in him the terror he first felt in the New Mexican desert a year ago. "It was an awesome, spine chilling spectacle," he reported, "a boiling, angry, super-volcano struggling toward the sky, belching enormous masses of iridescent flames and smoke and giant rings of a rainbow, at times giving the appearance of a monster tugging at the earth in an effort to lift it and hurl it into space." If there is any inclination to sell short the atom bomb, don't!

Newspaper Facts

The investment of $17,874,000 in newspaper advertising over a period of 60 years has resulted in a yearly volume of close to $200 million for one store on Chicago's State Street.

The major symphony orchestras of the United States and Canada broke almost every sort of record during the 1945-46 season. The first post-war conference of orchestral managers announced in Pittsburgh recently that 23 orchestras gave 1,812 concerts — 333 more than in the previous year and the largest number in their history. Some 5,000,000 persons attended, a new high in concertgoers and a year's increase of 1,500,000. Twenty-two orchestras reported a combined earned income of more than $5,000,000, but their expenditures totalled almost $7,500,000.

Washington Spotlight

By CLYDE BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, July 12 — (CP)— A proposal that the British and United States governments, and possibly other units of the western democracies, attempt to arrange with Russia for a large-scale exchange of students, is expected to be made here and in London in the near future.

This is known to be the idea of at least one highly placed diplomat whose career has made him exceptionally familiar with the Soviet government and particularly with Generalissimo Stalin.

Approval of such an advanced idea in relations with Russia might be hard to get in London or Washington, and even more difficult to get from Moscow.

But it is the considered opinion of more than one of those responsible for improving relations with the Soviet that a wholesale exchange of students is the surest way to break down the wall of misunderstanding which interferes with the progress of international affairs toward peace and security.

Every now and then — there was such an incident in recent weeks — an experienced and seasoned diplomat with no Communist background, comes to Washington and reports that the Russian leaders are anxious only for friendship and co-operation with the western democracies.

They have declared, usually off the record, that from personal intimate knowledge that they are convinced that Generalissimi Stalin is one of the greatest men of this or any age and that his greatest desire is to see Russia become a welcome, trusted and respectable member of the world family of nations.

But none of these diplomats have the answer to why Gen. Stalin permits the Soviet controlled press and radio to launch such bitter, misleading and poorly-reasoned attacks upon their war allies, nor to the puzzle of Russian insistence on playing only Soviet rules at international conferences.

Canada and the United States will train some 170 technicians from Axis-invaded countries in various forms of industrial endeavor so that they may return and help in rehabilitation of their home lands. This is being arranged by the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration and more than 30 of these students are already here or in Canada. The chief Canadian contribution is to train technicians in the production of penicillin so that they may take charge of plants being set up in their respective countries by UNRRA.

Ilsley to go to Geneva

Mr. King also announced that Finance Minister Ilsley and Hon. L. B. Pearson, Canadian ambassador to Washington, will represent Canada at the general conference of U. N. R. R. A. in Geneva August 5

Justice Minister St Laurent will serve as acting Prime Minister during Mr. King's absence and Mr. Abbott as acting Finance Minister while Mr. Ilsley is away. Revenue Minister McCann will be acting Health Minister.

The final report of the joint parliamentary committee established to choose a Canadian flag was tabled. It recommended that a red ensign with a golden Maple Leaf be adopted as Canada's flag.

Mr. Cockeram said that at its March 31, the defence services had a civil service staff of 29,824 compared with a staff of 44,144 for all government departments in 1938. At June 30, there were 1,601 officers in the navy and 6,388 enlisted men and a civil service staff of 10,187 to run the department.

At the same date the army strength was 59,000 and the civil service strength of the department 13,701. He did not give the civil service strength for the R. C. A. F.

There was one officer for every four men in the navy, one for every five in the army interim force and one for every eight in the R. C. A. F. Now, more than a year after the war was over, Canada had a military staff of 226, including 69 officers, stationed in Washington. He felt this was ridiculous.

Forces Overstaffed Claim.

Officers of the forces were not being demoted as was the case in other countries. More major-generals and brigadiers were being seen around Ottawa now than during the war. The forces undoubtedly were overstaffed and savings could be affected by correcting the situation. He urged Mr. Abbott to look into the situation.

Earlier Mr. Abbott stepped into the debate to "debunk" opposition charges of government extravagance. Said he:

"I can make an assertion as well as the next man, and I say that these charges of extravagance and reckless expenditure are unfounded. I go further and say that the fiscal record of this government during the last six years, during the war and today, will not only compare favorably with any other country in the world, but is better."

He devoted the major portion of his speech to a review of government estimates and expenditures and a comparison of proposals contained in the Progressive Conservative manifesto.

Mr. Argue said Mr. Ilsley was granting tax relief on one hand and was taking the money back on the other through his failure to control properly the government's price stabilization policy. If the cost-of-living rose four per cent in 1947, as it likely would, the effect of the proposed tax reductions would be wiped out.

Mr. Gariepy called for a general amnesty to army deserters and military law offenders so that they might be given a fresh start in life.

Mr. Four paid tribute to the work done by Mr. King and his cabinet ministers and particularly to Mr. Ilsley for having found it possible to forecast the day of a balanced budget and still be able to reduce taxes.

Mr. Ross termed the budget the "craziest fiscal document ever brought down in the history of the country." The delay in its presentation was injurious to business and showed an uncertainty of mind and a lack of determined fiscal course on the part of the government.

was no clear division between operating and administrative responsibilities.

Mr. Smith had supported the request of the Association for an independent appeal board and had differed with Ralph Maybank (L-Winnipeg South), committee chairman, who had suggested the Association might back up its request with more specific information on injustices suffered under the present arrangement.

"Where you have two people in competition and one holding complete power over the other the thing is fundamentally bad and you don't have to go any farther to prove it is fundamentally bad," he said.

Networks And Line Charges

Harry Sedgwick, CFRB, Toronto, chairman of the C.A.B. Board of Directors, said one instance in which private stations suffered was in connection with networks and line charges. The private stations were compelled to obtain permission from the CBC to link two or more stations with lines and then had to pay for the lines at rates which were set by the CBC.

Other members of the C.A.B. delegation said they would be able to obtain lines at much lower rates if they could rent them directly without going through the CBC.

If private stations had the right to establish networks they could give better service to their listeners. Rates paid to private stations by the CBC for network programs were far lower than the regular rates.

CAN'T EXPAND THE DIAPHRAGM

Actress is puzzled about belly breathing. She says she practiced for years inflating and deflating the bellows (belly), then she took a course of lessons from let's call her Jane Doe, and Jane taught her to keep chest and hypogastrium (the lowest part of belly) quiet and breathe by "contracting and expanding the diaphragm." The actress adds that "her way enables me to keep my abdomen up and in and gives me a trim figure; your way makes my abdomen protrude like a . . . ."

The diaphragm is a muscle.

We must agree about that before we can quarrel to any purpose.

The diaphragm is a muscle, not a region or part of the abdomen. It is a muscle stretched across the trunk between the thorax or chest cavity and the abdomen, the cavity containing stomach, liver, intestines etc. The diaphragm resembles a tarpaulin covering the liver, stomach etc., as a tarpaulin covers a haystack.

Not only the actress but at least nine out of ten people are puzzled, confused and under many misapprehensions about these facts of anatomy, physiology and hygiene. Amercian education keeps people innocent and gullible about all such matters.

The diaphragm is the chief breathing muscle. When it contracts it presses down upon the liver, stomach etc.,' and this causes the belly to expand, bulge or protrude. At the same time it lowers the pressure in the thorax or chest cavity, in consequence of which air enters the lungs. So contraction of the diaphragm implies inspiration, inhalation, drawing air into the lungs.

You just can't expand your diaphragm any more than you can expand your heart. The diaphragm contracts to draw air into the lungs. Then it relaxes, the pressure in the thorax rises again and air rushes out of the lungs. By an effort you can squeeze still more air out, through the action of other muscles, but certainly not by "expanding" the diaphragm.

Besides being the main breathing muscle the diaphragm is or can be an important aid to the circulation in cases of heart disease, arterial disease, high blood pressure, as I explain in the booklet. "How to Breathe," available on written request if you inclose twenty-five cents and stamped self addressed envelope.

During sleep, deep anesthesia or unconsciousness from any cause breathing is almost entirely diaphragmatic—the belly and not the chest expands or inflates with each contraction of the diaphragm.

Belly breathing is natural breathing, and when it comes to breathing you can't possibly improve on nature.

The actress and everybody else who has this peculiar notion of "keeping the abdomen in" will never get better health, a better figure or any other benefit from any such childish attempt to change nature's way.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Rh Factor

Have you any information on the Rh factor, for lay readers? I am pregnant and test showed I effect has this on my baby?

(L. G.)

Answer—If your husband has Rh-positive blood, the second or third baby may be stillborn, though usually not the first. Chapter on the Rh in booklet "Blood and Health"—for copy send ten cents and stamped self addressed envelope. Name booklet in writing. I do not read clippings.

Broken Blood Vessels in Skin

On sides of my nose are two small broken blood vessels. Is this a vitamin deficiency? Perhaps I am just vain, but I would like to be rid of these blemishes if possible. (Mrs. L. C. M.)

Answer—Best way is to have the marks obliterated by electradessication (diathemy) — by your physician or the physician to whom your physician will refer you.

Czechoslovakia

My brother, a physician recently freed from prison camp in Czechoslovakia wants me to secure a subscription to the leading American medical journal and one to a good dermatological and venerological magazine.

(Mrs. M. J.)

Answer—Journal of the American Medical Association, 535 N. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill., is $8 a year in the U.S.; Archives of Dermatology and Syphilology, same address, is also $8 a year.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

What does "Victoria Nyanza" mean?

It is a common mistake to refer to "Lake Victoria Nyanza." "Nyanza" is a native African word meaning "lake" and therefore it or "Lake" is superfluous in the name. This large body of water in Central Africa, which among fresh-water lakes is second in area only to Lake Superior, was named Victoria Nyanza or Lake Victoria after the British Queen in whose reign it was discovered by the English explorer John Hanning Speke.

What is a pot shot?

A pot shot is a shot taken at a stationary object and usually at close range. Originally the term referred to a shot taken at an animal or bird to "fill the pot," when food and not sport was the chief purpose. In sports a person who is keener on winning prizes than on the sport for its own sake is known as a "pot-hunter."

What is the silver key?

Bribery is sometimes referred to as the "silver key," silver in this connection signifying "money." In China the bribing of military men, once a common practice, used to be known as "the war of silver bullets."

What does "iota" mean?

"Iota" is the name of the ninth and smallest letter in the Greek alphabet, corresponding to English I. Hence it came to signify anything very small, being synonymous with jot, tittle or minute particle.

Why is the witch hazel so called?

Although in America the name of a certain tree or shrub is often written "witch hazel," the original and correct form is "wych" or "wich" hazel, the term being derived from Anglo-Saxon "wyce" or "wice," meaning 'bending" or "drooping." This term was applied in Old English to several trees with pliant branches besides the wych hazel, such as wych alder, wych elm, etc. "Witch" in the sense of a female scorcerer is from an entirely different source. The similarity of the prefix "wych" or "wich" in tree names to "witch" led people to suppose that the trees or divining rods made from their twigs were reputed to be efficacious in discovering underground water and minerals.

Parasites Released to Kill Spruce Budworm

Tens of Thousands Of Four-Winged Flies To War on Pest Over Very Wide Area Are Being Distributed From Dominion Laboratory at Belleville

A. B. Baird and Dr. A. Wilkes preparing a shipment of adult parasites for transportation to the field for liberation. The adult parasites when mated are placed in screened containers with a small amount of excelsior to protect the flies from injury in transit. These screened containers which hold from 150 to 250 flies in each are then packed in a metal box which is placed inside a larger box and the surrounding area packed with ice to keep the flies in good condition while in transit. These boxes are shipped to liberation areas and the flies released by opening the screened containers at carefully selected points where the hose larvae are present.

This week, the Dominion Department of Agriculture is intensifying its attack on the spruce budworm. From its Parasite Laboratory in Belleville, the Department is distributing tens of thousands of four-winged flies to prey on the budworm which now infests an estimated 280,000 square miles of Canadian forest, destroying an estimated ten million cords of timber annually.

The fly now being liberated in areas most seriously infested by the spruce budworm is scientifically known as Phytodietus fumiferanae. It attacks by stinging the budworm larva, anaethetizing it for three or four minutes during which it lays its egg on the side of the larva's neck. Deposited there, it cannot be scraped off by foliage from above nor by the larva's feet beneath. To enhance its likelihood of survival, the egg is equipped with a barbed appendage resembling a corkscrew which is thrust into the larva's neck when the egg is laid. Within three or four days after being laid, the egg splits at the end opposite the barb and the Phytodietus larva loops up and over it and begins feeding on the budworm larva.

Defenseless, the budworm larva has its internal organs gradually drawn out and consumed by the parasitic Phytodietus. Within 10 to 15 days, there remains of the budworm only a shell.

Then, having provided food for the parasite which destroyed it, the budworm must now offer housing as well, for the parasite moves into the web manufactured by the budworm before its death, spins a cocoon there and winters over to the following spring.

A. B. Baird Tells of Ravages of Budworm

A. B. Baird, Officer-in-Charge of the Belleville Laboratory, has no compunction about losing so dread a parasite on the spruce budworm. "The spruce budworm threatens to destroy the valuable white spruce in an arc running from eastern Manitoba to northwestern New Brunswick and slicing into New York and Vermont," he says.

"An area of Canadian forest as large as Japan is now under attack by the budworm which has already destroyed completely all the balsam and 50 to 60 per cent of the white spruce in 25,000 square miles. An additional 45,000 square miles are in immediate danger and more than 180,000 are lightly infested. This threat to the supply of one of Canada's most valuable trees is almost immeasurable, involving the probable destruction of millions of cords of potential pulpwood, building material, fuel and wood products such as rayons and plastics."

The menace of the spruce budworm became uppermost in Mr. Baird's activities nearly 30 years ago. At that time, the insect had destroyed thousands of valuable acres of spruce in Ontario and Quebec and had ravaged sections of New Brunswick. By consuming spruce needles, the budworm had defoliated the trees, limiting their growth and, by successive annual attacks, killing them. In whole areas, rich stands of timber were reduced to bare poles of rotting wood awaiting only a spark to serve as tinder for a forest fire.

Yet even as a junior entomologist, Baird had observed that attacks of the spruce budworm were not equally destructive in all parts of Canada. In British Columbia, the budworm was prevalent but in insufficient numbers to cause much damage. The entomologist, J. B. Tothill, with whom he was associated, often told Baird that he believed the budworm to be controlled naturally in British Columbia by the birds and parasites of that province.

Mr. Baird's Discovery Of Parasite.

Whatever the effective parasite was, it was unknown in Eastern Canada. Several parasites which prey on the budworm are native to the East, but none of these gave sufficient control. Seeking the mystery parasite of British Columbia, Baird eventually found it feeding on budworm larvae he collected on Mt. McLean, near Lillooet, B.C. That was in 1919. Unrecorded previously, Baird's find was named Phytodietus fumiferanae. In the years following the discovery of Phytodietus, budworm outbreaks in British Columbia subsided and little attention was paid to collecting the parasite.

Not until 1944 was Phytodietus again systematically collected when Dominion Department of Agriculture entomologists found it in the Fraser Valley near the site of its original discovery by Baird. They rushed samples immediately to the Dominion Parasite Laboratory at Belleville, established in 1929 to propgate parasites of agricultural and forest insects. There A. B. Baird and his assistant in spruce budworm control, Dr. Alfred Wilkes, began a biological study of the new addition to their laboratory to determine the best stage and time to liberate the parasite in budworm infested areas after building up a stockpile of this nature's aid in Belleville instead of relying on uncertain supplies being found in British Columbia.

Belleville Laboratory

The Belleville laboratory is ideally designed for such an investigation. Its insect-proof doors and walls of solid concrete and glass blocks prevent the escape of the destructive hosts of the parasites. Its air-conditioned rooms are equipped with adjustable heating and cooling systems to accelerate or retard the development of insect specimens. There, under the direction of insect geneticists and parasitologists, as many as 70 college students are engaged during the peak season of activity in sexing the parasites, propagating them, tending to their incubators and, finally, packing the parasites in sealed containers for shipment to the areas where they are most urgently needed. By these activities, the laboratory has reared and liberated hundreds of millions of parasites of such destructive insects as the European spruce sawfly, pine shoot moth, codling moth, European corn borer, European pea moth and greenhouse mealy bugs. 'Collections of spruce sawfly larvae and cocoons in recent years have shown that several species of introduced parasites are helping to keep the sawfly at a low level of population at many points in New Brunswick. The control agencies operating against the sawfly are constantly changing, and while disease may be the most important factor at the present time, the larval parasites are exerting considerable control and it seems probable that their effectiveness will continue to increase," the Department of Agriculture said in a recent bi-monthly progress report on forest insect investigations.

Parasite is New Weapon

By rearing and liberating Phytodietus, the Dominion Department of Agriculture is using a new weapon against the spruce budworm in Eastern Canada. Native to eastern forests are other budworm parasites, among them Apanteles and Glypta, which attack the budworm in its earlier stages of growth. Budworms surviving these attacks may mature to full grown destructiveness. Those which escape the control of parasites native to Eastern Canada will now be under fire from Phytodietus.

By consuming the needles of these trees, the spruce budworm has reduced their growth. A few more such attacks and the trees will die, serving only as tinder for forest fires.

As A. B. Baird explains, "If out of 100 budworm eggs, 50 are killed by parasites of young larvae, the remaining 50 will theoretically reach the pupal stage. What we are aiming at in liberating Phytodietus is to reduce the later larvae before they mature. Up to 80 per cent of budworms have been killed in their larval stages by Phytodietus in British Columbia. By bringing this parasite east, rearing it and liberating it from Belleville we bring a new force to bear on the budworm without competing with Eastern budworm parasites."

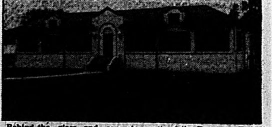
Accounting for the effectiveness of Phytodietus is its success in seeking out budworm larvae. This may be attributed to its limited feeding habits, as the parasite apparently feeds on the budworm and on no other insect. In laboratory tests, Phytodietus has attacked another destructive insect, the ugly nest cherry tortricid, but under natural conditions it may feed exclusively on budworms.

At present, some 40 young students are engaged under the direction of H. Coppel in collecting Phytodietus in the Fraser Valley. These they rear to the pupal stage in a cottage at Lillooet rushing the pupae by air express to the laboratory at Belleville. There, after being placed in special cages, the parasites emerge, are fed and encouraged to reproduce. This week, a vast quantity of the parasites is being rushed by air and rail express to areas most seriously infested by budworm. Shipments will go to the Spruce Woods Reserve in Manitoba, Black Sturgeon Lake near Port Arthur, Ontario, Forbes Depot and Maniwaki in Quebec, Green River near Edmunston, New Brunswick, and to points in the vicinity of Saranac Lake and Lake Placid in the Adirondacks.

Parasites Winter Well.

Hope for encouraging results is in the recovery of the relatively few specimens of Phytodietus liberated last summer. These, recovered this year by entomologists in areas where they were liberated in 1945, presumably had no difficulty in wintering over after finding sufficient food in the budworms they destroyed.

Mr. Baird explains that even the efficient Phytodictus cannot be expected to kill off all the budworms. He hopes, however, that by building up a population of this British Columbia parasite in Eastern Canadian forests to hold the budworm in check, preventing further sudden outbreaks of this destructive pest.



Behind the glass and concrete walls of the Dominion Parasite Laboratory, Belleville, entomologists breed millions of parasites. These they release to prey on such destructive insects as the European corn borer, greenhouse mealybug and European spruce sawfly. This week, they are liberating parasites of the spruce budworm which currently destroys an estimated ten million cords of white spruce and balsam annually.

Woman Strangled In Apartment

Boston, July 13 (AP — A short, stocky killer strangled Mrs. Helen Cronin, 31, in her Roxbury Apartment early today when she rushed to the assistance of her 12-year-old daughter, Eleanor, who was being attacked by a man who had gained entrance through a first floor window.

Police said the woman was strangled with one jerk of a belt the slayer found on a chair in the child's room. The heroic mother furiously fought off the attack on her daughter before her life was snuffed out. The girl suffered bruises on the face and neck.

Two other children—two and nine years old—who were in the same room with Eleanor were unmolested.

The older girl told police that she saw the man come through the window and attempted to flee to the kitchen before he seized her. Her screams and the outcries of the nine-year-old daughter attracted the mother.

Police said Eleanor reported that the man was a Negro, about five feet, six inches tall, wearing colored glasses, dark clothes and a sports shirt.

OPA is Revived, Stripped of Many Price Controls

By JACK BELL

Washington, July 13 (AP) — The Senate today passed by a vote of 62 to 15 a bill reviving the office of Price Administration, but the bill has been denuded of almost as many major price controls as it promised to restore.

Final passage came on the 13th. day of O.P.A.'s lapse into a legal coma.

Apparently amended far beyond the bounds which would permit its acceptance by President Truman, the one-year extension measure was sent to the House of Representatives where it seemed likely to receive a quick push toward a Senate-House conference committee. There, administration leaders hope to rewrite it from top to roots.

Rep. J. P. Wolcott of Michigan, top Republican of the Banking Committee, said an effort might be made to substitute for it the original extension bill President Truman vetoed June 29.

The new measure would revive O.P.A. and restore price controls ceilings as of June 30. It would reinstate rent controls, with the proviso that states take over in this field where they have adequate laws.

Price controls, however, would not be replaced on meat, poultry, eggs, butter, cheese, milk or other dairy products, cotton seed, soyabeans, grain, livestock or poultry feed, petroleum nor on any form of tobacco.

Reinstated were some of the provisions to which President Truman objected when he vetoed O.P.A. Extended Bill No. 1, June 29.

In one major respect, however, it was more satisfactory to administration leaders than Bill No. 1. The Senate put in a provision requiring that producers, manufacturers and processors' ceilings be placed high enough to take care of the average increase in costs in their industry since 1940.

Fourth German Pow to Trial

Medicine Hat, Alta., July 13—(CP)—Sgt.-Maj. Willi Mueller, fourth German prisoner-of-war to go on trial for the hanging murder of a fellow prisoner, Cpl. Karl Lehmann, in the Medicine Hat internment camp, Sept. 10, 1944, opened in Alberta Supreme Court today.

Three other prisoners also charged with the murder have been convicted and sentenced to be hanged at Lethbridge jail October 16.

Yesterday Sgt.-Maj. Henrich Busch, 29-year-old former luftwaffe pilot, was convicted by a six-man Alberta Supreme Court jury who deliberated two and three-quarter hours before returning the guilty verdict. Sgt.-Maj. Bruno Perzenowski and Sgt. Walter Wolf were previously convicted.

Busch replied with a firm 'no", when asked if he had anything to say before sentence was passed.

Testimony given during the four-day trial of Busch had described Lehmann as a "communistic traitor" and chief of an anti-nazi underground movement at the camp. In a statement submitted by the crown, Busch said he had taken an active part in the hanging and had not only assisted in beating Lehmann but had helped place the rope around his neck.

Senator McGeer Says Ottawa Lacks Authority

By R. K. CARNEGIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, July 13 CP)—Senator Gerald G. McGeer (L-British Columbia) in a memorandum to Premier John Hart of British Columbia released today claimed the Dominion government lacked the constitutional authority to carry out the agreements with the provinces proposed by Finance Minister Ilsley in his budget speech.

The Finance Minister has proposed substantial grants from the Dominion to the Provinces in return for the Provinces vacating such direct taxation fields as income and corporation taxes and succession duties. It left the provinces free to accept or reject the proposals.

The Senator, a lawyer, contended that the Dominion has not the right under the British North America Act to levy taxes within the Province and give it back to the Provinces for provincial purposes. The Dominion can tax only for Dominion purposes.

The jurisdiction of the Dominion cannot be extended by the Provincial legislatures "by agreement or otherwise," he said. Emergency powers had been exercised in wartime in regard to direct taxation but emergency powers used in wartime did not become constitutional rights in times of peace.

"And yet that is exactly what the proposed agreements contemplate doing. They propose that the national parliament will raise money within the Provinces by both direct and indirect taxation. The moneys, in part, so raised are then to be handed over to the provincial legislatures for the carrying out of 'provincial purposes' within each Province."

Senator McGeer claimed the attitude of representatives of the national parliament has raised "for the first time in Canadian history Provincial rights as a major Canadian political issue."

"If the Dominion is right in its present conception of its powers then Provincial rights have ceased to be a factor because they will have ceased to exist."

V. O. N. News

When the new mother arrives home from the hospital after the birth of her baby and considers that "first bath", when baby seems alarmingly fragile and the task assumes gigantic proportions there is a special V.O.N. service at her command. This is called a "Demonstration Bath" but also includes the preparation of the day's feedings by the nurse, and advice on baby's health matters. Nowadays many mothers make arrangements with V.O.N. headquarters before they leave the hospital so that the nurse will be there the first thing in the morning on baby's first day home. The calls are made usually at nine in the morning but the actual hour depends on the baby's schedule.

Observing such a demonstration bath, the visitor is introduced to the system that the nurse uses and begins for the mother. The mother has all the articles necessary for the bath conveniently arranged and as the nurse proceeds with the bathing of the baby she instructs the mother at each step, pointing out the reason for doing things a certain way for the greater comfort of the infant. As the baby is sometimes only one week old when the mother is initiated into the routine of its care, it is a very tiny object, but even so, when it gets bored with the whole proceedings the volume of its protests is amazing. In readiness for the nurse the mother has the articles for the preparation of its formula assembled and sterilized and the nurse makes up the feedings for the whole day.

The nurse will come for this service as long as the mother feels it necessary, and until she is well launched on the exacting career of caring for baby on her own.

Women's Activities

ROSLIN W.I.

Roslin — The July meeting of the Woman's Institute was held on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. H. Sayers with 22 members and visitors present.

The President, Mrs. H. Chisholm presided.

Mrs. H. Sills offered her lawn for a social evening to be held early in August.

The following conveners of standing committees reported, Mrs. D. Leslie on Agriculture and Canadian Industries, speaking on the latter subject first she spoke of group working and partnership and in speaking on agriculture she spoke of the warble fly and its control and expressed the wish that the institute would co-operate in a campaign next spring to eradicate this pest.

Mrs. W. White reported on Historical Research and displayed an old Atlas of the year 1878 and spoke of the four townships in which the village of Roslin is situated and gave a brief history of each.

Mrs. Wm. Bates convener of Social Welfare told of the quilts and clothing which had been sent in the bale packed for the European Relief recently.

Mrs. H. Chisholm gave a few health rules.

Mrs. Wm. White leader for the day gave an interesting paper on the motto: "Don't work your body till your brain won't work."

The topic for the day "Good Food, Good Health and Good Looks" which had been prepared by Mrs. Beazer was read by Miss H. Wilson. Mrs. White's niece Miss Hume gave a very interesting talk on her work as a kindergarten teacher in an urban school, and explained the program which is carried out through the year.

A contest was held after which refreshments were served by the hostess and her assistants.

IVANHOE W.I.

The July meeting of the W.I. was held at the home of Mrs. R. Reid, with attendance of twenty-eight ladies.

The president Mrs. W. French took charge. It was moved that five dollars be donated to the vacation school, which was held in the Ivanhoe town hall the first week in July. Mrs. M. Shaw gave a paper on the motto "The farther you go, the more you will know that home after all is the best regardless of its structure or where, it is the cookie box in the pantry the. relaxation and companionship that makes the home the best."

A play was presented by Miss S. Reid and Miss D. Vandome "Society Women of Ivanhoe," which was given in a splendid manner and all enjoyed a piano selection which was presented by Mrs. Chas. Keeble.

Mrs. C. Wright took charge of a demonstration on Girls' Club Work. Miss Joan McCurdy gave a talk on how to look one's best. A theme song was sung by Miss Jean Haggerty, Miss Joan McCurdy, Miss Marjorie Wright, and Miss Joyce Wallace. Miss Margaret Wright read "Current Events" by Jane Gay.

Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting. An invitation was extended by the publicity convener, Mrs. C. MacMillan to all the ladies of the community to attend meetings the second Tuesday of each month.

AWARDED DEGREE

Clad in robe and cap, Princess Elizabeth is pictured after receiving her first honorary degree —a Bachelor of Music award from the University of Londoon. The 20-year-old heiress apparent to the British throne was presented the degree by her great-uncle, the Earl of Athlone, who is chancellor of the university.

ZION W.M.S.

The Zion W.M.S. met at the home of Mrs. Morden Brough for their July meeting. The President, Mrs. Clifford Ray opened the meeting. Mrs. K. Denyes had charge of the devotional period, assisted by Mrs. Clifford Ketcheson. Mrs. Harold Beatty group leader, had charge of the program. Mrs. Ralph Sills gave a reading "Colors". Mrs. Nellie Sloan gave a reading from the Missionary Monthly "Supply Work". Bunnett, Mrs. Percy Ray, Mrs. Cecil Ketcheson, Mrs. Elmer Tufts, Mrs. Kenneth Denyes, Mrs. Clifford Ketcheson. Mrs. John Moore of Belleville favored with a solo, "There's a Voice in the Wilderness."

The hostess served dainty refreshments.

Shower Held For Miss Bessie Walker

3rd Thurlow — Miss Joy Osland was hostess at a tea towel shower held at her home Thursday aftrenoon, in honor of Miss Bessie Walker, bride elect of this month. During the afternoon, a contest and games were enjoyed. Upon entering the living room, Bessie was asked to take the chair of honor, which was prettily decorated in pink and white. Miss Marilyn Eggleton rendered a solo. Little Miss Wilma McPherson wheeled in a carriage laden with the gifts. Bessie then thanked her friends for their kindness and for the pleasant afternoon which came as a complete surprise. Delicious refreshments were then served by the hostess.

ASK PRICE REVISION

Chatham, July 13 (CP) — Eugene King, of Dover, chairman of the Kent Federation of Agriculture, will lead representatives of district organizations at a meeting in Ottawa next week with Prices Board officials to discuss revision of price ceilings on Ontario farm products, federation officials yesterday said. The organization claims that at present prices the fall wheat crop will be sold at a loss.

NEAR PERTH.

Perth, July 13 (CP) — Struck by lightning in the pasture, 11 cows were killed at nearby Smith's Falls when a severe electrical storm swept over this district late Thursday night.

Lin Taiyi Works On Third Novel

New York, July 13 (CP)—Lin Taiya, 20-year-old daughter of the Chinese author Lin Yutang, twirled her jabe bracelet around her wrist and talked of the two books she has written, the one she now is writing, the process of growing up, her secret of success, the problems of the young generation in China and many other things.

"The process of growing up has been very disillusioning," she said. "When you are little you are taught that pink is pink and blue is blue, and a villain is a villain. But when you grow up you find there's good in the villains—and I suppose "villain" in some of the good people."

Taiya—the middle one of Lin Yutang's three daughters — has covered more territory than most people do in a lifetime. She was born in Peking, travelled in Europe, lived in New York during the war year, taught Chinese at Yale University, joined the Chinese army as a lieutenant in the spring of 1945, served as secretary to its surgeon general, Robert Lim, and returned to New York where her parents now live, last May. She loves dancing and the movies. To her two novels —"The Golden Coin" and "War Tide"—she expects to add a third this fall.

"Mother wants me to go to college," she said, "but I just want to write and write. The secret of success is just plain hard work —isn't it? I want my new book to express what problems the new generation in China has to face. You see, the old generation is dying down and the new generation is left without any pattern to follow. And there are so many new forces at work!

"In the old days you never heard a rickshaw coolie complaining about his place in life. But when I was in China last I saw whole processions of coolies making demonstrations and clamoring for better living conditions. It gives me a shock."

Fall Chapeaux For Teen-Agers

New York, July 13 (CP) — Strongminded teen-agers who refuse to wear hats may be swayed from their course by some of the casual, youthful styles that will be on the market in the late summer and fall.

Open-crowned rollers, sleek little berets, light-weight and lighthearted, are the milliners' answer to the girls who like to let their hair show. Most of the new styles slated for fall in the junior class are simple, uncluttered felts that fit the back of the head and leave the forehead bare. Many hug the ears, few need any elastic bands or clips to stay on even in a high wind and crowns range from childish rounded head-huggers to high pointed or squared lines—or no crown at all.

Colors favor the neutral range of beige and gray first, and then go into rich fall tones such as deep red, bronze, pine-tree green and cedar.

The cloche is still tops for the young, with modified forms of the postillion, the bonnet, the breton and the bert definitely in the running.

Marks 25th Year As Aussie J.P.

Sydney, Australia, July 13 (CP) —When the Women's Justices' Association of New South Wales met in Sydney, oldest member present was 77-year-old Margaret Colbourn of Glebe, a Sydney suburb.

Mrs. Colbourn, a member of the Sydney Trades and Labor Council for 30 years, became a justice of the peace 25 years ago. Earlier she had been a member of Glebe branch of the Australian Labor party and also treasurer of another branch.

Until 1935 she was caretaker of the Glebe school, a job she took on when illness disabled her husband. She raised five sons, each of them for a trade. Two became boilermakers, one a fitter, and the other two, welders.

Mrs. Colbourn is a foundation member of Glebe's Parents and Citizens Association and has been active in the community since she settled in the suburb as a bride 52 years ago.

"Water Cure" For Beauty Ills

June Williams, popular night club dancer, believes in drinking lots of water

By HELEN FOLLETT

Your pulchritude preacher regrets that she must sermonize now and then on dull subjects like health and hygiene. But they must be considered if the campaign for beauty is to bring results.

She realizes well enough that the members of the congregation would prefer to read about demountable eyelashes, rosebud ringlets, dizzifying nail polish and the seductive blush that comes out of the rouge compact.

So here goes. Do you or do you not lap up plenty of water each day? You should have four glasses at least, more than that if you do not drink tea of coffee. Many a dry skin is just thirsty.

A large part of the human body is composed of water. Just as a bath is refreshing to the body, so is water taken internally refreshing to the inner organs. It keeps active and normal the avenues of elimination— the skin, the kidneys and the intestinal tract.

As the water assists the blood in its work of picking up and distributing nourishment to the cells, the girl who yearns for the Mae West shape had better become a water baby.

The tissues of the face, alike those all over the body, are composed largely of fluids. The free intake of water helps to keep them firm. Without water one will look dried up, premature wrinkles may appear.

Girls who are beset with black-heads, pimples, sallow complexion or enlarged pores should take up the water cure.

You can cut down the water allowance if you wish by taking lemonade, orange or tomato juice that provide certain vitamins that are necessary to well-being.

The Experts Say

By HELEN BANNERMAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 13 (CP) — Summer days mean ice cream for dessert and it doesn't matter whether it actually contains cream as long as it is frozen.

Chocolate Freeze is recommended by the home economists of the Agriculture Department Consumer Section and is a delicious frozen dessert made with milk but having the smooth texture that is usually obtained only with the richest cream.

Chocolate Freeze requires 1½ squares of unsweetened chocolate; 2½ cups of scalded milk; ¼ cup of sugar; a few grains of salt; two tablespoons of flour; two egg yolks slightly beaten; 1½ teaspoons of vanilla; two egg whites; ¼ cup of sugar; ¼ teaspoon of almond flavoring.

Melt the chocolate in top of double boiler. To scalded milk add sugar and salt. Add gradually to chocolate, stirring well. Blend flour with a little cold water and add to the chocolate mixture. Cook for ten minutes. Add slightly beaten egg yolks and continue cooking for two minutes longer. Remove from the heat and cool. Add vanilla. Pour into freezing tray and partially freeze, about 45 minutes with a control set at the lowest point. Beat egg whites until stiff, but not dry. Gradually beat in the remaining ¼ cup of sugar and the almond flavoring. Remove chocolate mixture to chilled bowl and blend with meringue using a dover beater.

Return to freezing tray and continue to freeze, stirring occasionally until firm, about 1½ hours. This makes six to eight servings.

This year, again home canning will take an important place in the home-maker's plans for conserving perishable food. Here are some "do's" emphasized by the Consumer Section:

Do test sealers before using. Make sure that there are no chips in the rims.

Do have the sealers clean. Wash in hot soapy water and rinse thoroughly.

Do grade or sort the fruit or vegetable for uniformity of size and maturity. Discard all bruised and spotted fruit.

Do use the thinnest syrup that will be palatable. This stretches the sugar ration: one cup of sugar to two cups of water is sufficient for most fruits and a thinner syrup, one cup of sugar to three cups of water, is sweet enough for pears.

Do leave a space of ¼ inch at the top of the sealer when filling with fruit or vegetables except peas and corn which require ½ inch head space.

Chit-Chat: A little lemon juice or vinegar adds a pleasantly tart note to boiled carrots, beets or turnips .. don't throw away leftover cooked fish. It may be flaked and used in salads, fish cakes, or croquettes .. when you store cream or cottage cheese in the refrigerator be sure it's well wrapped or covered for it takes on other odors easily.

Role of "St. Joan" Aim of Sydney Girl

London, July 13 (CP) — A young Sydney girl may play the coveted role of Bernard Shaw's "St. Joan" in the film to be made by British producer Gabriel Pascal. She is Wendy Brunton Gibb, graduate in Arts from Sydney University, and well-known in radio and stage productions as a versatile and talented actress.

Recently she won a Savage Club scholarship entitling her to study abroad, and this success prompted her to write to Mr. Pascal asking for a chance to play St. Joan. His cabled reply asked her for recordings and photographs. Which she sent immediately.

Wendy, 20, slim and attractive, has her heart set on a stage career, and says that if she is given the role of St. Joan she will realize her life's ambition.

Uses Tax Money To Buy Baby Boy

Johannesburg, July 13 (CP)— Rev. Michael Scott, who is refusing to pay taxes here as a protest against what he calls race prejudice in South Africa, has made another gesture. Recently he sent £5 ($22.50) to the Indian passive resistance movement and at the same time wrote to J. H. Hofmeyr, minister of finance, saying that the £5 would normally have gone to pay taxes. Mr. Hofmeyr advised him "in the friendliness" to do his duty as a citizen and pay his taxes.

Now Michael Scott has carried his private war with the treasury a step further by "buying" a native baby which had been adopted by a native woman who already had too many children of her own but could not bear to let the little mite go without a mother's care and attention.

He intends to present "John Q." —the baby—to Johannesburg city council in honor of the city's diamond jubilee celebrations, thus making the city responsible for its upkeep. The arrangement with the foster parent is that Mr. Scott will pay her £2.10.0 and that other £2.10.0 will go to the city council to help defray the child's upkeep in a suitable home.

There has been another 'John' in Mr. Scott's experience and the present "John Q" is named after him. The original was a European child of five days who was thrown in a dustbin some years ago. The child was found covered with ash and potato peelings. It had been in the dustbin one night. By a miracle the child survived.

Answers to Readers' Questions on Weddings

J.M.: The fact that you are to have only one attendant (maid of honor) has nothing to do with the number of ushers you should plan to have. It is the size of your wedding that determines the number of ushers asked to serve....in a medium-sized wedding, one usher for every 25 to 40 guests is quite usual, but there should be at least two ushers for every hundred guests invited.

N. S. S.: When only on invitation is to be sent to family, it is proper, in order to avoid using the tabu phrase "and family," to write the individual names on the inner envelope of the wedding invitation like this:

Mr. and Mrs. John Smith
Miss Mary Smith
Mr. Alan Smith

If there are two or more unmarried daughters, "The Misses Smith" may be used; and if two or moreunmarried sons, "The Messrs. Smith" may be used;

Emily M.: After the ceremony at your informal house wedding, this is the procedure: bridegroom kisses bride; ministers congratulates bridegroom, and gives his "best wishes" to bride; then couple turn in their places to receive greetings from both sets of parents. Then a receiving-line is formed, with the bride's mother first in the line, to greet the guests (the brides father may stand in the receiving-line next to his wife, if he wishes, or he may mingle with the guests); bride's mother introduces bridegroom's parents, who are next in line; next are the bridegroom and bride, the bride on the right of the bridegroom; on the bride's right, her maid of honor, and then the bridesmaids, if any.

Charles: No, it is not correct for you, the bridegroom, or for the men in your wedding party, to wear tuxedoes at your afternoon wedding. Tuxedos are for evening wear, not to be worn before 6 p. m.

C. N. S.: Don't let the fact that you have no piano keep you from having some kind of music at your house wedding. You can buy an excellent record of The Wedding March. I suggest you do this and have this record played as you come down the stairs and until you take your place at the improvised altar. (At a house wedding there is usually no recessional.)

J. S.: (1) Yes, it is proper for your 13-year-old cousin to be junior bridesmaid. (2) A girl of that in-between age (from a tall ten to sixteen) may be a junior bridesmaid. (3)She wears a gown similar in style to the bridesmaids' gowns and of the same color as the bridesmaids' gowns or of the gown of the maid of honor. (4) A junior bridesmaid may walk alone (a) after the pairs of ushers and before the pairs of bridesmaids, or alone (b) after the pairs of bridemaids. If you are having two ushers, I advise (a); if three ushers, one would walk alone, and therefore (b) would make the more balanced wedding processional.(.) If you are having the bridesmaids and ushers "paired off" in the recessional, it would be best to provide an usher for the junior bridesmaid.

Mildred: (1) For a really formal evening wedding, the bridegroom, best man, ushers and bride's father wear full evening dress (tail coat, white tie, and appropriate accessories). For a semi-formal evening wedding the men in the wedding party may wear either full evening dress or tuxedos (in summer, white dinner jackets may be worn). (2) The eight ushers should sit at the bride's table with the other wedding attendants;; it is not necessary to invite the wives of the ushers to sit at this table unless they are also wedding attendants.

Toronto Girls Off On Wedding Outing

Toronto, July 15 (CP) — Gone forever are the days when Susie married and set up housekeeping next door to mother. Instead she's prepared to tear off to the four corners of the earth to build her happy home. Such is the case with Ann Blanchard and Edith Keightley, two Toronto girls who now are respectively heading for India, and the Arctic to be married.

Securely tucked away in Ann's luggage is a wedding-cake to be brought forth just as soon as she reaches Calcutta. The non-stop 28-day trip from San Francisco will take her directly to Bombay and from there it's a matter of hours before she and her Royal Air Force pilot, Norman Riddiough, will exchange "I do's." Food officers in the campaign for two years. They became engaged just as he left Canada after a year's training here as a pilot.

Meanwhile Edith has included parkas, felt boots and heavy clothing in her trousseau, not to mention five pairs of nylon stockings and plenty of lisle hose. To combat the average winter of 40 degrees below zero she packed two trunks filled with overshoes, slacks and plenty of heavy clothing.

When Edith completes her 30-day voyage aboard the supply ship Nascopie to Port Harrison on the northeast coast of Hudson Bay she will marry Samuel Doods, a meteorologist. At present her main ambitions are to learn to "mush" a dog team and send a trainload of husky puppies back to friends.

Britain Seeks Male Teachers

London, July 13 (CP) — Britain has too many women school teachers so the minister of education—a woman—has asked local education authorities to employ more male teachers.

A letter sent out by Miss Ellen Wilkinson said a percentage of 28.7 males is not enough and she would like to see it reach at least 35 per cent, which would increase the 40,223 men now teaching in primary and secondary schools to 63,000. Male and female teachers now total 180,000, and it is estimated there are openings for an additional 11,000.

Besides more equally balancing the profession, Miss Wilkinson said the move would be a step towards enabling the rehabilitation of ex-soldiers once they have completed the necessary training.

This photograph shows these six children, accompanied by one adult, sitting on the roof of a car enjoying a movie at the new drive-in theatre located near Hamilton, Ont., first of its kind in Canada. Admitted free of charge, the children are, LEFT to RIGHT, Jimmy and Marnie Evel, Carole Gorrie, Pat Evel, Elizabeth Eaton and Marilyn Gorrie, all of Hamilton.

Hamilton, Ont. — (Special) — Something new and unique in the field of entertainment for Canadians is no wavailable in the form of a drive-in theatre — a movie "house" to which motorists can drive and park their cars in front of an open air screen — located within 10 miles of this city, near the junction of highway 8 and 10.

"New" because it is the first of its kind in Canada and "unique" in the fact that it charges admission only to adults and permits children to be admitted free, it is the first of a chain of theatres established in Canada by other than theatre people. This type of movie house will appeal particularly to the average Canadian family because parents, instead of getting a "sitter" to look after their children at home, can take them along to the movies with them.

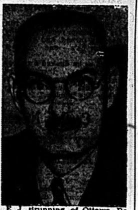
There is room for approximately 800 cars in the area and, for the present, sound is heard by the audience through a speaker at the foot of a screen. As soon as equipment becomes available, each car will be equipped with an individual speaker. The screen, 65 feet high and 40 feet wide, is one of the largest movie screens in the country. And here too you can watch the movies and order hot dogs and soft drinks from a canteen featuring "running board" service.

Manager Thomas Lancaster, Montreal, war veteran of the Dieppe raid, and recently discharged from the Canadian army, anticipates that, as soon as the thing is well under way, film programs will be presented all year round except the months from November until March, when snow and cold weather make viewing a movie from an automobile impractical.

KITTEN ADOPTED

Jessie, a pet monkey in Camden Town, London, took a liking to this kitten. When the mother cat raised no objection, Jessie adopted the kitten.

NO COAL RATIONING

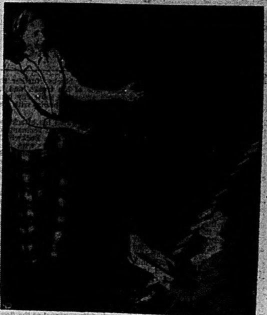


E. J. Brunning, of Ottawa, Dominion coal controller, who has announced that there will be nothing as drastic as coal rationing in Canada this winter in spite of the not-too-bright coal supply. For the first time in history all Alberta coal mines are operating at almost full capacity in what is normally a slack season. Briquet output from Alberta's Canmore and Brazeau fields is being diverted to eastern Canada to compensate for the coal shortage resulting from the recent U. S. coal strike, he stated.

HIS PAL SAVED FROM POUND

Donald [illegible], 12, didn't have enough money to pay for shipping his dog, King, to his new home in South Dakota. He was intercepted as he trudged reluctantly to the dog pound, where he would have to say good-bye forever to the dog he had raised from a puppy. A friend told the Examiner he would see to it that Donald and his dog would not be separated.

"ACT OF GOD" CHILD PREPARES FOR STAGE



Helen Hayes, a leading stage actress, is shown rehearsing her daughter, Mary MacArthur, 17, for her professional debut behind the footlights. Mary will play a supporting role to her mother. At the time of her birth, Mary became famous as the "Act of God" baby when Miss Hayes used that term to void a contract she was unable to fill because of her pregnancy. Miss Hayes' husband, and Mary's father, is Charles MacArthur, author and playwright.

Canadian Tourist Industry Experiencing Greatest Upsurge

(By The Canadian Press)

Canada's tourist industry—released from war-time restrictions—is experiencing its greatest upsurge this year, with United States visitors swarming across the border in record numbers, despite cautious government predictions of overcrowded accommodations and lack of space. A Canadian Press survey revealed today.

n Ontario, volume of motor tourists was said to be as high as 117.2 per cent over the corresponding period for 1945. There were indications too, that some resorts were not filled to capacity because of unwillingness of prospective visitors to risk possible disappointment. These were regarded as isolated cases and the overall picture was one of satisfied tourists and satisfied caterers.

External considerations—such as the recently announced Canada-United States dollar parity—failed to affect the attitude of the average United States visitor to Canada. He came for rest, relaxation and a change of scenery. He came to see Canada and enjoy its traditional hospitality.

Northwestern Ontario resorts reported no scarcity of reservations except in higher-priced hotels. Minaki Lodge, pipular Canadian National Railways resort in the Kenora district, was booked for the season. There were considerable sponsored travel-groups.

Thousands of tourists pouring into northern Ontario through the traditional "gateway to the north" at North Bay represented a 30 per cent increase over last year, and they met with little difficulty in the way of accommodation.

His Best Year

At Fernleigh Lodge, Long Lake, in the Quinte district of Ontario, operator George Salmon remarked, "this is my best year in the tourist business for 25 years."

At Cornwall, one roadside tourist camp proprietoress said, "we turn off the lights so they can't read our sign, but the tourists find us somehow and ask for rooms at all hours."

Resorts in the Kawartha Lakes and Trent Valley summer resort area of Ontario were filled to capacity, and sales to tourists were at an all-time high. Farmers, cottage and hotel operators and business firms were reaping a harvest from the tourist trade.

In Ottawa, tourist officials reported for some reason they were not getting the tourists, though there was accommodation of every description—cabins, tourist homes and hotels.

The situation in Montreal was best summed up by a hotel official who covered the whole field of tourist traffice with the remark, "it's heavy and that's no lie."

In historic Quebec City, tourists sleeping in cars on the narrow streets were playing havoc with traffic.

The influx of tourists into Nova Scotia and New Brunswick was setting an all-time record, but tourist facilities were adequate.

Prince Edward Island — The garden of the gulf—had its beaches and fishing spots crowded with visitors.

Chinese Study Postal Methods

Ottawa (CP)—Representing the first Chinese postal delegation to visit Canada, four officials, Hsu Chuan-Hsien, Li Hsiung, Wang Shu-Peng and Chang Feng-Ming, from the Director General of Posts of China, have been studying Canadian post office methods in Ottawa.

The Chinese officials left China in July, 1945, and spent six months in Washington and one month in New York studying U. S. postal improvements before coming to Ottawa. The delegation now are back in the United States where they will inspect postal facilities in Chicago, and San Francisco before their return to China in September.

The delegation are studying the American and Canadian postal systems from the inner sanctum of the central organization to the outermost fringes. Each official looks after a particular division; Mr. Hsu is responsible for transportation, Mr. Weng for inspection and investigation, Mr. Chang for equipment and supplies and Mr. Li for personnel.

Fundamentally, the postal system of China is very similar to Canada's. They make use of air mail, postal notes, money orders and postal savings banks in the same way. Even their mechanical equipment is much the same, but their great difficulty is the lack of sufficient equipment to cope with the huge amount of mail. Despite inflation in China postal rates have been little affected and now are on a par with Canada.

Mr. Chang, who specialises in equipment and supplies, praised the Canadian postal system for its economic and efficient methods.

"Canada, which manufactures more paper than any country in the world, has the most effective way of conserving paper in the post office that we've seen," said Mr. Chang.

The Chinese officials expressed gratitude and appreciation for the co-operation extended them by Canadian postal authorities. Every opportunity was given them to make a careful study of the Canadian system.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself in his private chair, and ma said, William, would you mind helping me ballence my checkbook?

Not at all, my dear, no more than I'd mind ballencing on a titerope and juggeling 6 oranges and 2 bottles of ketchup with the corks out, pop said. Hand it over, he said, and ma said, Now just keep calm, William, all I want is a simple suggestion or 2 to help me cleer up a rather baffling entry of 13 dollers and 49 cents. I dont mean the amount itself is baffling, because I've often payed out odder amounts than that, but instead of writing on the stub "butcher" or "light bill" or any of the old favorites, I've simply got a question mark with quotation marks on either side of it, she said.

You mean you forgot to enter what the check was made out for, and then you forgot what you forgot, pop said, and ma said, Not at all, I delibritly remember putting down this question mark at the time I wrote the check to indicate something very definite, but what, William?

That's the question, pop said, and ma said, Now William please be logical. Cant you imagine any simple reason why I would put down a question mark instead of a name? she said.

I can think of a lot of simple reasons, but I better not name them, you'd think I was exaggerating, pop said. Maybe you were just thinking to yourself, "Another bill to pay, oh what's the use?" and down went a question mark, he said, and ma said, I remember, William, it was for the laundry, the Question Laundry.

Yee gods, is that the name of our laundry? pop said, and ma said, Certanly not, but that's what I call it because I always have to ask the delivery man a duzzen questions such as why he's calling on the wrong day, and if he's found your blue shert yet, and so fourth and so on. I knew it must have a logical explination, she said.

So must the present state of international relations, pop said. Being sourcastic.

Even by Using Every Known Trick Henning Could Gain No Better Than Draw at Arena

Henning Has Not Been Defeated in Belleville Ring and Has Met the Best

"If I'd had ten more minutes in the ring, I would have licked that big punk," snarled Lee (The Scowl) Henning after the main bout at the Hume Arena Friday night. He had been held to a draw by Warren Bockwinkle, and sat sullenly in his corner in the dressing room.

He jumped to his feet and shook his fist under Manager Walt Gero's nose. "I demand another bout with that guy" he shouted, "and I want it right away. I'll show these Belleville people who's the best wrestler they ever saw."

There doesn't appear to be any one outside of Joe Palooka who can tame this Iowan Cornhusker, Lee Henning. "The Scowl" thus far has yet to be defeated in a Belleville ring, and last night's merry melange of mat manoeuvres was no different as far as La Henning was concerned.

The master-minds brought down Bockwinkle from St. Louis, a broth of a lad who has had his eyes on the world's title for some time but the best he could do was topple the lad from the corn belt in one fall, lose another and draw the match.

Had to Draw on Repertoire

"The Scowl" however was forced to draw the string completely out of his bag of tricks and his social standing with the wrestling faithful hereabouts dropped another couple of notches. He moved two blocks further the other side of the tracks, and he doesn't appear to show any penchant for hobnobbing with the bluebloods.

He concentrated his attacks on the tonsils, eyes and remnants of hair that adorned the Bockwinkle noggin. He gouged with two-finger punches, and again used his crafty strategy to win the second fall. He merely chucked the Bock out of the ring, hopped out after him and tap-danced a few steps on the fallen foe's jugular vein, massaged his abdominal muscles with a few sledgehammer punches and hopped back into the ring at the count of eight to get the nod.

Had His Innings

Bockwinkle had his innings at times. He flashed into sudden action and with a sliding leg-hold punished the Scowl severely. This hold worked successfully at the end of 24 minutes brawling in the first fall, and the faithful shrieked its approval as the Scowl lay prone on the canvas, out for the count.

Henning again used his outside the ring tactics in an effort to find a baseball bat, a tommy-gun or just a common piece of twelve-inch plank. Any of these would serve his purpose, but he had to compromise on some pieces of stick with which he massaged the Bockwinkle orbs on numerous occasions, secreting the secret weapon in his mouth, or in his trunks.

The third fall saw the boys go at the job hammer and tongs and things were quite merry at the end of the time limit. So and the Scowl was dissatisfied and as angry fans milled about the ring attacked the Bock. Bockwinkle threw a couple of husky punches at the Henning jaw and finally applied the sliding leg-hold before Henning decided to call it a day.

The old perennial Al. "Bunny" Dunlop nearly stole the show with his display of villainy. He had worked over the popular Pat Flanagan for nearly twenty minutes using everything from shoelaces, towels, trunks, and the Arena shower bath before he was forced to say "uncle." La Bunny showed he was no respector of persons and and after the decision took some husky punches at Referee Fox, allowing that young man to view the Arena lights from an upside down prone position.

Flanagan raced in to the attack and Bunny renewed the battle. He was doing fairly well when Toar Morgan, semi-final principal rushed in to aid the fallen referee and Flanagan. Between the two they gave the Bunny a going over not too lightly, before the big villian was subdued. They can bring him back anytime.

Morgan and Big Jim Goon Henry wrestled thirty minutes to a draw in a bout that was another demonstration of some mat arch-villainy with the Goon in the deep-dyed villain's role. Toar however showed he was no novice at some rough tactics himself and between the two the crowd was treated to an exciting aggressive bout.

SWACOS DROP CLOSE DECISION TO LATTA NINE

Winners Score Four Runs in Fourth to Put Game on Ice

Rallying strongly in the seventh innings after trailing the Latta nine by four runs, Lefty Whitman's SWACO baseball squad just failed to make the grade and dropped a close 5-4 decision at the Alemite Field Thursday.

Hall, Latta lefthander went the route for the "out-of-towners" struck out seven and was nicked for six hits. Titus, tall righthander for SWACOS started the hurling chore but was relieved by Marse Whitman in the fourth with two out when the Latta batting guns exploded and sent four runners scampering across the plate.

Doc Empson's crew had scored one marker in the first innings but the Swaco gang nullified this in the second and the teams battled on even terms until the fateful fourth. The Latta bats got to Titus for six hits for only one run, but belted Whitman's offerings for three hits for four runs over the remainder of the pastime.

SWACOS flashed to life in the seventh, and although they came within an ace of tying the score they fell short by two runs of victory.

Whitman and Gerow smacked two hits for the losers both getting two-base knocks. Keon, Latta second baseman paced the Latta attack with three clouts. Carson got a pair one a two-base hit while Smith also connected for two-sacks for the losers.

What's Doing in Sport

By The Canadian Press

With a 132 total for 36 holes, Johnny Bulla of Chicago yesterday assumed a four-stroke lead at the half-way mark of the $20,000 invitation golf tourney at Kansas City, with Byron Nelson in second slot. Both Sam Snead and Lawson Little quit the competition during the day.

A saliva scandal developed yesterday in the harness meet at Roosevelt raceway, Westbury, N. Y., when the state harness racing commission suspended driver Jack Brown and the Samuel Conway stable, alleging that a horse, Earl's Aubrey, had been doped.

Sports organizations of France yesterday presented a demand to the French government that the country's champions be designated "state athletes" and pressed for the removal of the line between pros and amateurs.

Leftfielder Dick Wakefield fractured his left arm in Thursday's game at Boston, it was found yesterday, and will be lost to Detroit Tigers for at least three weeks. He bumped into the grandstand while chasing a ball.

Terms have been arranged, it was announced at New York yesterday, for a 10-round non-title bout at Wembley, London, between Bruce Woodcock, British Empire champion, and Gus Lesnevich of New Jersey, world light - heavyweight champion. The date is Sept. 17.

In English cricket yesterday, the Indian Tourists defeated Derbyshire by 118 runs while the England eleven barely won by 18 runs from The Rest. Leading the batting with 103 runs was Denis Compton for The Rest.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

"Ever hear the story of the hare and the tortoise, bub?" asked Dinny, the demon copy boy, shaking his eleven o'clock bottle of coke under the reportorial proboscis.

"That yarn, my chirping young friend," quoth we, "has hare on it, not intending to be punny. So what is on that one-way mind of yours?"

"Just this, bub" replied the tow-headed son of an Irish bricklayer, "that yarn reminds me of the softball set-up in these yere parts."

That coming from Dinny, brought home the fact that he had developed practically overnight something with which he could think. Filching one of the American cigarettes lying on the desk, Dinny spiralled smoke into the warm morning air and acquired a Solomon look of wisdom. "Wanna know why?" he ventured.

Friday being the day when the brains go on strike and the aging bones creak louder than usual, we allowed Dinny to expound his theory on why fables should be introduced to the sports pages.

...."No kiddin', bub" he said... "If you kept your eyes open you would see what's goin' on under that nose of your'n. Aincha noticed in the last two weeks how those Mountain View birds and Wally Harden's Goodman juniors has been slowly getting better."

We readily admitted that something of that nature had occurred to us. "It did eh," snorted Dinny, "Well let me tellya sumpun. While Point Anne, SACOS and Flashes have been at each other with all sorts of rumors about protesting players and what not, these two gangs from Mountain View and Goodmans have been gettin' some help from the neighbors."

"Didn't Mountain View take some of the shine outta the Flashes the other night? Didn't Goodman's gang throw a goddlemighty scare in Phil Loft's Point Anners Thursday night, and if they hadn't kicked the ball around in the second innings they woulda scalped those Ox Pointers," yelled the Dinny.

The basso profundo of that mighty atom of the composing room, Charley, roared into the news rooms. Dinny rose, pinched another fag, yelled "Comin" and darted in search of work.

Within a minute he was back. His long fingers reached out along the desk. "H-mm, funny," he remarked, "thought I left my cigarettes here, bub." Assured that he didn't and on promise of payment on Tuesday, we loaned him another gasper.

"As I was sayin'" he resumed, "These big-shot teams wanta look out. They aint in the playoffs, let alone the playdowns as yet and they wanta watch their antics or this Goodman Gang, or the air force guys is goin to spoil somebody's playoff aspirations. That's the right word, Bub."

Dinny leaned over the desk. He looked hurriedly around the slave mart, noticed that all were busy, and whispered.

"Kinya keep a secret, Bub?"

Assuring him that such a thing was possible, he leaned closer, tapped a finger on the desk and murmured. "Don't say I toldya, but things are going to be boyling around here soon. And notice how I spell the word willya, and write it that way. Yep, they's going to be helterpay shortly, mebbe," he said.

Dinny, whose freckles stand out like black pepper on mashed spuds, rose to go. "Lissen, bub, I hear you're thinkin' of joinin the cluck-of-the-month club in September and go to see Joe Louis initiate Tami Maurielle as president of the K.O. Club."

Before we could get an answer out for that one, Dinny chuckled and went on. "They tell me Tami used to be a weather-man in the Bronx callin' the atmospheric signals for dem bums. Well, he'd better predict an early fall this year, as far as he's concerned. It'll come in September right after Joe Louis has got tired of yawning and stretching his muscles. Lemme see, it shouldn't take him any longer than the fourth round."

"And I see," mused Dinny, bringing out an assortment of cigarette butts from his pockets, with one eye cocked on the package on the desk, "that Billy Conn is thinking of staging a comeback. Gosh, bub, Joe Louis musta hurt him a lot more than the newspaper guys said he did. He musta knocked his brains out."

"Lissen, I gotta go, or Charlie will be outta chewin' tobacco," said the composing room prodigy. "But I'll do ya another favor before I lower me dignity and resort to the unnecessary thing called work. Gimme another fag and I'll tellya who the best softball shortstop in the league is."

• • •

That did it. "No, Dinny, no. Let us guess," was the comeback to that offer, "Okay," the sorreltop smiled "who is it?"

"Nicky Sero, Point Anne," we hazarded.

Dinny's face dropped. "Yeah, I guess you're right," he mumbled, plainly disappointed at being deprived of his verbal scoop. He thought for a moment. Then his face brightened.

"For that fag I'll betcha I can tell yuh who the coolest shortstop in the league is." His face lit up with anticipation as that one practically floored us. "Wanna bet?" he urged.

"Okay," we agreed. Dinny reached over, grabbed the cigarette and rose to his feet before he replied, "Sword, of SACOS."

"Yes, and why Sword?" we queried.

Dinny started on the run for the comp. room. Near the door he turned, and grinned. Because he's one below Sero."

And as he ducked a rubber tire ash tray, there floated back to the sports desk a word that sounded suspiciously like "sucker."

Bing Crosby Named Honarary Member Golf Association

Winnipeg, July 13—(CP)—Bing Crosby has been named an honorary member of the board of directors of the Canadian Professional Golfers' Association and J P. Emile Collette of Montreal, an honorary member of the National advisory board of the U. S. P. G. A.

The appointments were announced from Colorado Springs, Colo., by Ed. Dudley, president of the P. G. A. and released here today by the Winnipeg committee of the C. P. G. A.

The announcement said Crosby did much to put over the first C P. G. A. $10,000 open last year at Islesmere, Montreal, by attending and taking part in the tournament.

Mr. Collette is the first person outside the United States to be appointed to the P. G. A. executive. He is honorary president of the C. P. G. A.

Ouch!

Al Renzetti, pro at the Glenmere Country Club, Chester, N.Y., is experimenting with the use of former K-9 corps dogs to retrieve lost golf balls...Renzetti washes the balls with specially-scented soap before he drives them into the rough and the dogs are being taught to recognize the odor... We know golf balls are expensive, but that seems like going to great lengths to save a few scents.

A. & N. FLASHES SCORE 11-2 WIN OVER THE SACOS

Hook Allowed but Two Hits and Team Proved Selves Contender for League Honors

Unleashing a powerful hitting attack, Frank Sedore's Army and Navy Flashes proved themselves a potent contender for playoff honors at the Fair Grounds Friday night, turning back the league-leading SACO Marines by an 11-2 score.

With big Steve Hook muffling the SACO bats over the nine innings route allowing them but two hits, one of them a third-baseline homer by Red Carson in the fourth when SACOS scored both their runs, the Flashes big guns blasted SACO pitchers for nine hits, scoring two in the first, one in the third, four in the fourth, three in the fifth and the remaining run in the seventh.

Manager Maxie Peoples started Keith Baldwin on the mound and Flashes got to him for six hits and ten runs until the fifth when with two out, he sent in Halloran in a relief role. He retired the next batter, but in the next innings he was nicked for a home run by Vern Goyer and a double by Timmy Williams.

After that he held the veterans squad scoreless allowing but one hit over the three innings he pitched from that point on.

Big Fourth Innings

Flashes had their big innings in the fourth when Wagar's home run smash drove in Moon, who had walked, ahead of him. Hook followed with a single and Rowbotham got on, on Wardhaugh's error. Two more runs went across before the side was retired and Flashes had a seven run lead.

They got three more in the fifth when Baldwin issued two walks and Moon filled the sacks on a fielders choice. Rowbotham smashed out a double that cleaned the bases and that was the end of Baldwin.

SACOS runs came in the fourth when Chapman who had drawn a free ticket galloped home on Red Carson's third-base line smash went for a homer. Hook developed a slight streak of wildness at this point walking three batters in a row but some screwy base running on the part of SACOS killed the rally.

Carson and Sword were the only Marines to connect safely off Hook. Rowbotham led the Flashes hit parade with two doubles, Goyer and Wagar hit homers, Tim Williams got a double as did Harold Reid while Hook, Ronski and Gerow connected for singles.

Score by innings:

Flashes	201 431 000—11	9	0
SACOS	000 200 000— 2	2	3

AMATEUR BASEBALL

(By The Canadian Press)

Stratford Nationals maintained their supremacy over London Majors yesterday when they won their fourth straight game in five starts by handing the visitors a 6-0 shutout.

Superlative pitching by southpaw Ralph Hammond, formerly of the Toronto Maple Leafs, featured a 4-1 victory by Welland Atlas Steels over Niagara Falls Houcks in a Niagara Senior Baseball League contest. The big lefthander fanned 16 Falls batters in gaining the decision over Jiggs Rufrano, who went the route for the Falls nine.

Toronto, July 13 — (CP)—Decorum is the watchword in the Olympic Ladies Softball League where, despite big gate receipts, the girls are true-blue amateurs and the league president's honorarium last season was an upholstered chair.

All the more surprising then is it that public hearing should be given a controversy over sordid professionalism, touched off by a player under indefinite suspension these last two years for playing for pay with a United States team.

Gladyn Davis, battling for reinstatement, started airing the unwashed linen when, she said, a Chicago team here for an exhibition series had in its lineup a teammate of hers on that old pro Milwaukee Club. And "if Shirley Shultze, now Mrs. Jacoby, can play as an amateur in this park I don't see why I can't."

Andy (Toronto Star) Lytle, to whom Gladys bared her woes, didn't either and put it down to "official fuddyduddyism." He soon heard from Ed Bewley, president of the Olympic League that estimates it draws more customers per season to its nightly floodlight games at Sunnyside Stadium than does the International Baseball League Maple Leafs.

The president's recorded stand was that Gladys was not acceptable to American officials. Therefore, his league would be barred from the annual world's championships at Chicago if she played.

Besides, he returned from taking up the cudgel for Gladys with U. S. officials to be told she was trying to talk one of the Olympic League players into deserting to pro fields. That tore it, he said.

Andy, estimating that the league takes in up to $30,000 a year at the gate, suggests to all that it's about time for a more equitable distribution of spoils and wonders how come U. S. softball officials write the definition of Canadian amateurism.

Red Rides Again

That Buster (Red) Storey pumping home goals for Montreal's lacrosse Canadiens (he scored seven of 14 in a recent game) is the same galloping ghost who decided football too rugged for his aging limbs after winning the Canadian championship practically singlehanded one December afternoon eight years ago . . . . None of the 19,000 fans at Toronto Varsity that day could forget the picture of the 200-pound Argonaut star racing to four last-quarter touchdowns against Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

White Hope?

With Tami Mauriello the next K. O. candidate, Jim (Globe and Mail) Coleman wonders when Mike Jacobs will concede Joe Louis an overmatch for anyone but Joe Palooka.

Bridge players have no place to go when you break open a case they can argue about. A subject that would last forever is what the return lead should be in every situation.

When your partner has made the first lead, your return lead is either in his led suit or some other suit. When your return lead is in some other suit, a number of things must be considered.

When you return the suit led by partner, your decision may not be too difficult. The card you choose may depend only on whether you originally held less than or at least four cards in it.

Having held three or less, most likely your best return is the highest remaining card. If you started with at least four, rule asks you to return fourth best of your original holding.

Even this can grow into a problem. In either case, your choice may have to be altered if partner led small instead of a sequence top. Or by what is left in the dummy hand.

NORTH
♥K 10 4 2

WEST
♥Q J 9 6

EAST
♥8 7 5 3

Your partner in the west starts out with an opening lead of the heart queen. Seeing the ten in dummy, you know he started with an incomplete sequence of Q J 9.

The dummy plays small and so do you. South wins that trick with the ace. When you are in the lead with your east hand, will you return a heart? Not if your eyes are good.

A lead of a heart from your hand is bound to let dummy take two tricks with king and ten. Because your west partner has left the jack and nine that must play before dummy.

Return leads could keep us going around in circles for years. We will see more of them as we go along together.

Learn the easier things first.

In Manhattan

By MICHAEL O'MARA
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, July 13 (CP)—Vaudeville is dead but every now and then it turns over in its grave—as it did this week when a misguided group of backers turned loose some fair night-club talent in a revue entitled "Tit-bits of 1946."

The first show to open since summer heat settled down over Broadway, it has nothing much to recommend it to theatre-goers, but cafe scouts probably will be interested in some of its performers.

Josef Marais and Niranda, South Africans who sing Veldt folk-songs with authority and a good deal of charm, would show off to advantage in an uptown caravanseral after an apprenticeship last winter in a Greenwich Village Boite. Another newcomer to the main stem is dancer Josephine Boyer, a refugee from Montreal's Bistros. Her burlesque if the ballet didn't strike many critics as inspired comedy but might go over better in a more intimate atmosphere.

Aside from this, and the revival by comic Joey Faye of the hoary burlesque sketch, "Flugle Street" the goins-on are altogether undistinguished.

Three "hit" musicals dropped the curtain within recent nights after reasonably lengthy runs. The catch is that all three—"Billion Dollar Baby," "Are You With it?" and "St. Louis Woman,"—played to a good many empty seats lately and wound up spattered with red ink.

Excellent critical notices and good houses at first persuaded the showmen concerned to shoot for long runs; but competition has been stiff among musicals this year, the public is not spending quite as freely and the current heat-wave applied the death-blow.

Stuff from a rough cuff: Orson (Genius) Welles plans to add two performances of "King Lear" to his present weekly agenda of eight performances of "Around the World"...Kay Francis will take over Ruth Hussey's role in "State of the Union" in September, breaking a 16-year absence from the New York stage ... Eugene O'Neill has penned a "posthumous" play. He says his will specifies it cannot be produced until 25 years after his death.

Hollywood Column

By BOM THOMAS

Hollywood, July 13 —(AP)—For years movie minds have clung to the theory that the public shouldn't know how it is being tricked on the film screen. Actor Lee Bowman is the latest to support this contention.

I found Bowman dubbing a song on the "smash-up" set. Even though he was a crooner in his native Cincinnati, he was mouthing the words while somebody else's voice was recorded on the second track. I asked if he didn't object to having people know his movie singing voice isn't his own.

"I don't mind myself," he said, "but I know Columbia isn't anxious to have the public know that Rita Hayworth's songs aren't sung by Rita."

Along the same line, Lee said it is unwise to tell movie goers which actors wear wigs, putty noses, corsets, pads . . . (Psst—I know one well-known actor whose prominent ears are held back by a strong bra behind his head.)

It's reported the Theatre Guild would like to stage M.G.M.'s musical remake of "Ah Wilderness," with the film cast. But not even the Guild could afford to pay the salaries of Mickey Rooney, Walter Huston, Frank Morgan, Gloria DeHaven, and company, for a play. . . . Anne Jeffreys had to pass up an offer for training at the Met Opera because of picture work. Too bad, because her ambition is to own a Continental convertible and sing at the Met.

LETTERS TO THE Sports Editor

FLASHES' SIDE OF STORY

Sports Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

Dear Sir,—

In your column of July 10 with reports of Local Executive Meeting, referring certain things to O.A.S.A. for ruling, I wonder had the original protest by Point Anne been on the agenda of the meeting, would we have had a ruling handed down by the local association. I think so. As I see we have a ruling on a rule that is a pure miscarriage of O.A.S.A. rule 19. Of course the "Flashes" are the only team to be affected by this ruling handed down by the local executive.

I am positive that any lawyer or judge would say that in accordance to rule 19 our uniforms are quite in order, but not our local executive. "Why"? I read the reply to a letter sent by local secretary to secretary Feaver of O.A.S.A. and in his reply he did not commit himself to a direct answer as using the words "should not be worn." The O.A.S.A. forbidding against a rule uses the words Must Not, Shall Not or Will Not. By the removal of stripes on side of pitcher's pants, this uniform does not conform in style to the suits of other members of the team, which, according to rule 19, we are being chastised by local executive of having a complete uniform team.

It has been obvious in the past that any and all motions and suggestions made by me have promptly met with defeat or been turned down, the latest being, asking for a double schedule. I was one of three managers in favor of this. Why our executive considers that twelve games over a period of nine weeks is sufficient for each team is more than I can see.

A protest based on by-laws, paragraphs 'A', 'D' and 'F', pages 14 and 15 of the O.A.S.A. rule book, could be found ample O.A.S.A. rule violations, to be considered and not thrown out.

I don't consider myself a sob sister but I am sure getting browned off from the special attention the 'Flashes' have been receiving from the local executive. Few games in which we have played have we been without someone being instructed by the executive to check on Flashes for something or other.

The All-Vets team was organized by the backing of Army and Navy War Veterans to give the returning members of the Army, Navy and Air Force a chance to come back to Civic Street and the sports that they left. We are not asking, nor do we expect any special privileges, but we definitely want a square deal the same as anyone else gets.

We would like to see some real sportsmanship carried on in this league among the teams and executive, which up to now has been sadly lacking. Any team that represents Belleville in the O.A.S.A. playdowns would play a lot harder and be the ambassadors of good will and clean sportsmanship, if it is instilled through the league.

I would like to hear some explanations as to why I had to write this letter, on behalf of the "Veteran Flashes" and myself. May the best team represent the Association.

Sincerely yours,
F. M. Sedore.

WINS PACING CLASSIC

Chicago, July 13 (AP) — O. H. Lowen's Senator's Sister, which had failed to win in seven previous starts, last night took the first division of the $3,000 pacing classic consolation race at Maywood Park before the meetin's second largest crowd—11,320 fans—who set a wagering record of $190,737.

Senator's Sister, pacing the 1 1/16 miles course in 2.15, beat out Merry England, entered by Dr. J. S. Ferguson, of Chatham, by three lengths.

ROCHESTER WINGS JOIN BATTLE FOR PLAYOFF BERTH

Defeat Toronto Leafs Twice to Win Seven Games in Last Nine Starts

By The Associated Press

Rochester Red Wings are showing indications today of joining the battle for a playoff berth in the International League.

Benny Borgmann's hustling crew made it seven victories in nine starts and climbed to within two games of the sixth-place Toronto Maple Leafs last night by taking both ends of a twin bill from the Leafs 2-1 and 12-8.

In the opener, Glenn Gardner, veteran right hander, yielded only four hits in gaining his eighth victory of the year. Ducky Detweiler homered in a two-run fifth inning Rochester rally that broke a scoreless tie.

Rochester was forced to go 10 innings before taking the afterpiece, shoving home four runs in the extra inning.

Newark Bears lost further ground in their bid to overhaul the second-place Syracuse Chiefs as they bowed 6-3, to Baltimore while Syracuse trimmed Jersey City Giants, 5-0.

Southpaw Jim Prendergast chalked up his 11th victory of the season in blanking Jersey City. His mates battered a trio of Jersey tossers for 12 hits including homers by Steve Dudick and Al Rubeling.

Art Houtteman of Buffalo also notched his 11th triumph of the campaign as Bisons scored three runs in the ninth to defeat the pace-setting Montreal Royals 3-1.

Jimmy Orlando To Appeal Four-Year Jail Term

Detroit, July 13 (AP) — Federal officials disclosed today that James V. (Jimmy) Orlando, 30, former Detroit Red Wings hockey star and now a member of the Canadian army, has appealed a four-year jail term for violating United States selective service regulations.

Orlando was convicted in Federal Court here July 31, 1943, on charges of making false statements to his selective service board to gain deferments.

He appealed the jail sentence and $2,000 fine, but the Federal Circuit Court at Cincinnati upheld it in May, 1944. Orlando went to Canada while the appeal was pending and a $4,000 bond posted by Jack Adams, Red Wings manager, as co-guarantor was forfeited.

During Orlando's trial, the prosecution presented evidence that Orlando told his draft board he was employed in essential work when he actually was playing hockey with the Red Wings.

Assistant U. S. District Attorney Kenneth W. Smith of Detroit, said today that Washington officials have asked him for a complete report on the trial.

"I will recommend that Orlando surrender and begin serving his sentence before seeking a pardon," Mr. Smith declared.

Smith said that Orlando's pardon petition had been submitted to the Department of Justice in Washington.

RAY ROBINSON WINS IN SECOND ROUND BY K.O.

Lands Left Hook on Joe Curcio Just as Bell Ends First Canto

By SID FEDER

New York, July 13 (CP) — The fistic faithful didn't care much about whether Sugar Ray Robinson knocked southpaw Joe Curcio out in the first or second round at Madison Square Garden last night. They were wondering more about just what walloper, short of Joe Louis himself, could handle welterweight Sugar Ray.

This "lump" of a left hook landed just as the bell rang ending the first round of their scheduled 10-rounder. And inasmuch as Southpaw Joe was still flat on his back when the bell sounded to begin the second round, it didn't make much difference whether the folks figured the pay-off should be for the first or second session.

In chalking up his 68th. win in 70 pro starts, the young Negro showed that he's the class of the welterweights — with all due respect to his forthcoming 147-lb. taffy pull with Champion Marty Servo.

This left hook that Sugar Ray fired had Joe's seconds working over him throughout the minute rest between rounds. But he was still sound asleep when the bell rang for the second session. Referee Billy Cavanaugh started to count, but when he got to "two" he decided it was just a waste of effort.

SLIPPING DODGERS MAY JOLT JULY 4 TRADITION BY LOSING PENNANT TO ST. LOUIS CARDS

Redbirds Narrow Gap to 3½ Games With Four-Game Series With Brooklyn Coming Up

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

Leave it to the unpredictable Brooklyn Dodgers to upset one of major league baseball's most ancient traditions.

Of the 18 National League clubs that have led the pack July 4 only to yield first place to another team in the last 46 years, 5 of them represented Brooklyn. It appeared today that unless the skidding Dodgers righted themselves pretty quick, they might make it six of the last 19.

This July 4, Leo Durocher's outfit enjoyed a seven-game edge over St. Louis Cards. Exactly six playing days later, the Redbirds have narrowed the gap to 3½ games and they engage the Flatbush crew in a four-game series starting tomorrow.

The Cardinals gained 1½ games on the league leaders yesterday by sweeping both ends of a doubleheader from New York Giants 2-1 and 5-4, while Chicago Cubs handed the Dodgers their second straight defeat 13-2.

Howie Pollet limited the Giants to five hits in outpitching Bill Voiselle in the opener, then came back to save the nightcap with a brilliant relief shore in the ninth inning.

Drove Home Seven Runs

Led by little Peanuts Lowrey who drove home seven runners and scored three on a home run and two singles, the Cubs battered three Brooklyn hurlers for 18 hits and easily notched their 5th straight home triumph over the Dodgers.

Dave (Boo) Ferriss gained his 13th pitching success and his 8th straight over Detroit as the American League-leading Boston Red Sox defeated the Tigers, 4-2, to increase their margin over the idle New York Yankees to eight games. A crowd of 26,290 increased the Red Sox attendance for 40 home games to 740,517, 10,000 more than their previous record high set in 1942.

Hurls One-hitter

Johnny Sain pitched a one-hitter as Boston Braves eked out a 1-0 decision over Cincinnati Reds. A double by Grady Hatton in the first inning prevented the elongated righthander from registering a perfect game as Hatton was the only Redleg to reach base.

The cellar-dwelling Pittsburgh Pirates quelled a ninth-inning Philadelphia rally to defeat the Phillies, 4-3, and move within 3 games of seventh place.

With Dick Fowler of Toronto bagging his sixth mound victory, Philadelphia Athletics chased starter Jack Kramer with a 3-run fourth inning and went on to defeat St. Louis Browns, 7-2.

Eddie Robinson Leading Hitter Of Int. League

New York, July 13—(AP)—Eddie Robinson, hard-hitting first baseman of Baltimore Orioles smashed the International league pitching at a .445 pace during the last week to take over the individual batting leadership of the circuit.

The 25-year-old slugger, including games of Wednesday, rapped out 15 hits in 33 trips to the plate during the week to boost his average 14 points to .363.

Al Clark, injured infielder-outfielder of Newark Bears who led the parade with a .360 mark a week ago, dropped to second with .358. The three remaining players among the first five who have been to the plate 150 or more times, are members of Montreal Royals, Lew Riggs is third with .355, Jackie Robinson fourth, .354, and Tom Tatum fifth, .346.

Johnny McHale of Buffalo Bisons and Howie Moss of Baltimore are deadlocked at 19 apiece for home run honors while McHale leads in runs batted in with 67.

Walt Dubiel, Newark right-hander, paces the hurlers who have been involved in seven or more decisions with a 6-1 record. Art Houtteman of Buffalo and Jim Prendergast of Syracuse are the only moundsmen to rack up 10 victories. Prendergast has suffered four setbacks while Houtteman has been charged with six.

CHAPTER 6

The next day Iris told the hopeful news of the contest to Dr. Tracy.

"So there's going to be an opera singer in your family, eh?" he said, grinning. "Behind the success of most famous people are other people who deserve equally as much credit. You've been paying for her music lessons out of your salary, haven't you?"

"It wasn't much, Louis."

When she went out to lunch, he called Mark. "Listen, young man, I admit I'm rather gullible but this contest money given to an obscure teacher sounds like one of your numerous charities. If Iris knew it, she'd be furious."

"You win. I am the backer to whom Sabine has given a thoroughly ridiculous name. I feel like Santa Claus. Don't spoil it."

"You sound very serious."

"I am so serious I'm sentimental. Whenever I see a yacht for sale, I want to buy it, kidnap Iris, marry her, and take her cruising on the Mediterranean, take her away from her family and—you."

Louis chuckled. "That black hair and those grave eyes have become very dear to me. If Annette could hear me say that, she'd leave for Reno tonight."

The Wade home that week was a bedlam of excitement. Eve could not control her soaring hopes. When it came to the subject of what she should wear Saturday night, Iris said at the dinner table. "Wear my gold dress. Mother can cut it down to fit you."

Her mother interrupted. "But you'll want to wear that, Iris."

"I can wear the green."

Tommy said, "I have to work Saturday night. Worst luck," and Iris saw his slender hands, dark with the grime and grease of the gas station, sensitive, boyish hands not meant for manual labor.

To escape Eve's continuous practicing she took long walks at night, going down the familiar paths in the park where she and Joel had walked so often, both happily and bitterly quarreling. Clarity of mind and peace came to Iris during those lonely night walks. She did not seem to be fighting any longer, and the door that had been closed so long had been opened—by Mark.

When she could put Joel from her mind, a strange high happiness came to her, a happiness from within which she did not quite understand and which she did not question. It was not to be shared with anyone else, that feeling, and when she returned home and went to her room and saw her face, her eyes startled her. Iris thought, "What is happening to me? I must not fight it. I must give in to it."

Saturday night the old house was in a positive fever. It took both Selina and Iris to dress the diminutive Eve who emerged in the gold dress from the shy page from a medieval court into a temperamental prima donna. Eve stormed, raged, and shouted from sheer excitement and nervousness. Selina wept also and angrily left the room, declaring, "She'll forget everything and fail. She'll disgrace me."

Iris, a slim princess in her green dress with the bodice made of sheer petals that fell over her white shoulders, put her arms around the trembling young girl and made her nervous voice calm when she spoke.

"You are more talented than any other person who'll be there. Don't sing to an audience of mothers and fathers, Eve. Sing to the audience of the opera. A good singer is a good actress and you must put all your feelings and depth into your voice.

Eve's misty eyes looked up.

"Everything depends upon this—for you and for me. If I do win, Iris, you can live your life that has never belonged to you."

Iris smiled. "I don't think I've been unlucky at all."

When they went downstairs, Mark was there trying not to look embarrassed at Mrs. Wade's elusive gushing over him. Again Iris saw the warm light come to his eyes and suddenly Eve's shaking hand was not in hers and her mother's flushed face vanished. There was no one but Mark, tall and tanned and in evening clothes, waiting at the head of the walnut stairs for her.

Selina said, "I'll call you at Mary's as soon as it's over."

Mark stopped the car for gasoline at a station on North Charles Street. Out of the small enclosure came Tommy to fill the car. Iris thought, "What a strangely assorted family we are. Eve is going to win ten thousand dollars tonight and fame, I'm going to a party, and Tommy is a greasy boy working as a laborer."

It was the sight of a pretty girl in the large car that made Tommy look up. Briefly he met Iris's eyes through the windshield and then quickly looked away. Iris thought, "He won't speak to me! He doesn't want me to be ashamed of him."

"Tommy!"

Mark asked, "Do you know the boy?"

"He's my brother."

Tommy came to the side of the car and awkwardly pulled off his uniform cap.

"This is Mr. Christian, Tommy. Didn't you recognize me?"

"Oh, sure. Has Eve gone?"

"Yes, and with our prayers."

"I hope she wins."

Mark thrust considerably more than the cost of the gasoline into Tommy's hand, said, "Thank you, Tommy," and drove off quickly, and his admiration for the girl beside him doubled because of her loyalty to her brother.

The guests had all arrived at Mary's. They stood about in intimate little groups talking and laughing and sipping Mary's incomparable drinks.

Mary North was a small pretty woman with exquisite taste in her clothes, her apartment, her parties, and her friends. Her husband, a brilliant young scientist, had been killed in a laboratory explosion two years before and Iris knew that her endless pursuit of pleasure and entertainment was the outlet of a grief-stricken woman who could not permit herself leisure to contemplate the tragic day two years ago when they had brought her husband home to her.

"I'm so glad you're here," she said, greeting Iris and Mark.

In the bedroom Iris told her about Eve.

"Always thinking of Eve," said Mary, small and beautiful in white lace. "Iris, darling, do stop thinking about Eve long enough to realize that the gentleman of gentlemen is falling wildly in love with you."

"When Mark counts the women in his life when he's eighty," said Iris, touching her dark hair, "I'll be around the fiftieth."

The evening went quickly as all evenings went quickly at Mary's. The small and intimate group of Mary's friends, which included successful commercial artists and illustrators, men and women who wrote reviews of music and the theatre, and one formerly famous musical comedy actress who now proudly declared she was "only a mother," took Iris at face value, though often they wondered about the beautiful brunette with an obscure background to whom all men were attracted and whom all women liked.

Across the room her eyes met Mark's who looked at her with shameless adoration. "Let nothing happen to this," she thought solemnly. "It's apart from my real life and sweeter because it's unspoken. I would rather it remained unspoken forever than for it to become involved with Joel and Mother and the ugly side of my life about which he knows nothing."

Mary approached Mark.

"Aren't you very exclusive, drinking alone?"

"I wasn't aware of it," he said, smiling. "I was thinking of the Mediterranean just then."

Mary's hand touched his.

"Mark, dear, the Mediterranean is blue and Iris's dress is green," and when they saw Iris suddenly get up and go into the little writing room and Mark started to follow, Mary said, "No. Don't. She wants to be alone when her sister calls. Mark, my dear, what are you waiting for with Iris?"

"I am waiting until she can belong to me and to me only."

He waited a long time, his eyes on the door of the writing room. With the party in progress, he knew he could not hear the telephone ring and there was nothing for him to do but wait until he was sure that Eve had called.

At midnight he could wait no longer. Crossing the room, he opened the door and stepped in the quiet room. Iris was standing by the window, her back to him. Her hair was gleaming in the half-light, her face uplifted.

She was not frightened when he put his hands on her bare arms. Instead she leaned her head against his shoulder and said quietly, "Eve—Eve won." But her voice broke with emotion. He saw her lashes flat against her face but he did not know that she was thinking, "Mark, hold me, hold me. Keep me like this forever. It's you I want and love—though I can never say it."

Should he tell her now? Should he say, "Iris, marry me now. Let me put behind you everything that troubles you. Let's make this dream of mine of a Mediterranean honeymoon real. It can be real."

No. He could not. And he hated the time that had to pass before he could ask her.

The papers made much ado about little Eve Wade. Relatives who had conveniently forgotten the widowed Selina and her three children descended upon them with congratulations and also with suggestions as to how the contest money should be spent. Everything in the house in Walbrook centered about Eve, her preparations for going to New York and then abroad to study.

"She can't go alone," said Iris. "You go with her, Mother. With Tommy and me working we can afford a housekeeper."

Selina looked confused. The time had come when she must choose between the fostering of Eve's talent or the fostering of Iris's marriage to a man of wealth. She weighed the two carefully, her eyes guilty. Eve's success depended upon chance; there was nothing certain about it. But no one could doubt Mark's growing love for Iris. To Selina Wade the prospect of being the mother-in-law of Mark Christian was far more appealing than being the inconspicuous mother and traveling companion of a potential opera star who had years of study before her yet.

She looked at Iris reproachfully.

"I couldn't bear the heat of New York this summer and living in a small apartment. I've never lived in an apartment in my life. The very idea of going abroad makes me ill. You know I've never been able to travel by water. No, Iris. Eve will have to go alone. I'll write to Cousin Martha...."

Eve flared. "I won't live with Cousin Martha! I want to live alone!"

"You don't have to live with her," pacified Selina. "But you can go and see her now and then. I'll feel better about you with one of the family near."

When Eve went out, Iris said, "Do you think it's wise to send her there alone? I don't think New York is terribly wicked, but she's young, she's never had any independence, she's never worked. She's going to meet a lot of temptations...."

Her mother sighed. "When she goes, she won't belong to me any more. I'm trying to comfort myself by thinking that she'll belong to her public and that her voice will give happiness to so many people."

It was futile for Iris to say, "But this is the turning point of her life. She's never needed you as much as she needs you now. She needs some one to come home to in a strange city. With her moods and temperament, I'm afraid for her. Already she's changed. She feels self-important. All this publicity has gone to her head."

C. H. MILLARD

C. H. Millard, national director for Canada of the United Steel Workers of America, who stated in Hamilton that the issue is still between the steel workers and the companies, and that in theory the government may have some paper powers. He said the dispute could be settled by adequate offers.

Workers Willing To Have Appointee To Settle Dispute

Hamilton, July 13 — (CP)—C. S. Jackson, Canadian director of the United Electrical Workers (C.I.O.), in a telegram to Labor Minister Mitchell, said today the union is "prepared to accept" the appointment of a commissioner to attempt to break the deadlock with four Ontario electrical companies where strikes now are in progress.

Mr. Jackson said 7,200 workers are involved in the strikes at two Hamilton plants of the Canadian Westinghouse Company; the Electric Metallurgical Company at Welland; the Amalgamated Electric Corporation, Ltd., at Toronto, and the Canadian Wire and Cable Company, Ltd., at Toronto. The strike started a week ago.

The union demands are a 25-cents-an-hour increase and a reduction of the work week from 44 hours to 40 hours.

Mr. Jackson's telegram read:—"Seventy-two hundred workers are on strike in four electrical plants in the face of an evident combine of employers to withhold adequate wage increases as requested and needed. Government action in establishing commissioners for auto, rubber, steel, mine, mill and smelter workers sets precedent which we are prepared to accept as approved means of attempting to break the deadlock between the companies and the unions."

EIGHT INJURED AS TRAINS COLLIDE

A collision between two suburban trains of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad in Chicago resulted in injury to eight persons, four of whom required hospitalization. The collision occurred when one train, which had unloaded its passengers, backed out of the station and rammed into the first coach of an incoming train at a switch. The wrecked coach of one of the trains is shown here.

Attorney General's Dept. to Handle Case Against Davis

Toronto, July 13 CP)— Cecil L. Snyder, Deputy Attorney General, yesterday said a member of the Attorney General's Department has been assigned to handle the prosecution in the assault and robbery charge against Harry Davis, vice-president of the Canadian Seamen's Union, at Port Colborne.

Mr. Snyder said this move was taken to assure that the case is "properly handled for the Crown and fairly and impartially toward the accused."

Davis, charged with four other men in connection with the beating up of Alex Morrison, Toronto private investigator, at Port Colborne, June 20, was arrested in Toronto Thursday while attending a meeting of union officials and steamship operators. Davis later was released on $2,000 bail.

Earlier yesterday Police Chief Fred Davies and Mayor H. H. Knoll of Port Colborne protested the granting of bail on the direction of Crown Attorney Harry W. Macoomb of Welland and described the action as "illegal."

Mr. Snyder said he could not understand the basis of the complaint. Mr. Macoomb, the Deputy Crown Attorney said, made arrangements with the Crown Attorney at Toronto to approve bail set by the Crown at Welland after the procedure had been first approved by him.

"The police and Mayor have absolutely nothing to do with fixing of bail," Mr. Snyder said. "I am all the more surprised by the statement said to have been made by the police chief because I believe that most of the credit for solving the case belongs to the Toronto city police."

Mr. Snyder's statement referred to earlier remarks made by Police Chief Davies as well as Mayor Knoll who said the County Crown Attorney (Mr. Macoomb) is "hampering the Port Colborne police in their investigation, carried on when other authorities did not proceed. Our police force should not be hindered in their law enforcement by the action of the Crown Attorney. Chief Davies has done a fine job in this investigation and should have no stumbling blocks placed in his way by anyone."

Central Hastings Orange Lodges Meet at Stirling

Rural and village supporters of the Orange Order from throughout Central Hastings gathered at Stirling on Friday afternoon as seventeen lodges from the district marched in celebration of the 256th anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne.

Favored by typical "Twelfth of July" weather with a hot sun beating down from a cloudless sky, lodge members from as far south as Trenton and north to Allen Settlement and St. Ola paraded in a colorful march through village streets and back to the Stirling Agricultural Park where speeches from local riding representatives were heard, while the sports-minded watched stalwarts from Sidney, Rawdon and Thurlow townships battle it out on the softball diamond.

17 Lodges in Parade

Marching in the parade which saw two L.O.B.A. lodges taking part were the following lodges: Ivanhoe and West Huntingdon No's 435 and 300, under whose auspiçes the celebration was held, Eldorado No. 517; Wellmans No. 172; Marmora No. 319; Malone No. 285; Springbrook No. 442; Foxboro, Minto, Queensboro, Stirling, Allen Settlement, Nickle's, Hazzards, Plainfield and Trenton. L.O.B.A. lodges from Stirling and Marmora appeared jointly in the parade. The parade was under the direction of Parade Marshal Morgan who rode the conventional white horse.

Besides the various fife and drum bands of the different lodges, the Stirling Municipal Band under bandmaster Maurice Bell contributed to the musical entertainment during the afternoon, as did the Salvation Army Band from Tweed.

Official Welcome Given

Official welcome to the large crowd which attended the celebration was extended by County Master for Central Hastings, W. J. Johnston of Rawdon township, while Mr. Robert Eggleton of Stirling, the oldest Orangeman on the grounds, was also called upon for a few words.

George S. White, federal member for Hastings-Peterboro urged continued allegiance to the British Empire pointing out that within recent months certain factions in the Canadian House of Commons had sought to introduce bills which would tend to make a breach between the Dominion and the Empire.

"First of these was the bill to change the name of "Dominion Day", the second was the redistribution bill which gave Quebec eight additional seats in the House of Commons, while the 3rd was the bill to change the flag."

Never Ashamed of Name

The speaker declared that he for one had never been ashamed of the name Dominion Day, while he termed as unfair to the other provinces the bill which would give additional seats in the House of Commons to the Province of Quebec. "The Union Jack should always remain as part of any Canadian flag," he said.

Other speakers scheduled to be heard during the afternoon included Roscoe Robson, M.L.A. for Hastings East, W. E. Tummon, past Grand Master for Ontario East; Br. Rev. E. C. Beazer, Grand Chaplain for Ontario East and a representative of Nickle's lodge.

Rawdon township softballers proved too much for their Sidney opponents as the northerners took a liking to the slants dished up by Ralph Campbell, Sidney hurler, and won a 16-8 victory. Ernie Ray for the winners kept the Sidney bats well under control and was afforded good support by his teammates. Rawdon and Thurlow township tied up in an abbreviated evening fixture.

Premier Drew Files Statement

Toronto, July 13 (CP)—Premier Drew of Ontario yesterday filed his statement of defence in an action brought against him by John A. Rowe, former provincial police officer, who is suing the premier for $17,500 for claimed damage to his reputation.

The suit arises from the "Gestapo" charges in the 1945 provincial election campaign and Mr. Rowe's statement of claim, filed some time ago, charged that Premier Drew in a radio address accused him of stealing secret and confidential records.

Premier Drew said in his statement of defence that the words complained of were fair comment on public matters.

3rd Thurlow—Rev. J. R. Trumpour was a dinner guest on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Hamilton.

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Bennett and Mr. and Mrs. W. Leslie were tea hour guests on Wednesday of Mr. and Mrs. George Hamilton.

Mr. Irwin Clapp and two sons of Jersey City, have returned home after spending a few days with the former's brother, Mr. Gilbert Clapp and family.

Mrs. K. Carleton of Plainfield and Mrs. W. Chamberlain, 8th concession and Miss Marjorie MacPherson called on Miss Bessie Walker on Monday evening.

Mrs. Ralph Sills, Zion spent Friday with Mrs. Vernon Hamilton.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Walker called on Mr. and Mrs. George Denike, 3rd of Sidney on Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hamilton and Mrs. John Morris of Brampton spent Monday with Mr. and Mrs. Grant Cole, 4th line.

Mr. and Mrs. Grant Kerr and family and Mr. and Mrs. F. Faulkner and Mr. Harry Faulkner of Halloway called on Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Hamilton on Sunday evening.

Miss Joy Osland entertained 12 girl friends at her home on Thursday afternoon at a tea towel shower for Miss Bessie Walker.

Mrs. John Morris of Brampton is spending a week with her sister Mrs. George Hamilton.

FUN NOW WHERE TERROR REIGNED

With the gaunt skeleton of a bombed building for a background, London children enjoy a rocker on the playground set up on a cleared bombed site in the East End. Open air playgrounds like this one have sprung up all over London in spots where Hitler's Luftwaffe dropped their bombs and inadvertently played a leading role in a slum clearance project. Mothercraft nurses, one of whom is shown here, supervise the activities of the children.

FOOD PROSPECTS

cots, plums, pears, peaches, watermelons and canteloupes were available for those seeking out-of-season products. Fruit juices, citrus fruits and nuts were generally plentiful. Apples from Australia lent zest to Ontario and Quebec menus and in British Columbia Alaska potatoes were imported for the first time.

Peanuts were scarce in northwestern Ontario, but were flooding the market in eastern Quebec because of high prices.

British Columbia's strawberries, raspberries, gooseberries and cherries reached Prairie points and eastward to Fort William, though suppliers were hindered by shortages in crates and hallocks caused by the B.C. lumber strike.

Strawberries were abundant in Ontario and Quebec as reasonable Ontario and Quebec at reasonable small fruits were ready for markets at the end of June.

Sugar met ration needs, though farmers claimed their allotment inadequate to prevent waste of wild and cultivated fruits.

Some claims were made that lack of sugar and sweeteners for bakers, confectioners, makers of baby formulas for feeders, jams and jellies, soft drinks, ice cream, chocolate milk and similar lines were curtailing production below demand. Jams and jellies, however, piled up on store shelves as consumers used their coupons for sugar to process their own.

Meet Requirements.

Toronto had plenty of meat and meat products while beef and pork were better distributed at Montreal, though pork was scarce. Spring lamb was generally more plentiful. Sausages were plentiful except for bologna and wieners in southwestern Ontario.

Live poultry marketings were on the increase and broilers and friers were appearing on many markets.

The major shortages were oils and fats and allied products, especially those requiring vegetable oil. Other hard-to-get products were rice and tapioca. Grain feeds were scarce in eastern Canada.

UNION PREPARES

Issues Another Blast.

The National Advisory Committee of the Steel Union at Hamilton yesterday set the strike for Monday at the latest, despite action of the Federal government in appointing a federal controller for the basic plants, and the Union's Canadian director, C. H. Millard, at Hamilton last night issued another blast against the Federal government's action in appointing a steel controller as a move by the government to aid the steel companies.

Millard said the order-in-council appointing a federal steel controller was "full of threats to the workers." He said it "contains the Fascist principle of forced labor" and violated principles of British justice by judging workers guilty until they have been proved innocent.

The union's strike announcement Friday had pointedly ignored the Federal Controller, F. B. Kilbourn, of Montreal, and the three deputies named for him in the Ottawa order-in-council Wednesday night. The union announcement was sent direct to company executives.

The order-in-council provides penalties of fines of $20 a day for employees refusing to carry out orders of the controller; a maximum fine of $5,000 or imprisonment for five years—or both—for interference with the controller or his deputies, and a maximum of $500 fine or six months imprisonment or both for interference with an employee or counselling to violate the order.

Never Discussed in House.

Millard declared: "The order establishing the controllership was never discussed in parliament nor has it been approved by parliament. Yet that same parliament has been studying the steel workers' case because some weeks ago we placed our program before every member of parliament and most of them are on record as being in favor of our minimum demands."

The union said that at Sydney and the Sault the steel companies have concluded arrangements with union locals for protection of essential equipment during the strike, but the Steel Company of Canada at Hamilton so far refused to enter into a similar arrangement with the local union. It added: "We cannot, until they are willing to make suitable arrangements, assume any responsibility for maintenance of essential operations or essential equipment in the mill."

Gen. Mihailovic And Ten Others Sentenced to Die

Yugoslav Military Court Imprisons 13 Defendants

Belgrade, July 15 (CP)—Gen. Draja Mihailovic, former Chetnik leader, and 10 of his 23 co-defendants were convicted today by a Yugoslav military court on charges of collaborating with the Germans and were sentenced to die before firing squads.

Prison sentences ranging downward to 18 months were imposed on the remaining defendants.

hailovic were:

Redoslav Rade Radich, 56-year-old former commander of the Bratislav Chetnik unit.

Mils Glisch, 36-year-old Chetnik leader.

Oskar Pavlovich, 54, former Zagreb police chief.

Dragi Yovanivoch, 44, former Belgrade police chief.

Tanasje-Tasa Dinich, 55, former Minister of the Interior in the Puppet government of Milan Nedic, who told the court: "I don't want to live after the crimes I [illegible]."

Velibor Yonich, 54, Minister of [illegible] Nedic government.

Djuro Dokich, 72, former Commerce Minister accused of conspiring for forced shipment of workers into Germany.

Mladen Zujeich, 51, former Chetnik commander believed to be in Paris and sentenced in absentia.

Among those receiving prison sentences was Konstantin Fotich, former Yugoslav Ambassador to the United States, who was sentenced in absentia to 20 years.

The crowd cheered when the verdict was announced against Mihailovic, who took the decision with outward calm.

Strike at Implement Factory Postponed

Toronto, July 15 — (CP) — A strike scheduled by the United Automobile workers (C.I.O.) for the Toronto plant of Massey-Harris Tuesday night has been postponed, it was made known last night by both company and union officials.

James S. Duncan, president of the company, said last night in a statement on the decision that the company was informed a mass meeting of union members employed in its plant had accepted a settlement formula proposed by a government-appointed commissioner, L. W. Brockington, subject to the approval of the U.A.W. National Wage Committee.

Mr. Brockington's recommendations, previously accepted by the company, called for a wage increase of 10 cents an hour, a reduction in the work week from 48 to 45 hours and two weeks holidays with pay after five years service. The union had originally demanded $2 a day increase and a 40-hour week.

It was reported in union circles that the National Wage Committee may defer action on the mass meeting's decision, pending settlement of the current steel strike because it may have a bearing on the 10-cent settlement formula. The steel union has rejected a 10-cent increase.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, July 15 (CP)—Synopsis: Cool dry air from the polar regions drove rapidly southeastward Sunday across Ontario reaching the southernmost regions about midnight. A band of showers precedes its leading edge, but in the cool air rapid clearing occurred. Generally clear skies now prevail over the eastern half of Canada with the shower band well south of Lakes Erie, Ontario and Michigan. Temperatures in this cool air Monday are expected to range from the middle and low seventies in Southern Ontario to the middle sixties in Northern Ontario or about ten degrees below normal. This air is expected to become moderated by Tuesday with gradually warming temperatures.

$3,750,000,000 Loan to Britain Passes Congress

By FRANCIS M. LE MAY

Washington, July 15 (AP)—Russia probably will have to wait until next year at least for a loan even a fraction of the size of the $3,750,000,000 credit congress approved Saturday for Britain.

The Kremlin reportedly is interested in borrowing about $1,000,000,000 from this country. Any such loan would have to come through the export-import bank, unlike the one from the U.S. treasury to Britain which late Saturday won a 219 to 155 house vote of approval, following Senate clearance previously.

Only President Truman's signature is needed before London can start drawing on the money, in return for which Britain has promised to work for freer world trade. The loan is to be repaid by the year 2001. Some officials believe the first money will be advanced this week.

Because of the large size of the British loan, its expected effect in improving worldwide trade and prosperity, as well as the close wartime alliance between this country and Britain, the loan was arranged through special legislation.

Russia figured prominently in the British loan debate. Proponents argued that the credit would establish Britain as a bulwark against the spread of Communism.

Speaker Sam Rayburn (Dem.-Tex.) appealed personally for ratification of the loan, lest "England and western Europe be pushed into an ideology I despise."

Representative Jesse Wolcott (Rep.-Mich.), who led Republican support of the British loan, told newspapermen today "it would be most unfortunate" if the administration asked for an increase in funds at this time for the export-import bank, a government agency with considerably less than the $1,000,000,000 that Russia is said to want in its till.

"Congress would treat such a proposal as if it were voting on a direct loan to Russia," representative Wolcott said. "All the arguments used for the British loan—that it would prevent a spread of Communism—would be used against a Russian loan. I doubt if an increase in export-import funds could get through Congress.

Manpower Shortage Looms in U. S., Pinch Growing Out of Three Factors

By STERLING F. GREEN

Washington, July 15 — (AP)—A United States manpower shortage by fall is looming larger in the eyes of some government economists, say officials of the civilian production administration.

The census bureau found the civilian working force had risen to 56,740,000 in June, approaching the "60,000,000 jobs" level which Commerce Secretary Wallace calls "full employment."

C.P.A. officials interviewed said the manpower pinch might be felt as early as October or November, growing out of three factors:

1. Demands for perhaps 1,000,000 men in constructing and building materials;
2. Sizeable expansion in the retail trades and services;
3. Continued but smaller new hiring in factories.

Throughout the government, officials voice surprise over the rate at which private industry has absorbed discharged war veterans—almost 10,000,000 in the last 10 months, U.S.E.S. says. Five out of every six servicemen released up to June were at work or in school.

Government officials are wary about predictions, in view of the celebrated error of the old war manpower commission in predicting 8,000,000 unemployed in the United States this spring.

The census, however, is that housing construction will run into serious manpower troubles as the homes-for-veterans drive gets into full swing; that the lower-paid industries like textile mills and brickyards will encounter a recurrence of their wartime difficulties, and that "unpopular" occupations like foundry work and the needle trades will have difficulty recruiting workers.

The census bureau estimates present unemployment in the United States at 2,560,000. C.P.A. officials say this is just about the irreducible number "between jobs," resting or otherwise out of the labor market temporarily.

EXTENSIVE DOCK AREA AT PICTOU RUINED BY FIRE

Damage Estimated At One to Two Million Dollars; New Pier Origin of Fire

Pictou, N.S., July 15 (CP)—The dock area of this town, a mass of charred timber, lay in smouldering ruin today after firefighters fought for hours to gain control of a disastrous fire which wiped out sheds and wharves for a quarter of a mile along the waterfront last night.

Damage was estimated at between $1,000,000 and $2,000,000 as flames which reached as high as 200 feet swept through a double wharf, two freight sheds and two piers.

Several small explosions punctuated the black, smoke-laden air during the blaze. A number of ships at anchor were threatened and while firemen fought the flames they were moved to safety, although some of the larger ships were damaged.

The fire exactly a costly toll when it destroyed canned lobsters worth about $75,000. During the early morning, the cans could be heard popping like machine gun fire.

Four persons, two of them firemen, were reported injured or overcome by smoke and were treated in hospital. None of the injuries were known to be serious.

The fire is believed to have started in a new pier built before the war at a cost of $250,000. It quickly spread to the freight sheds and other piers but was checked before it reached the Ferguson shipyards. However, the company suffered heavy losses in destruction of machinery, cranes, and welding equipment on the wharves.

The Canadian National Railways freight sheds were destroyed as were five or six freight cars while about ten cars of lumber were lost.

For a while there was imminent danger to the whole town as flames ate precariously near gas tanks in the shipyards.

Brockville Honors 84 War Dead And 2,000 Personnel

Brockville, July 15 —(CP)—This town of 12,000 today paid homage to her 85 war dead and her 2,000 service personnel in a special "Warriors Day" program. The civic holiday was highlighted by the presentation of illuminated scrolls of honor to next-of-kin by Maj. Gen. C. B. Price, Dominion president of the Canadian Legion and similar scrolls to returned servicemen and women.

A welcome home was extended by Mayor N. S. Cuthbertson and a reception was tendered the veterans at the armouries later.

Baseball games, river regattas, street dancing and fireworks completed the program.

Spectacular Effects Expected From Second Atomic Bomb

They expect the lagoon bottom to be left dry for several seconds, before the waters rush back.

Throwing 5,000,000 to 15,000,000 tons of water in solid spray as high as 25,000 feet;

Creating an enormous bubble growing at a fantastic rate which, upon bursting, will form a tremendous waterspout and leave momentarily a great cavity in the water;

Crunching the hulls of some ships, overwhelming others with waves towering more than 100 feet which will race out from the base of the waterspout.

A group of task force scientists, whose forecasts on phenomena in the first tests proved highly accurate, made these predictions Saturday for the underwater blast at the urging of reporters, but explained that nothing was sure in this business.

The trigger that will set off the second atomb bomb blast will be tried out next Friday by exploding a simulated missile during the full-scale rehearsal.

The precise depth from which the bomb will be detonated has not been disclosed. The unofficial guess is that the depth will not greatly exceed 18 feet.

BRITISH ZONE IN GERMANY COSTLY TO U. K. TAXPAYERS

Britain Practically Forced to Pay 'Reparations' to Vanquished Enemy

The following is the second in a series of stories on the present situation in Germany by Ross Munro, who accompanied Imperial Press Conference delegates on a recent tour of Europe.

By ROSS MUNRO

Berlin, July 15 (CP Cable) — One of the weirdest anomalies in Germany is the economic burden Britain is carrying in her zone of occupation. She is practically being forced to pay "reparations" to a vanquished enemy.

Of £80,000,000 ($320,000,000) annually which it is costing British taxpayers to keep the British zone running £10,000,000 go to the cost of occupation and £70,000,000 to imports from Canada, Britain and the United States.

I received an insight into this problem with the Empire Press Union and I can't see a solution for a considerable period.

It is explained here that there are two possible remedies. The first is to pool the resources of the four zones, treating Germany as an economic unit as intended under the Potsdam agreement, which has failed in this objective.

Russia among the four occupying powers appears most responsible for the Potsdam breakdown.

Unable to Get Goods

As a result, the industrial British zone is unable to get goods, particularly foodstuffs, from the agricultural Russian zone. In normal times the British zone is largely fed from Eastern Germany but now Britain herself has to pump grain and other food into the zone to avert disaster among Germans, a condition fraught with possible repercussions across Europe.

This is the background for Foreign Secretary Bevins' efforts in Paris to have Germany treated as an economic whole.

The second remedy would be for the British zone to keep a larger proportion of Ruhr district coal for industrial purposes. Ruhr production now is only 40 per cent of normal pre-war output and large amounts are going to other countries. France, for instance, makes heavy claims on coal for her own industrial recovery. If German factories in the British zone could get more fuel production could be increased and goods produced could be used to pay for food which Britain is importing at her own expense.

The coal tangle is the biggest single headache in the British zone, informants say. British authorities also are said to feel the agreed level of industry in Germany is on the low side. Before long a firm stand will have to be taken. Either Germany must be run as one unit or the industry level in the British zone must be increased.

Masked Bandits Follow and Rob Man of About $8,000

Windsor, July 15 CP)— Held up Saturday night by masked bandits in the driveway of his suburban Sandwich East home, Wilfred Adams was robbed of approximately $8,000 in cash and cheques. Polise said the bandits followed Adams home from downtown Windsor in a stolen car.

IMPORTS TO EASE AUSTERE LIVING FOR BRITONS

U. S. Loan Will Provide Machinery, Gasoline and More Food

London, July 15 (CP) — The British cabinet was summoned today to approve a new import program made possible by a $3,750,000,000 loan from the United States.

Following the meeting Chancellor of the Exchequer Hugh Dalton was expected to go before the House of Commons to report on the plan, which authoritative informants said would give high priority to machinery and machine tools as well as newsprint to increase the size of Britain's daily papers, now limited to four pages.

The program also is expected to provide for new gasoline imports which may end rationing by Christmas, these informants said.

It was anticipated, however, that Mr. Dalton would warn the Commons Britons cannot expect overnight improvement in their austere standard of living. Although more food will be imported, the general situation is not expected to improve markedly before autumn.

While Britain can draw on her new dollar reservoir up to the limit, financial circles expressed belief the government would proceed slowly to avoid buying while prices were high.

Although there appeared general relief over approval of the United States loan, there was no evidence of jubilation. In a statement Saturday night welcoming the loan, Mr. Dalton took the position that it is a business proposition that will benefit the United States as much as Britain—a view generally echoed by the British press.

"I take the approval of the loan as a sign that our American friends want to work with us just as much as we want to work with them," Mr. Dalton said.

Editorial comment, while generally warm, included some hint of misgiving. This was reflected by The Times which said this morning:

"There is .. a danger which it would be foolish to ignore that popular feeling in United States will insist upon strict application of the conditions of the loan as they are generally interpreted ...

"The lessons to be derived from the experience of the last 10 or 11 months underline the fact so evident from the outset, that the power to loose or bind in freer trade arrangements projected for a more expansive future will rest finally with the United States."

Concedes Aleman's Victory

Mexico City, July 15 (AP) — Ezequiel Padilla, Mexican Democratic Party Presidential candidate in last Sunday's general elections, last night conceded victory to Miguel Aleman, but charged that the institutional revolutionary party candidate had been "imposed" upon the people in one of the nation's "most cynical frauds." On the basis of official returns Saturday from 56 of 148 congressional districts Aleman was holding a three-to-one lead over Padilla.

BRITAIN ACCUSED OF HANGING UP 'VELVET CURTAIN'

Pravda Writer Says Events in Middle And Far East Are Kept Hidden

Moscow, July 15 (AP).— The Communist organ Pravda said today in an article by Boris Izakoff that while British circles have been talking about a Russian "iron curtain" in Eastern Europe, Britain has hung up a "velvet curtain" in the Pacific and Middle East.

The article which invites Pravda's readers to lift the "velvet curtain" and look behind it stated:

"Curious details are outlined from time to time behind the folds of the velvet curtain, which divides Indonesia from the outside world." It added that in Indonesia a year after the war there is "occurring war activity on a big scale of which we read daily in the newspapers" and that more than five months after Foreign Secretary Bevin's speech before the United Nations Security Council "war in Indonesia is unceasing day after day."

Behind this same "velvet curtain," the article continued, a British government mission went to India with a plan of treating all possible questions "except the most important—the evacuation of the English army from India."

Turning to Palestine the Pravda writer stated: "In reality there is happening in Palestine something quite close to war operations. All that is there being done is justified in London by citing a misunderstanding between Jews and Arabs. Convenient justification!"

Pravda said that Egyptian efforts to get the British army out of Egypt were useless and that foreign troops were still in Syria and Lebanon.

It said that Greece, sole Balkan country on the other side of the "velvet curtain," knows "neither peace nor order." Despite the fact that a promise was made to evacuate British forces after the elections, "English forces are still not leaving," Pravda said.

"The pictures would not be complete if it did not include what is happening behind the velvet curtain in the English occupation zone of Germany."

"The Soviet press has already pointed out that an appreciable part of the German armed forces are still not demobilized in the English zone."

Pravda placed the number of these forces at 147,672.

Hughes Still Remains In Critical Condition

Los Angeles, July 15 — (AP)—His temperature and pulse still above normal, Howard Hughes remained in critical condition today in Good Samaritan Hospital, where the famous plane builder was taken a week ago yesterday after crashing his experimental photographic plane.

A bulletin issued by Hughes' physicians gave his temperature as 101½ and said his pulse was running between 120 and 140. Breathing continued painful and laborious, but Hughes had just ended three hours of restful sleep, the bulletin said.

Last night Dr. Verne Mason said he was optimistic over Hughes' chances for complete recovery.

War's End Saw 135 Terror Weapons Under Development by Nazi Scientists

By EDWARD E. BOMAR

Washington, July 15 (AP)—Hitler's scientists were at work on a supersonic bomber designed to bombard New York, the United States Army Air Force disclosed today—one item on a terror list of 135 secret weapons they were striving to perfect or improve at the war's end.

Col. D. L. Putt, deputy chief of the Air Material Command's technical intelligence division, said the bomber was expected to reach 154 miles above the earth. It was never finished, but Col. Putt expressed belief that "time was the only obstacle" to its completion.

"The Germans hoped to destroy any city on earth with a fleet of 100 of these bombers within the space of a few days' operations," he said.

Col. Putt drafted the official report on the Nazis' developments of guided missiles and other ultra-modern weapons.

One giant long-range winged rocket, which was in design stage, was to carry smaller rockets. These were to take off on their own at a specific point, attain speeds up to 5,800 miles an hour, and finish their trajectories in a long glide. Range of this weapon was calculated at 3,000 miles, sufficient to span the Atlantic.

Used Every Method

Other weapons, listed in a resume of Col. Putt's report published by the official AAF Review, included rockets with which the Nazis hoped to break up the Allied bomber formations which leveled German cities.

More Than 2,000 Remain at Work In Hamilton Mill

Plane Service is Established Into Plant, Says Official

By TIM DICKSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Hamilton, Ont., July 15 (CP)—The Steel Company of Canada announced today that more than 2,000 of its working force of 4,800 men are at work insits plant where the United Steelworkers of America (C.I.O.) called a strike to start at 7 a.m.

This announcement came shortly after a company official said that a plane service has been established into the plant, using a landing strip on company property. The company spokesman declined to elaborate but a union official said "there is a tiger moth hovering over the property but they won't take out many ingots with that."

Picketing of the vast Stelco works began at noon yesterday. The pickets remained on duty during 84-degree heat in the afternoon, an evening rain and through the chilly dawn. They were still at their posts when the 7 a.m. deadline passed for the general strike here, at Algoma Steel at Sault Ste. Marie and at Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation at Sydney, N.S.

The pickets turned back office workers and company executives and H. G. Hilton, Stelco president, said in a statement: "That staff of our general office was illegally stopped from entering the premises this morning by union pickets. In order to avoid possible injury to our staff, we have told them to remain at home pending the re-establishment of law and order."

The company's production statement was in the form of a telegram from Mr. Hilton to F. B. Kilbourn of Montreal, named last Wednesday as controllers of the three basic steel plants when they were taken over by the government in a fruitless effort to prevent the walkout.

Company Statement

The telegram said:

"Over 2,000 men in Hamilton works at present time with less than a score leaving this morning at union deadline. Coke production practically normal, one blast furnace operating, number two open hearth plant comprising nine largest furnaces out of a total of 13 as well as the large electric furnace operating.

"Bloom and billet mills operated as scheduled last night and operating this morning. Bar mill and rod mills operating and expect to operate plate plant this afternoon.

"Have been notified that pickets have illegally and forcibly restrained mail car, telephone service car and general office staff from entering company property. Have you any further instructors or advice at this time?"

The picket lines were largest at the main works of the company and smaller lines marched at the smaller Ontario and Canada works. There were some women on the lines.

Smoke poured from six big stacks on the property and several others were idle. A company spokesman said this was of no significance because normally it was common to see several stacks not in use, depending on the process being carried out.

Will Continue Production

R. A. Gillies, manager of the Hamilton plant, said in a statement that at 7:30 a.m., "half an hour after the union deadline and at the change of shift, the Hamilton works of this company was producing steel at the same rate as last shift and will continue production."

"The night passed without incident," the statement added, "and at the union deadline not more than 25 men had left the plant."

Company officials said they expected to ascertain the actual number of men in the plant later today.

By 8 a.m. the number of picketers had increased to about 150, including a sprinkling of women.

The line moved in a long oval around the plant's main gate with a picket captain in the centre.

One or two city policemen were on hand directing traffic.

The pickets, parading two-deep in a circle before the plant entrance, barred the way to office workers and executives.

A car carrying mail for the plan turned back from the picket line after considerable hesitation.

The union in proceeding with its strike plans ignored the appointment by the Ottawa government of F. D. Kilbourn of Montreal as federal controller of the steel industry. The union also took no apparent notice of warnings by the controller that anyone going on strike would be subject to a fine of $20 a day, and that anyone persuading steel workers to strike was liable to a penalty of $500.

Controller's Instructions Issued

The steel controller yesterday instructed H. G. Hilton, President of the Steel Company of Canada, to take all steps to maintain maximum production and safeguard equipment in the Hamilton works. The company previously announced that at least 1,400 men had indicated willingness to remain in the plant and work during the strike.

A mass meeting of union employees of the Hamilton plant yesterday morning voted unanimously in favor of starting picketing immediately. C. H. Millard, Canadian director of the Steel Union, told the gathering that a last-minute "unofficial" wage proposal of an extra two cents had been rejected.

The proposal was said to be in addition to earlier offers by 10 cents hourly increase and the granting of the Rand formula of union security in all the plants.

The union demands a minimum weekly wage of $33.60 for a 40-hour week, estimated to mean an increase of 19 1-2 cents an hour

SEEING EYE DOG A.W.L.

The dog, Buddy, was found at the weekend after being missing since Friday. But it wasn't long until the part collie mongrel vanished again.

Britain to Increase Bread Ration For Children

London, July 15—(Reuters)—Food Minister Strachey announced today that Britain's bread rationing allowance will be increased to allow an extra ounce a week for all children up to 18 years.

Under the ration scale effective next Sunday, adults are to receive a basic ration of nine ounces a week. The ration for children is scaled down from that according to age.

Mr. Stachey said the increase for children will reduce the estimated saving under rationing to seven per cent. Previously he estimated the saving would be 10 per cent.

RADIO USERS ASKED TO REDUCE VOLUME

That the family radio is a splendid source of entertainment when in its rightful place and with closed doors and windows, is well appreciated by officers at the local police station, but constables are beginning to suspect a radio can also be a source of annoyance to close neighbors.

Two and three times a week residents in various parts of the city complain to police headquarters of their neighbor's radio playing loudly at all hours of the day and night, making it almost impossible to get adequate rest.

Offending parties are warned by police officers that the radio is intended for personal enjoyment only and is not for disturbing neighbors who otherwise might be on more friendly terms.

WOMAN PEDESTRIAN STRUCK BY CAR

Mrs. Marjorie Harrington, R. R. 1 Belleville, Saturday evening received painful lacerations when struck by a car as she was walking with her husband and daughter on Highway No. 14, approximately one mile north of the city. Mrs. Harrington was rushed to hospital by Martin's ambulance.

According to police reports Mrs. Harrington was walking south on the east side of the highway when she was struck by a northbound car driven by William (Bert) Algar of Picton. It was not believed Mrs. Harrington sustained any broken bones as result of the accident.

MAJ.-GEN. G. POTTS INSPECTS ARMOURIES

Major-General G. Potts, commanding officer of the Central Army Command, and Mrs. Potts of Toronto, were in the city recently where General Potts conducted an inspection of the Armouries and the reserve army units here.

He also inspected the Church Street Armoury which houses a company of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. Lieut. Col. William Davern, commanding officer of the "Hasty Pees" was present at this inspection with members of his regiment.

Following the inspection General and Mrs. Potts were entertained at dinner by Lieut. Col. B. C. Sisler, commanding officer of the 9th Argyll Anti Tank Regiment, and Mrs. Sisler. Present at the function were Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Davern, and Major Milton Davidson, second-in-command of the Argyll Regiment, and Mrs. Davidson.

315,000 Housewives Petition the King to Repeal Bread Rationing

London, July 15 CP)—Petitions signed by 315,000 housewives beseeching the King to repeal bread rationing were submitted to the office of Food Minister John Strachey yesterday, one week before the latest British rationing scheme becomes effective. Borne by a thousand booing women who marched from a protest meeting in Trafalgar Square to the Home Office, one petition asked the King "to exercise your prerogative and dissolve parliament, as it no longer represents the will of the people of Britain concerning the rationing of food."

Moscow Broadcast Attacks Correspondent

London, July 15 (CP)— The Moscow radio yesterday accused Brooks Atkinson, former Moscow correspondent of the New York Times, of making "slanderous statements" about life in the Soviet Union and said "Soviet art workers are particularly outraged by Mr. Atkinson's assertion that the level of the theatre and music in the U.S.S.R. is low." Atkinson left the Soviet capital about a month ago and on his return wrote a series of articles summing up his impressions of life in Russia today.

Governor-General Holds Investiture At Vancouver, B.C.

Vancouver, July 15 — (CP) — Governor-General Alexander officiated at his first Vancouver investiture Saturday when he placed medals on 43 veterans. Among the most notable recipients was Maj.-Gen. B. M. Hoffmeister, who served under Viscount Alexander in Italy and was to have commanded Canada's Pacific forces. Gen. Hoffmeister is acting as the Governor-General's aide-de-camp while His Excellency is touring the Pacific.

2 War Veterans Take Over Lloyd Service Station

Former army captain George McIntosh and ex-company sergeant major Cecil Holway, both veterans of two wars today assumed the lesseeship of the service station formerly operated by John Lloyd on West Bridge Street. Mr. Lloyd who has been in the garage and service station field for many years is retiring from active work.

Mr. Asa Lloyd, son of Mr. Lloyd who has been assisting his father at the station, will remain with the new lessees for an indefinite period of time.

Mr. Lloyd operated one of the first gas stations in Belleville and has been on the location of the present station since 1928. Previous to that he operated another station on Dundas Street and Front Street.

Mr. Holway is severing his connections with the British-American Oil Company with which he has been associated for a lengthy period of time. A veteran of the first Great War, he enlisted in the early days of the second conflict and served nearly six years as a sergeant-major instructor with the Canadian Army in various training camps in Canada.

Captain McIntosh also fought in the First War and joined the 1939-45 struggle in 1940 with the rank of lieutenant in the Argyll Light Infantry. He served nearly five years with the forces and was stationed at Camp Borden and other Canadian military camps during his period of service.

Bancroft Boy Instantly Killed By Backing Truck

Six-year-old William Maxwell, son of a garage proprietor at Bancroft, was instantly killed early Saturday evening when he was struck by a truck driven by Russell Evans of that village.

According to police the little fellow was playing near the garage when the Evans truck drew up to a gasoline pump. When the vehicle was backing out the boy ran behind the truck out of view of the driver. He was caught under the wheels and died almost instantly.

Eyewitnesses to the accident were Mrs. Andrew McLauchlin and her daughter, Mrs. Don Rose, who stated that a man yelled "For Heaven's sake, drive ahead" at Evans, who apparently did not know the child was under the truck.

An inquest has been ordered by Coroner Dr. Lumb. Provincial Police Constable Stanley Polmateer investigated the accident.

36-Hour Hunt Ends With Man's Arrest

Port McNicoll, July 15—(CP)—Arrest yesterday of Joseph Bellfontaine, 26, of Wyevale, seven miles southwest of here, ended a 36-hour bush-country manhunt for the driver of an automobile which crashed into a ditch Friday night, killing eight-year-old Arlene Black and seriously injuring her five-year-old brother, Bobby and nine-year-old David Houden. The young farm laborer was arrested as he slept in the haymow of a farm. He was charged with dangerous driving and failure to remain at the scene of an accident.

Melrose Grain Club Plots Are Scored

On July 12th the Melrose Grain Club plots were scored by Harry W. Burns assistant Agricultural Representative, and a meeting of the club was held in the Township Hall, Melrose, Friday evening.

Cartier oats were sown by the club members this year and are proving very favorable to conditions in the district.

Mr. Burns distributed several bulletins of crop production and grain storage to the club members and suggested that they apply to the Statistics and Publication Branch of the Provincial Department of Agriculture and to the Director, Publicity and Extension Division of the Dominion Department of Agriculture for other farmers' bulletins.

A brief talk on grain judging followed after which the boys judged and gave their reasons on one class of seed oats and one of seed barley.

Hotelkeeper Hires Bus To Drive Kiddies To Bancroft Pool

Bancroft swimming pool is adding to its community service. Last weekend a University of Toronto student was engaged at $25 a week and expenses to supervise and carry on planned playground activities. Several thousand cubic feet of earth have been taken from behind the United Church to fill in the former swamp behind the pool which is now level and dry. Swings have been erected and a fine playground is now available. The latest news from the north is that beginning today, the hotelkeeper at Maynooth has hired Stapley's bus to run to Bancroft three mornings a week to carry children of Maynooth free to Bancroft for a swim.

INSERT GEN. MIHAILOVIC ..

The bushy-bearded Mihailovic, the first underground leader to attract wide attention during the war, was given 8½ hours to appeal for leniency from the presidium of the Yugoslav parliament. The deadline is 8 p.m. (3 p.m. E.D.T.)

Unconfirmed reports said the executions would be private, provided the sentences were upheld, and that the penalties would be exacted swiftly.

Mihailovic became minister of war to former King Peter's exiled government in London. American and British officers served at his mountain headquarters as liaison officers during the last years of the war.

2,000 Crates Celery Dumped in Montreal

Montreal, July 15—(CP)—The Montreal Herald said Saturday that 2,000 crates of "fresh-looking" celery had been thrown away on the city dump at Pointe St. Charles.

The newspaper said: "Informed sources pointed out that food dumping is an old practice, employed to control the market price." It added: "Other sources claim wholesale dealers are inclined to leave food in box cars to rot.

It is charged the dealers buy in huge quantities at very low prices and then restrict the supply by destroying food in order to maintain high prices."

Members of CP War Correspondents Assoc. Enjoy Weekend Outing Here

Douglas Amaron Was Elected President of the Group at Meeting

Douglas Amaron, acting Quebec superintendent of the Canadian Press, was elected president of The Canadian Press War Correspondents Association at a meeting held here over the weekend. He succeeds Ross Munro, first president.

Foster Barclay, Ottawa, was elected secretary, succeeding Alan Randal, Toronto. Ten of the 22 war correspondents who served were present at the meeting, second since the association was organized shortly before the European invasion.

The correspondents, who forgot the worries of typewriters and deadlines, relaxed in the fishing atmosphere of the bay off Weymark's Cabins a short distance east of the city, where they spent Saturday night. Alan Randal was the organizer of the party and made all the necessary arrangements.

The writers swam and fished and in general behaved like a jubilant bunch of boys let out from school. Gillis Purcell, general manager of The Canadian Press, who lost a leg in a bomb explosion overseas, was one "of the lives" of the party.

The correspondents were loud in their praises of the hospitality of Belleville and its residents and of the fine holiday spots to be encountered in this district.

Newly-elected president Doug. Amaron caught the largest fish, although it was strongly suspected by his association members, that it was captured in a manner other than with rod and line.

The correspondents left by automobile for Toronto early Sunday night.

SEARS REMANDED

Windsor, July 15 —(CP)— Ronald Sears, 18, charged with two murders and three attempted murders as Windsor's "slasher," appeared in police court today and was remanded to July 22.

Crown Attorney E. C. Awrey said he had an understanding with defence counsel that the preliminary hearing will proceed July 24.

Sears showed little sign of tension in contrast to his first appearance a week ago.

C.P.R. Industrial Commissioner Is Entertained

Members of the Belleville Industrial Commission, Saturday evening played hosts at dinner to Mr. H. R. F. Kingscott of London, England, Industrial Commissioner for Canadian Pacif Railway, who at present is touring Canada in the interests of English manufacturing firms wishing to establish branches in the Dominion.

Available industrial sites in Belleville were shown to the industrial commissioner on Saturday while in the evening he and his daughter, who is travelling with him, were entertained to dinner at the Country Club. After dinner the party was taken for cruise on the bay by Maurice Callaghan in his cabin cruiser, giving the visitor the opportunity of seeing the beauties of the Bay of Quinte.

On Sunday the visitors were driven by motor through Prince Edward county and after visiting at Picton were taken on through to Kingston where the party is visiting today.

Obituary

DR. WM. A. BAKER (Peterboro)

Peterboro, July 15 — (CP) — The death of Dr. William Albert Baker, 81, a medical practitioner here for the past 30 years, occurred at his home yesterday, after a brief illness.

Born at Baker Hill, near Stouffville, he graduated in medicine from the University of Toronto in 1890. He practised in Bobcaygeon and Lakefield before coming to Peterboro and, at one time was a salesman for a well-known pharmaceutical firm.

He is survived by his widow and a brother, Rev. J. J. Baker, 91, of Toronto.

MRS. SARAH F. SARGENT (St. Ola)

Mrs. Sarah Frances Sargent, wife of Mr. Morley P. Sargent, died at her home in St. Ola on Saturday, July 13th., after an illness of one week's duration.

Born in Madoc village the late Mrs. Sargent was in her 65th year and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Embury. Practically all her life was passed in St. Ola. She was a member of the United Church at St. Ola and for twenty-two years she was the treasurer of the Women's Association.

Surviving her are her husband; four daughters, Mrs. Leonard Hampson, Burnley, Ontario; Mrs. William Baker, St. Ola; Mrs. Lawrence Conley, R. R. 5, Trenton, and Miss Dorothy Sargent, at home; one brother, Philip Embury, St. Ola; one sister, Mrs. Josephine Welsh, St. Olo; one half brother, Henry Martin, Peterborough, and one half sister, Mrs. S. McKenzie, Winnipeg.

The funeral was held Monday afternoon to St. Ola United Church and interment took place at St. Ola Cemetery.

JEREMIAH G. SQUIER (Trenton)

Trenton, July 15 —(Special)— The funeral of Jeremiah G. Squier who died here on Wednesday, July 10th., took place from the Weaver Funeral Home on Friday afternoon, July 12th., to the Church of St. Peter-in-Chains where the Libera was sung by the Rev. Father J. A. Carley, who also said the committal prayers at the graveside in the Roman Catholic Cemetery.

The late Jeremiah (Jerry) G. Squier was born 48 years ago in Trenton and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Squier. All his life was passed here and he took a prominent part in the life of the community. For many years he was associated with his late father in the coal business. He was one of the original members of the Trenton Golf Club and took a keen interest in sports. In his younger days he was a good athlete. By many friends he was highly esteemed.

Surviving him are three sons, Hugh, Allan and Paul; two daughters, Elizabeth and Sheila; two sisters, Mrs. William Thompson, and Miss Harriet Squier, both of Toronto. His wife, the former Laura Bohan, died seven years ago.

STUART HOOEY (Trenton)

Trenton, July 15 —(Special)— On Sunday afternoon, July 14th., the funeral of Stuart Hooey, who died in the Belleville General Hospital on Thursday, July 11th., was held from the Weaver Funeral Home. The service there and at Mount Evergreen Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. J. D. Martin, minister of King Street United Church.

The bearers were Claude Graham, Grant Goodsell, Jesse Goodsell, Lee Mallory, Donald Fraser and Grant Rathbun.

The late Mr. Hooey was one of Trenton's oldest and highly esteemed residents. For a considerable time he was in business here as a merchant and real estate agent. For some years he also lived in Toronto and Cobourg. Many years ago he lived in Belleville.

Mr. Hooey had reached the advanced age of 90 years. He was born in Cobourg and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Hooey. In religion he was a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Surviving him are two sons, Douglas B. Hooey, Detroit, Mich., and Donald Hooey, Trenton; one daughter, Mrs. M. Murphy, Trenton; three sisters, Miss Annie Hooey, Miss Fannie Hooey and Miss Emily Hooey, all of Toronto; five grandchildren and two great grandchildren. A son, Barton Hooey, died in 1938.

Japs Prepared To Quit War Before A-Bomb

Washington, July 15—(AP)—A commission which studied bombing effects and other factors told President Truman today that Japan certainly would have surrendered before the end of 1945 even without the atomic bomb, Russia's entry into the war or any Allied invasion plans.

Asserting that air supremacy was "the major factor which determined the timing of Japan's surrender," the United States strategic bombing survey had this to say on other points, in a report to the President:

The atomic bomb — brought "further urgency and lubrication" to peacemaking machinery.

The invasion threat — "anticipated landing were even viewed by the military with hope that they would afford a means of inflicting casualties sufficiently high to improve their chances of a negotiated peace.

Some Japanese leaders recognized as early as the spring of 1944 that "Japan was facing ultimate defeat," said the report, made public by the White House.

"Based on a detailed investigation of all the facts and supported by the testimony of the surviving Japanese leaders involved, it is the Survey's opinion that certainly prior to 31 December, 1945, and in all probability prior to 1 November, 1945, Japan would have surrendered even if the atomic bomb had not been dropped, even if Russia had not entered the war, and even if no invasion had been planned or contemplated."

The report said that Emperor Hirohito and his chief political and naval advisers had decided as early as May, 1945, that the war must be ended on any terms.

Held for Shooting at Lights

Toronto, July 15 — (CP)—Eric Taylor, 28, of Toronto, was arrested early yesterday before he had a chance to send Sunnyside, Toronto's Lakeshore amusement centre, into complete darkness. Taylor is reported to have said he would shoot out all the lights and, police say, he drew a revolver and proceeded to shoot. He was arrested after the second shot.

Man Charged After Scuffle With Constable

The time-honored tradition of the R.C.M.P. to always "get their man" extends also to the personnel of the local city police department even when the odds are against the officer.

Late Saturday evening Constable Warring, one of the latest additions to the local police force, was making his rounds at the rear of Front Street premises when he came across three men showing signs of intoxication. The officer decided to take all three to the police station for questioning but en route to the station a scuffle ensued as one man jumped on the officer's shoulders while the other two disappeared with a bottle of liquor which had been confiscated.

The constable demonstrated his ability as an officer of the law and brought his man, Raymond Yearwood, to the station where he was booked on an L.C.A. count, and also for resisting an officer in the course of his duty.

Toronto Man Nearly Loses Chow Puppy

This is the story of a three-month old Chow pup which went missing temporarily—but not of his own volition.

It seems that a Toronto resident en route to his cottage in the Tweed district decided on Saturday to have lunch at a Front Street hotel and left his small Chow tied to his parked car. But the leash became loosened and a passing Crookston resident noticing the apparently unattached puppy decided to claim ownership.

But the deed was observed by a passerby and the licence number of the car used by the new "owner" was secured. Checking of the licence revealed the car was owned by a Crookston man and the irate Toronto holidayer prepared to make a certain call and get his dog.

But in the meantime residents in the South George Street district reported a Chow puppy running loose. The puppy was caught and turned over to the police who later determined it as belonging to the Toronto man. The answer, according to police, is that the Chow apparently escaped from the would-be owner's car before it was driven out of the city.

Missing Boy Found In Parked Car on Way To See His Brother

London, Ont., July 15 (CP) — Tired and hungry, 13-year-old Jimmy Hansbury of London, missing since Wednesday morning and object of a district wide search including dragging operations at the bottom of the Thames River, was found Saturday asleep in a parked car in the village of Katrine, 15 miles north of Huntsville. He first went to Sarnia, then north to Owen Sound, Barrie and t within 300 miles of his destination at Timmins, where he intended to visit Keith Hansbury, his older brother.

Army Officer Charges Assault By ITU Pickets

Vancouver, July 15 (CP)—Alex (Sandy) Bevis, Vice President of the Vancouver local of the International Typographical Union (AFL) said last night that a full investigation has been ordered into reports that an army lieutenant was assaulted by pickets in front of the Daily Province building Saturday.

In a statement earlier Lieut. Donald S. McLaughlin, who served as an intelligence officer with the Seaforths in Italy, stated that he was "manhandled in full view of the police."

"We are investigating the story," Mr. Bevis said, "and if the facts are right, we shall issue a full apology for the mistake."

McLauglin said he was in full dress uniform at the time, wearing campaign and battle ribbons and a wound stripe.

"About 6:30 p.m., I entered the building and started up the stairs to my office," he said. "The pickets ran after me, yelling 'scab' and dragged me down the stairs to the street."

"This was right in front of the cenotaph, in Victory Square—the monument to ' the men in uniform."

Strengthen Picket Line

Vancouver (CP) — Spokesmen for the International Typographical Union (AFL) announced last night that union picket lines around the strike-bound Vancouver Daily Province will be strengthened this morning and will get progressively stronger, to combat efforts of the Province "to publish through use of imported strike-breakers."

Union officials have estimated that upwards of a dozen non-I.T.U. printers are living in the building.

Harry Finch, I.T.U. Canadian representative who came here to direct the strike, said he recognized "three professional strike breakers who were engaged in strike-breaking in Winnipeg and Ottawa, crossing the picket line at the Province."

Says Propaganda Used to Regiment Japs 'to the Left'

Tokyo, July 15—(AP)—Allied headquarters, replying to Russian labor proposals for Japan, charged today that "certain elements" were using propaganda, terrorism and untruths in attempt to establish "regimentation of the Japanese masses under leadership of the Left."

The charges were contained in a statement issued by Gen- MacArthur's economic and scientific section, which includes the labor division. It said there was "practically nothing new" contained in the program proposed by Lt.-Gen. Kzma Derevyanko, Soviet member of the allied (advisory) council for Japan, in a press release July 10.

The six-page discussion of the Soviet program, said current or impending legislation covered every reform demanded by the Russians except "the provision that laborers on strike could seize and operate the properties involved.

"This measure of pre-emption and practical confiscation of property without due recompense violates the law of property rights providing for due conpensation for the seizure of property."

Two Americans 'Held as Hostages' Says Gen. Keating

Berlin, July, 15—(Reuters)—Maj.-Gen. Frank A. Keating, United States army commander in the Berlin district, said today that at least two of four American since early this month in Russian-occupied territory are being "held as hostages." he promised sensational disclosures on their return, expected this afternoon.

Gen. Keating said the Russians admitted holding Warrant Officer Samuel L. Harrison and his wife Helen, who were reported to have entered the Russian zone to buy a dog.

No trace has been found of the other two missing persons, both American army officers. Gen. Keating said the Russians had "stalled" and were holding the Americans as hostages against the return of "several Russian officers" whom they have charged the Americans are holding.

ROTARY CONTRIBUTES $2,502 TO FUND FOR CRIPPLED CHILDREN

The Rotary Club of Belleville, donated the sum of $2,502.84 to work in aid of crippled children during the fiscal year just ended, according to a financial statement issued today by the club treasurer.

Of this amount $1,822 was a donation to the Building Fund of the New Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto. The balance was payment of hospital accounts for children undergoing treatment.

CARRY FIVE MILLION WORDS A DAY

The eyes of Canadians turn Westward. The war with Japan, the rebirth of China, and the rising influence of the U.S.S.R. have brought new appreciation of Canada's Pacific border. Foreseeing post-war needs, Canadian Press sent William Stewart, veteran, of 11 years CP service and of the Sicily, Italy and West Front campaigns, to cover a beat which ranged from Sydney to Manila. Now he has taken on the bigger job of studying and reporting on Pacific post-war problems, so that Canadians may achieve better understanding of them.

A Lesson From Bikini

Noting that the majority of physicists who had expressed themselves on the subject declared months ago that the explosion of an atom bomb over a fleet of anchored ships of many naval types would be of no scientific value, New York Times points out that a board of scientists who issued a preliminary report of the blast in Bikini Lagoon on July 1st holds an entirely different opinion. The board says the new data gained will be of invaluable importance in engineering and scientific fields and that "the effort and expense involved by this test have been amply justified."

The Times writer expresses this opinion that "we must content ourselves with the stark fact that never before has a single explosive weapon been so devastating. It should be enough for those who expected wholesale destruction and who therefore are not deeply impressed by the first Bikini experiment, that within half a mile of the blast no ship escaped considerable damage."

Entirely new effects must be reckoned with in the destruction wrought by an atomic bomb as contrasted with that caused by high explosives. He says: "First of all there are the flash burns, which were fatal within the radius of half a mile in Japan. They cannot be ignored, in a future naval battle, even though the report says that men within or behind turrets and down in hulls would be protected. It is the radiological results that are entirely new. On these points we need more information than we have. Fortunately it is information that the 4,800 animals on the ships at Bikini will supply. Even at this early date the preliminary report of the scientific board states plainly that 'personnel within the ships would have been exposed to a lethal dosage of radiological effects.' This presages the worst. A naval battle waged with atomic bombs becomes more horrible the more we think of radiations with which naval commanders never had to deal. Therefore the writer says, "The argument for effective control of atomic energy gathers strength."

Man and the Heat

Man soon forgets. He has a long memory for pleasant things and for things that strike his fancy and imagination. But he soon forgets how he reacted to the weather even a day or two ago. The Continent of North America has just gone through a hot spell during the last week, not however equalling the torrid heat of a summer some years ago when temperatures rose to heights out of range of human memory. But last week's warmth and humidity at times were more than many could bear without grumbling and uttering wishes for a little more moderation in the heat.

July is a month that usually does bring heat in plenty. It is the month of which Francis Thompson speaks:

> "The summer looks out from her brazen tower
> Through the flashing bars of July."

So Sunday's turn in the afternoon brought a sense of relief, which mankind is always seeking from what becomes too severe, for a few days of intense heat find most people weakening under the strain.

The temperature fell with a dash of rain —all too little for the crops — and cooling and refreshing breezes blew.

Even as he yearns for the cooling breeze and the shade when the heat begins to wear him down, so a few days of coolness swing the pendulum to the other extreme and man asks for more warm spells.

That is man's way yet all in all the year round the Canadian climate can claim to be one of the best in the world for every Canadian does praise and enjoy it. He will laud the Canadian climate as the best in the world and find no one to dispute him.

London Hears Plea for Playgrounds

In London, England, an effort is being made to secure an increase in the number of children's playgrounds to divert children from dangerous ruins and it has been proposed that blitzed areas should be turned into playgrounds even if legislation is required. A Reuter's dispatch says that hundreds of bomb-blasted buildings are being reduced to rubble as many of them formed a deceptive hazard when masonry, weakened by bombs and exposure to weather, finally crumbled. Lack of materials prevented barricading while the buildings still stood.

1,453 New U.K. Factories Approved

The United Kingdom Government had given approval by the end of May for the erection in the United Kingdom of 1,453 new factories, estimated to provide work for 218,000 men and women. The program will cost £61,500,000.

These wide-ranging schemes have two parts. First, the establishment of new industries in the districts which most need them — development areas — formerly known as the depressed areas — Scotland, South Wales, Northeast England, West Cumberland and Lancashire. By May 31 approval had been given for the erection of 585 factories in these areas and work had been started on 262 of them, an increase of 82 over the total at the end of April. The total cost will be £31,000,000, of which the government is to spend about half on the building of factories for rent to private firms.

Another aspect of these plans is government approval for the erection of 868 new factories by private enterprise elsewhere. These schemes are estimated to cost nearly £31,500,000 and will provide work for more than 83,000 people.

In the development areas the factories now being set up will manufacture a variety of goods, including hosiery, clothing, radio equipment, plastics, coal-mining machinery, furniture and glass. Special attention is being given to toy-making for export now that the German toy industry is shattered.

Food Parcels for Britain

The British Minister of Agriculture tells the British people that the food situation in that country next winter "will not be as good as it was in the hardest (days) of the war." His statement gives sharp emphasis to the report on this recently from Mr. I. Norman Smith, of The Journal, who wrote from London urging Canadians to send parcels of food to their British friends to supplement their very meagre rations — and when in doubt to send cheese.

As Mr. Smith points out the British people have been rationed and restricted in their food since 1939 and victory, instead of improving conditions, actually has brought tighter control and more trying shortages. This comes about, we should remember, not because the British could not get more food but because, more than any others, they are deliberately and of policy going short themselves so that there will be more food available for the millions of the continent who have even less.

To some small extent we can make up to our British friends out of our comparative abundanc for their sacrifices. They have borne for years a greater strain than we can imagine, and with great cheerfulness. What we can do to relieve this distress is a very small thing for us, but a big thing for them.

—Ottawa Journal.

Just at His Prime

Why Field Marshal Montgomery should be talking about "the evening of my life" and looking around for same fairly useful occupation to fill we don't know. The man's a mere youngster yet, only 58. Some people are that way though. We know any number of softies who have retired, or intend to retire, at 65, just at their prime.

—L. H. R. in New York Times.

LOVE AND A VERY YOUNG POETESS

"Way, way down by the end of the sea
I love Jackie and he loves me."

Author known.

Who penned such loving lines as these
 I think you should be told.
They're by a little poetess just barely five years old.
A dainty miss called Ellendy this burning rhyme has sung.
Do maidens all discover love when they're so very young?

Do little girls discover boys when they are pasing five?
Do they begin so very soon with cunning to contrive
To meet some "Jackie" down the way and give their hearts to him?
Her mother smiles my question off and says: "It's just a whim!"

"Oho!" I say, "you women are a sweetheart-seeking lot.
I'll swear you start to think of love while still you're in the cot.
Now, who's this 'Jackie,' tell me, pray,
 and show him off to me,
Who waits for Ellen 'way, way down' beside the shining sea?"

Looking Ahead in Ottawa

By The Ottawa Staff of The Canadian Press

Ottawa, July 15 — (CP)—Possibility of further revisions in the wage order and possible early abolition of war labor boards has become the subject of some speculation which thus far lacks official support.

The wage order was recently revised to allow boards to grant "just and reasonable" increases and Labor Minister Mitchell has since indicated that wage increases in most instances up to 10 cents an hour may be permitted without seriously damaging the price ceiling.

Coupled with the recently adopted policy of appointing commissioners to deal with wage disputes, this has been interpreted in some quarters as reducing the discretionary power of war labor boards.

While the commissioners have no power to grant actual increases, any wage adjustment which they might propose would presumably not be contrary to government policy and the War Labor board before which the case came would merely confirm his finding.

Wheat deal: a government statement indicating whether or not the proposed long-term wheat contract with Britain will be proceeded with is expected on Parliament Hill in the near future.

There has been no official statement on the matter since Trade Minister MacKinnon told the Commons two weeks ago that negotiations being carried on here had been suspended while a number of important questions which had arisen were being referred to the Canadian and United Kingdom governments.

Later, it was learned that the main stumbling block was Canada's reluctance to commit herself to large-scale wheat shipments to one customer which might prevent her, in any future short crop year, from fulfilling contracts with other customers.

Conferences: Prime Minister Mackenzie King's statement Friday on reasons why a diplomatic rather than a parliamentary delegation is being taken to the Paris conference July 29 was interpreted by some political circles as indicating that the same procedure may not be followed when the time comes for settling peeace terms with Germany and Japan.

The stress Mr. King laid on the fact that the Paris conference should not be confused with the major peace conferences was taken as an indication that when these are held a parliamentary rather than a diplomatic delegation will be appointed to attend.

At the Paris conference, which would deal with the terms of peace for Italy and the German satellite states, Canada would not be seeking territory or reparations. The Dominion delegation would mainly try to see that the peace treaties are based on broad and "enduring principles of justice and equity."

In the case of Germany, and possibly in the case of Japan, Canada has war reparation claims. Because of these and other problems which would arise at the major conferences it was felt unlikely that the government would by-pass the major opposition parties in naming the delegation.

A few minutes after the vote was taken the union men threw previously-prepared picket signs into cars and marched in column of three about a mile to the Hamilton plant to set up picket lines.

Then about 1,000 union men accompanied by some women and children marched a half-a-mile past the main gates of the plant to an inner gate. There the union leaders used a truck's loudspeaker to appeal to men inside the plant to come out immediately. No one left the plant at that time. The unionists at the loudspeaker told the workers that they would be "welcomed as brothers in the fight" if they came out before the strike deadline. And they added that "anyone who stays in the plant will be classed as a 'scab' and you know what that means."

200 Men Come Out

About 200 men had been working on the 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. shift Sunday and came out in groups at 3 p.m. but in the confusion it was impossible to say whether all had left. The men were cheered and applauded by pickets as they passed through the gates.

The pickets said they had orders to bar everyone from the plant. A group of newspaper reporters watched pickets at the main gates turn back one man who reported for work at 3 p.m. The pickets grabbed the keys from the man's car, pushed the car back from the gate and then acted as if they were going to overturn it.

Last night, the pickets held a mass meeting. Mayor Sam Lawrence of Hamilton in an address described the order-in-council which appointed the federal controller as "an iniquitous piece of legislation." He said also that he considered the Hamilton police force was capable of handling the strike situation.

Virtual Standstill at Sault.

At Sault Ste. Marie the big mills of the Algoma Corporation had reached a virtual standstill by Sunday night. John Barker, president of the Sault Local 2251 of the U.S.W.A., said only "necessary maintenance crews" would be permitted to enter the plant and that no production would be allowed by the union.

The Sault plant's open hearths were completely blanked off Sunday and operators stopped in mills, billet mills and coke ovens.

At Sydney a gradual slowdown of operations in Dosco's big basic steel plant began Saturday night and was expected to reach a complete stop by Tuesday at the latest.

GEN. MIHAILOVIC

U.S. Fliers' Testimony Refused

The trial was marked by the refusal of the Yugoslav government to permit the testimony of United States fliers who were forced down in Yugoslavia during the war and who were ready to swear that they owed their lives to his men.

Mihailovic was sentenced in a courtroom crowded with spectators, many of whom had waited for hours to gain admittance. In contrast to the throng of peasants who had made up the spectators during the 28 days of actual trial, the crowd included hundreds of uniformed partisan fighters, high ranking Yugoslav officers and intellectuals.

The spectators were screened carefully at the gate before being admitted to the courtroom and were ordered to leave parcels and briefcases outside the building. The trees outside were decorated with brief cases and packages suspended from the benches.

The verdict against the Serbian born Chetnick leader and his fellow defendants climaxed a trial which began June 15. Mihailovic maintained stoutly throughout the proceedings that he was innocent of collaboration with the Nazis and that he had fought to drive them from the country.

The verdict was announced shortly after 8 a.m. (3 a.m. EDT) by the president of the military court, which had concluded hearing of testimony last week.

Sentencing was delayed for several hours however, under Yugoslav court procedure which required a full explanation of why the defendants were found guilty.

Career Officer

Mihailovic was a veteran career officer. When the Balkan war broke out in 1912 he was a 17-year-old student in a Belgrade military academy, but left school to join the Serbian army in the field.

He was promoted to second lieutenant for his services in that campaign and subsequently won high honors in the First Great War when he received almost all the military decorations the Serbian government could bestow, later becoming one of the youngest majors in the army.

When Germany invaded Yugoslavia in April, 1941, Mihailovic was serving as a regimental commander with the rank of colonel. With the flight of the government he retired into the mountain fastnesses of the country, where he gradually rallied a band of followers about him.

Raised to Role of Hero

He was soon recognized by exiled King Peter as the leader of the Yugoslav Resistance Movement, and reports of his exploits against the Germans raised him to the role of hero in Allied countries.

In 1943, however, Gen. Josip Brox, now premier Tito, entered the news as leader of a new Yugoslav resistance army, the Partisans. There were reports of skirmishes between Mihailovic's Chetniks and Tito's followers, and Tito violently accused Mihailovic of collaborating with the Germans.

In 1944, the British government switched to support of Tito as the leader of organized Yugoslav resistance, and the United States followed suit on the ground that supplies should be made available to the most effective fighter.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

Readers addressing letters to Dr. Brady will please include the word "Canada" on their return envelopes, as these letters have to be forwarded to Dr. Brady. And it is requested that readers use standard size envelopes that will hold a small booklet

CHECK LIST FOR VITAMINS AND MINERALS.

I estimate there is a fifty-fifty chance that your present complaint—if you are between six and sixty years old—is due primarily to nutritional deficiency. Lest you misunderstand what this means, I had better explain that it has nothing to do with the question of getting enough to eat. It refers to the shortage of certain elements which are essential for good nutrition, functional health and efficiency.

Here is a list of common foods that contain little or no vitamins or minerals. My class term for these items that have been robbed of any vitamins or minerals they grew up with is

CHEAT FOODS

Sugars, Corn Syrup, Honey, Most Candy, Soft Drinks, Coffee, Tea, Vegetable oils, Cooking and salad oils, Lard, Bacon Fat, Margarine (not doctored.)

Cornstarch, White rice, White cornmeal, Refined cereals (not doctored), Hominy, Tapioca, Macaroni, Spaghetti, Noodles, White flour, Chocolates (drink), Cocoa, Sweet rolls.

White bread (not doctored), Angel-food, Gelatin, Pickles, Vinegar, Candy bars, Pancakes, Cookies, Doughnuts, White crackers, Most cakes and Jelly.

For comparison here is a list of real foods, the kind that should be the main part of every meal and the foundation of every diet, whether you are well or ill, because these foods provide not only the calories for fuel and energy but also the vitamins and minerals which are indispensable for the utilization of the carbohydrate, fat and protein as well as the minerals essential for health and vite:

VITE FOODS

Grade A Raw Milk from Tuberculin-tested cows, Grade A Pasteurized milk, Certified Milk, Skim Milk, Sour Milk, Real Buttermilk, Cream, Butter, Wheat, Cottage cheese, any kind of cheese except processed goods (that is, mixtures containing only enough cheese to permit use of the name "cheese"). (Send stamped self-addressed envelope for pamphlet WHEAT TO EAT which explains why and how you should use wheat in the everyday family dietary.)

Fresh beef, pork or mutton.

Fresh fruit in season. Fruit, that is, not just fruit juice.

Eggs cooked as you like.

Salad—that is, a true salad, a dish composed principally of raw herbs and vegetables.

Potato or unpolished rice. Legumes green or dried.

Nuts and peanuts.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Small Loaves

For two of us in this family I cannot buy less than an entire loaf of bread, and half of it moulds before we can use it. There must be thousands like us. If we could buy small loaves it might mean a great saving.

(Mrs. R. A. E.)

Answer—An excellent suggestion. Besides saving bread it would benefit the Yankee Stomach too—the more crust on bread the better for digestion. Yankee Stomach is the name of a pamphlet available on written request (no clipping) if you inclose stamped self addressed envelope. It deals with the common stomach troubles of North America.

Blue Eyes

Argument in our family. Are the eyes of all babies blue when they are first born ? (A.N.S.)

Answer—Bearing in mind that all human eyes are brown, that is, the pigment that makes them appear "blue", "grey", "brown" or "black" according to the amount present, is always brown. All eyes are "blue" at birth, the permanent coloration becoming evident in from four to six weeks.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Which is correct, "Chile" or "Chili?"

The name of the elongated republic on the southern Pacific coast of South America is frequently but erroneously spelled "Chili" instead of "Chile" in English.

"Chili" is the Italian spelling of the word, while "Chile" is the correct spelling in Chilean, Spanish, Portuguese, German and English.

In many books printed a generation or more ago the name is spelled "Chili."

For instance, in "Astoria" (1836) Washington Irving wrote: "In Chili, Tucuman, and other parts, it (the introduction of the horse) has converted them, we are told, into Tartar-like tribes."

A half dozen or more derivations of "Chile" have been suggested, but it is believed to be from the Quicha Indian "Tchili," meaning "cold" or "snow" and alluding to the perpetual snow on many of the mountains in that region.

The Anglicanized pronunciation of the name is "CHILL-y," but the correct Chilean and Spanish pronunciation is "CHEE-lay."

"Chile" in "chile con carne" had a different origin.

There the word, spelled also "chili" and "chilli," is the Spanish name of the red pepper or fruit of the capsicum.

Incidentally confusion with this word may have given rise to "Chili" as the erroneous spelling of the name of the South American country.

"Con carne" is Spanish for "with flesh," and chile con carne is a Mexican dish consisting of red peppers and mincer meat, to which beans and cereals are sometimes added.

Some authorities say that chile con carne did not originate in Mexico but among the Mexicans in the southwestern part of the United States.

Marble King of the World

When He Isn't Staging Tournaments for Boys, Berry Pink Hunts New Uses for His Products — His Factory Produces 3,500,000 Marbles a Day, Including Some Hand Made

(By Frances Velie in Coronet Magazine)

Berry Pink, the American marble king, whose factory produces 3,500,000 marbles a day, owns an English marble authenticated as a thousand years old and another that was discovered in the tomb of King Tut. But some day he hopes to own a really old one, perhaps found in ancient Aztec mounds or in prehistoric caves.

For marbles is one of the oldest known games, probably the forerunner of all the ways man has found to play with a spherical shape — baseball, soccer, billards, tennis. While civilizations rose and fell, boys went right on playing marbles.

In today's atomic age, Berry Pink's mechanical rollers, which put the erstwhile marble centre in Oberstein, Germany, out of business, pour out a torrent of aggies, bloodies, taws and immies in the world's largest glass-marble factory, in Ottawa, Illinois. Only one kind is fashioned by hand—the precious "bull's eye"—made of agate by descendants of the family that for centuries practiced the craft in the Ruhr. Costing a dollar each to make, money can't buy them. For Pink never sells the limited output of 3,000 bull's eyes a year; he gives them to champions.

Like many another king in fact and fable, Berry Pink wanders incognito among his subjects, his only disguise a hat to hide his bald pate. At 44, he dreads being considered an elderly gentleman by the young blood of the pavements. Excitedly he kibitzes on the edge of a noisy marble game. "Don't hold it so low on the knuckle," he urges.

"Aw, what do you know about mibs, mister?" an annoyed youngster challenges.

This is the cue Pink has been waiting for. Knees to the dirt, he twirls a back spin, a dead spin, a right and left English, a hook and spin and "duck." In awe, bewildered kids watch the master, unaware that this is Pink the Great, who won the marbles medal at eight and has been top man ever since.

But champion Pink isn't playing for fun. Shrewdly he produces bags of marbles, asks the youngsters to choose the kind they like best. What they choose is what Pink manufactures that year. The kids are his stylists, pointing the way unerringly to sure-fire selling items. It was thus Pink learned that half the marbles he makes must be red.

Such shrewdness would undoubtedly earn Pink a fortune in marbles if he didn't spend so much in promoting the game through annual national championships, for which he supplies the marbles, 12,000 gold trophies, 18,000 gold, silver and bronze medals, and 150,000 sweater shields. Grand prize is a thousand dollars in cash, plus a four-year college scholarship. The total cost to Pink—$50,000.

Pink does not make money from the marbles you play with. His profits comes from the millions he sells for traffic reflectors, highway markers, roller bearings, signs and costume jewelry. Thus supported by industrial gadgets, Pink goes where his heart takes him—where the playing marbles roll.

In the South they roll in January as Pink's national contests get under way. By springtime, 4,500,000 boys from the 48 States and Canada, Mexico, the Philippines and Hawaii knuckle down to serious competition. At these contests Pink is in his element as impressario, fan, kibitzer and chief unofficial challenger.

Pink can spot a potential marbles champion by his shooting form. When an eight-year-old boy from Georgia lost his first three tournament games, Pink asked him: "Do the crowds put you off your game?"

"They don't bother me none, I reckon," answered the young Georgian. "But Mr. Pink, do I really have to wear shoes?"

Assured that he didn't, he doffed the shoes which he had been warned everyone wore in New York. Toes dug happily in the dirt, he won the rest of his games.

When Pink isn't conducting tournaments, he hunts for new ways to use marbles. His biggest strike was the discovery of the ancient game of Chinese checkers. This game and other uses dreamed up by Pink catapulted the 25,000,000-a-year output of 1929 to a world-wide flood of a billion in 1940.

Pink found his life's work at the age of eight, although he didn't know it until he passed 30. A neighborhood marbles champ in Passaic, New Jersey, he carried his medal for years, even through a 12-year hitch in the Navy. Unsuccessful in a number of ventures, Pink hit his stride when he met a glass manufacturer.

"Why not try the glass business?" the manufacturer asked.

Absently fingering his medal, Pink said impulsively: "I want to make marbles."

Immediately it was a deal. With $1,300 and two skilled glassworkers borrowed from the manufacturer, Pink went into the marbles business. Today, as head of a successful business, he can cope with labor problems, materials and taxes. But mention a girl in connection with marbles and he goes white.

Pink lives in dread that one day a girl-wonder will sail through the boys in a tournament and put the seal of "sissy" on the game. Twice in national tournaments girls have almost won. Had this happened, Pink feels, boys might have turned in disgust from the game.

"Marbles were never stopped by changes of dynasties or revolutions or cyclones," broods Pink. "But a girl—just one girl—might."

Incidence of Heart Disease

New York, July 15 —(AP)— Medicine has known for some time that heart disease occurs more frequently among men than women, and now a Brooklyn doctor tells why—the inner lining of heart arteries is about three times thicker at birth in the male than in the female. Dr. William Dock of Long Island College of Medicine, reports on findings he performed post-mortem-examinations on 12 infants of each sex.

Hitler's Mountain Retreat in Ruins

(By Robert W. Reed, in the Kansas City Star)

Symbolically, Berchtesgaden today impresses a visitor, more than any other spot in Germany, as epitomizing the ruin of Hitler's dream of world conquest. There, in the dust and rubble of the chalet where the Fuehrer received the world's great and near great and gave them the bad news, is the complete monument to man's folly.

High on top of the mountain rising immediately to the South of Berchtesgaden is the famed "eagle's nest",the castle that Hitler built as a retreat from worldly cares and—who knows?—as the last refuge of mad resistance. But the leader of Nazi Germany did not get the opportunity to led his fanatic, last-ditch followers into this "Southern redoubt" to fight it out in one last orgy of blood-letting.

The "eagle's nest" was an insane extravagance. Hitler himself never went there more than two or three times after it was completed. The only damage done to it has been at the hands of thousands of GIs and Veterans of other Allied armies, who have been carried up the 800-foot elevator shaft to carve their names on walls and to chip away souvenir relics. That damage, it can be said, is not inconsiderable, but it does not match what bombers did to the better known chalet far below.

Berchtesgaden is a beautiful spot, spectacular in its scenic environment. It is off in a little corner of Bavaria that juts into the side of Austria, and Austria, incidentally, would like to annex it. The village of Berchtesgaden lies in the valley below, stretching along the road from Salzburg to Munich and other Southern German cities. A couple of hundred feet above the town and immediately south of it, is what is left of Hitler's favorite spot for the brewing of his witch's cauldron of death, destruction and enslavement.

It was a community in itself, there on the steep hillside. There was a large military barracks for the picked SS. elite guards stationed there to guard the Fuehrer's precious person. A deep bunker, with steps leading down at least sixty feet was cut into the hill behind. From it tunnels led to separate houses built for the top Nazi lieutenants, such as Goebbels and Bohrmann. Down the hill and to the left was the house where Mussolini was billeted when he was a welcome visitor.

But it is now only glory that was. It was churned into wreckage by an Allied air raid April 25, 1945, in the dying moments of the Nazi empire. The great room in which Hitler held conference with his closest advisers aand received his favorite guests is nothing but a shell, although a roof still covers it. The big 22 by 15-foot window, overlooking the valley below, was blown out, but it is still an ideal spot for camera fans. The names and home towns of soldiers — Russian as well as American — are scrawled all over the walls, many of them with ribald comment added.

The motion picture projection equipment, which was one of Hitler's principal sources of entertainment, was put out of action by the bombing. On one side of the room a curtain rose at the pressing of a button from a recess below and the pictures were thrown on the screen from a built in projection room on the opposite side. From the gaping broad window frame, one can look out upon the village below and the beautiful mountains of the north. But, close-up, it is not a pretty picture. The bombs left huge craters on the hillside, twenty-eight of them could be counted from this spot, and tore out and twisted into ugly trunks a grove of trees on the right of the road leading down into the valley.

Driving back to Salzburg in the late afternoon, with the bright sun glinting on the mountain tops and throwing deep purple shadows into the little valleys, was like moving through a dream world, seemingly as distant from war's devastation as another planet. The peaceful villages, the vistas of beauty, appeared to belie the stark reality of Berchtesgaden and all that it has meant to a still suffering world. And yet, there it was.

Salzburg itself played an important part in the incredible Hitler drama. Here he had another estate, on which he erected a palace which resembles Sans Souci in some ways. Off to one side of the palace is the Kavalier Haus, where one group of editors and publishers was entertained and billeted by Major-General Harry J. Collins, commanding the 42nd. Division, principal element of the United States occupation forces in our Austrian zone and his staff. That evening, General Collins provided a delightful musical program for us in the huge salon of the Kavalier Haus. There was a 12 piece string orchestra, a Viennese girl violinist and two Italian singers, a tenor and baritone, who had magnificent voices. They were part of an army special services entertainment unit and General Collins said they had been picked up, half starved, as his troops moved into the area.

The Kavalier Haus was used by Hitler as a "staging area" fo visitors and would-be visitors t Berchtesgaden. Here they ha to pass the acid test before be ing admitted to the mountai sanctum. In the larger cast were held state dinners and re ceptions, staged in all the pom and panoply that the Nazis loved to exhibit.

Girl to Observe Tenth Anniversary in Iron Lung

By ENID NEMY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, July 15 (CP) —The idea of spending years in an iron lung would receive nightmare rating from the average person but when paralysis strikes, its victims discover that the life of the mind can give a large degree of compensation for the loss of physical activity.

Two girls who have found this out are patients in the King George Hospital here. Tall, blond Inez Woolam will observe her 10th anniversary in an iron lung this fall. Her companion, petite brunette Lena Barker has been in the hospital since August, 1941.

Together they have made completely new lives for themselves and say their outlook on a variety of subjects has changed radically since they have come to the hospital.

"We aren't despondent very often. It doesn't help any and it certainly doesn't get you anywhere .. and there's always some thing else to think about."

Religion now plays a more important role in their lives than it did formerly, they say.

"When you're well, you are up and doing things and you don't give it much thought. You usually only think of God when you go to church .. at least, that's the way we used to be. Now we have more time to think and we're far more tolerant of people and races and creeds."

They confess they aren't greatly interested in politics—but they always vote. They discuss the various party platforms beforehand but in the end "we always cancel each other's vote."

The girls have a large sun porch to themselves on the fourth floor of the hospital. They have been moved to other sections "but we always looked so woebegone that they transferred us back." They like looking at the trees and at the little bit of river that can be seen through the foliage and above all, they like the sun streaming in through the windows.

Their days now are spent out of the respirators but they are unable to sleep without them. Their food is cut up for them but aside from that, they eat by themselves.

There is always plenty to do. Both girls enjoy reading and listening to the radio, but their favorite pastime is talking. Like millions of other women, they have preferences in songs, radio, personalities and movie stars. Bing Crosby and Paul Robeson are tops on their list and Bette Davis is "marvellous in radio plays."

At the moment they are looking forward to their birthdays. Inez will be 32 on July 20 and Lena was 25 on June 20. Usually when their relatives and friends visit them, the hospital staff bakes a cake and serves a special lunch and there are flowers from well-wishers.

They are both proud of the fact that they get along so well together.

"We have an occasional argument but on the whole we rarely disagree. We've been together so long that we practically think the same now."

Case Histories

A. MARCH 9, 1946.

BARRIE, ONTARIO.

A butcher, removing meat from a bone, accidentally severed the femoral artery. As no First Aid attention was available the injured man was removed to hospital with a towel wrapped around the wound. On arrival at the Hospital he died.

This life could have been saved with elementary knowledge of First Aid by applying a simple tourniquet.

B. JANUARY 29, 1946.

DELAWARE, ONTARIO, Highway No. 2.

1. Man, age 30—concussion of the brain and broken nose.
2. Man, age 35—severe lacerations and severe leg injury. Later amputated.

Two St. John Ambulance Brigade arrived at the scene promptly and gave First Aid, which later was reported by the doctor as having unquestionably saved two lives.

Inquiries regarding classes for instruction in first-aid will receive courteous attention.

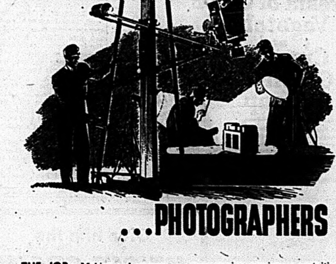
THE RCAF HAS OPENINGS FOR



...PHOTOGRAPHERS

THE JOB: Making and processing the many specialized photographs which the Air Force requires: aerial, colour, medical and clinical. Amateur as well as service and professional experience can count toward an immediate advancement in "trade grouping" and hence in pay. Training courses give valuable instruction in all branches of the trade. Candidates should normally possess junior matriculation or its technical-school equivalent. Previous trade experience is not essential.

There are openings also in many other ground trades.

THE PAY: Basic pay plus living allowances for non-commissioned ranks runs from $95 monthly for Aircraftman Class 2 to $188 for Warrant Officer Class 1; extra pay for trade proficiency and increased pay after three years in any rank; marriage allowance of $20 a month; free uniform clothing and medical and dental service.

THE PENSION: A lifetime income on discharge after 20 years' or more service; pensions or gratuities in the event of prior discharge on medical grounds, and pensions or gratuities to widows or children in the event of death while on service.

VETERANS' PREFERENCE: As among applicants, war veterans applying for reappointment will receive preference, and if accepted will be reappointed to the ranks they held at the time of their discharge, or to the nearest ranks which establishment permits; and their prior service will be a factor in promotion and pension.

TERMS OF SERVICE: Applicants without previous service must be over 18 and under 26. Good conduct, satisfactory medical category and educational qualifications will enable applicants to enlist in Regular Air Force for five years and re-engage thereafter for further five-year terms.

WHERE TO APPLY: Applications should be made to No. 1 Air Command, RCAF, Trenton, Ont.

WEDDINGS

DEACON—HUNTER

The Deacon-Hunter wedding which took place in Toronto on Saturday, July 13, is of interest to many Bellevillians, as both the bride's parents are well known here, her mother being the former Miss Hattie Pringle, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry Pringle of this city and her father, the Rev. Bruce Hunter, was at Albert College and also was in temporary charge of Bridge Street United Church some years ago. The following account appeared in the Globe and Mail:

Two widely known families were united in marriage at Westminster-Central United Church, Saturday, when Rev. J. Bruce Hunter, the pastor, officiated at the wedding of his daughter, Miss Margaret Furnival Hunter, to Mr. Frederick Coulter Deacon, son of Col. and Mrs. Frederick H. Deacon. Very Rev. Peter Bryce assisted the bride's father, and the wedding music was played by Mr. Edgar Goodaire. Mrs. Eldon Comfort was soloist.

Given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Angus Hunter, the bride was robed in petal white net over satin, made with moulded bodice, bouffant skirt falling into a full circular train. The deep yoke of her bodice was of heirloom lace embroidered in seed pearls and was outlined with fine pleated tulle which also edged the hemline of her skirt. Over a full-length tulle veil she wore a short heirloom lace veil crested with a chaplet of lilies-of-the-valley. Her cascade bouquet was of Johanna Hill roses. Her matron-of-honor Mrs. Angus Hunter, and bridesmaid, Miss Jane Harrison, were frocked alike on aqua crepe made with moulded bodices and slim slightly trained skirts. The low, portrait necklines of the dresses were finished with deep tiered bertha collars and they carried cascade bouquets of peach gladioli which matched their headdresses. The flower girl, Miss Jane Kinsey, was in peach crepe, made long and in style similar to that of the senior bridal attendants. She carried a colonial nosegay and her head chaplet was of aqua delphiniums.

Attending the bridegroom was his brother, Mr. Fraser Deacon, and the ushers were his brothers, Messrs. Kenneth, John, Allin, Donald, and Paul, also Dr. John Alley.

A reception followed in the church parlors, which were decorated with white gladioli, lilies and delphiniums—as was the church. Mrs. Hunter, mother of the bride, and Mrs. Deacon, mother of the bridegroom, received the guests, and later, Mr. Deacon and his bride left for a honeymoon trip, Mrs. Deacon going away in a navy and pink ensemble. They will reside in Mimico.

Among the out-of-town guests present were the following, all from Belleville: Miss Jessie B. Tuite, Mrs. Wilfred Holmes, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Ackerman, Mrs. W. H. Lattimer and Mrs. Robert Bogle.

BEAUTY ON THE SPRINGBOARD

INSLEY—TERRIS

A quiet wedding took place on July 12, 1946, at the rectory of Trinity Church, Shannonville, when the Rev. C. P. Heaven united in marriage Betty Marie, daughter of Mr. Theodore Terris and the late Mrs. Terris, of Truro, Nova Scotia, and William John, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. William Insley, Point Anne.

The bride was charming in brown gabardine suit with brown and white accessories with a corsage of Talisman roses. She was attended by Miss Lillian Insley, sister of the groom who wore a turquoise suit with brown accessories and corsage of pink roses. The groom was attended by Murney Green.

Following a short honeymoon in Toronto, the young couple will reside in Point Anne.

WESTLAKE—FOSTER

Pink and white peonies and orange blossoms made a pretty setting for the wedding in the United Church, Whitby, on Saturday afternoon, June 29th, of Thelma Marie Foster, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carman Foster, Whitby, and Jack Aubrey Westlake, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Westlake, of Belleville, Ontario. Rev. C. G. Park officiated. Mrs. Vernon Rowe played the wedding music and Mr. Douglas Ross sang "The Lord's Prayer," before the ceremony and "Because" during the signing of the register. The ushers were Russell and Jack Foster, brothers of the bride.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was very lovely in a gown of white brocaded velvarae marquisette with finger-tip veil of tulle illusion, caught to a Dutch cap headdress and wore a double string of pearls, the gift of the groom. She carried a cascade bouquet of deep pink roses and bouvardia. She was attended by her sister, Miss Dorothy Foster, as maid of honor, who wore blue printed organza with matching mitts and halo headdress. Her sister, Barbara Foster, was bridesmaid and wore pink printed Organza with matching mitts and halo headdress. Judith Anne Foster was junior bridesmaid in pale green printed organza with matching mitts and flower headdress. All carried nosegays of pink roses, carnations and baby's breath.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's home where the guests were received by her mother wearing a heavenly blue mesh gown, white and navy accessories and corsage of deep pink roses. She was assisted by the groom's mother, who wore a black crepe gown with turquoise trim, black accessories and corsage of yellow roses.

The house decorations were roses and pink and white peonies.

For a wedding trip to Niagara Falls and Buffalo returning via Ivy Lea Bridge, the bride wore a pink lace dress, white accessories and corsage of white carnations. Upon their return they will reside in Whitby.

Guests were present from Toronto, Oshawa, Port Hope and Belleville, also the bride's great-aunt from St. Petersburg, Florida.

McAVOY—ROACH

St. Mary's Church, Marysville, was the setting for the wedding of Mary Edna, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Roach, Marysville, and Dorian McAvoy, Read, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene McAvoy. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father O'Gorman, and acolytes were Patrick McAvoy and Charles Roach. Gerald Whelan sang "Ave Maria," during the ceremony.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father to the strains of the Bridal March from Lohengrin, played by Mrs. O'Connell. She wore a floor length dress of white satin with lace inserts, and full length sleeves ending in points over her wrists. Her floor length veil was caught to her head with orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of Talisman roses. Maid of honor was Miss Mildred Roach, sister of the bride, who wore a gown of pink net with matching headdress and a nosegay of summer flowers. The bride's other sister, Miss Helen Roach, was bridesmaid, dressed in blue net with matching headdress and a nosegay of summer flowers.

Mr. Jack McAvoy, cousin of the groom, was groomsman, while ushers were Mr. Dillon Sawyer and Mr. John Roach.

The wedding breakfast was held at the home of the bride's parents, for about forty guests. The bride's mother received wearing figured silk jersey with white accessories and a corsage of red roses, and was assisted by the groom's mother, who wore a turquoise dress with white accessories and a corsage of red roses. The table was centred with the wedding cake and decorated with flowers and streamers.

For the wedding trip to western points, the bride donned a lime green dressmaker suit. On their return, Mr. and Mrs. McAvoy will reside in Belleville.

SLOAN—IRWIN

A wedding of interest to Belleville readers took place in Ottawa on Saturday, July 13, at Southminster Church when the Rev. Frank H. Morgan, joined in marriage Margaret Campbell Irwin, of Ottawa, and David Alexander Sloan, of Vanvouver, B.C. The bride is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Addison Vandervoort, the former once deputy registrar of Hastings county.

The bride was attended by her cousin, the former Jane Irwin, of Washington, D. C., while the groom was attended by his brother.

Out-of-town guests present at the ceremony included Mrs. E. O. Keeler, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Vandervoort, and Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Johns, all of Belleville and Mrs. Dafoe (nee Sabra Bonisteel) of Chicago, Ill.

Scarce Materials Force Banishment Of Bridal Train

By KAY REX
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, July 15 (CP) — A shortage of fabrics has set the style for wedding gowns in Canada this season and thrifty designers decree that if the bride wears the traditional white satin she must forfeit her right to a bridal train.

A gown requires five yards of material and they claim that the more than two yards which usually goes into a train can quite easily be used in another dress.

Perhaps six out of ten Canadian brides who want to be married in satin within the next six months will have their wishes fulfilled, but in the United States, where designers are putting their all into trains, the number is less than one bride in ten.

"We had girls from Detroit, Buffalo, Chicago, Cleveland and as far south as Los Angeles coming to Canada in hopes of finding a wedding dress," said the bride counsel of one large Toronto department store.

Not only do American girls figure they have a better chance of finding what they want in Canada, but they have learned the prices generally are more reasonable.

A Canadian - made wedding gown costs from $19.95 to $250 and the average price is around $50.

U.S. Materials Costly.

In the United States the fact that available materials are too costly for the manufacturers to conform to ceiling prices on their cheaper ensembles has caused the medium-priced wedding dress to disappear. Now over there the minimum cost is $50 and the average, $150 retail.

Popular bridal gown fabrics have been satin, marquisette, chiffon and laces, with taffeta and chiffon most sought after for the bridesmaids' costumes.

Again the post-war splurge in formal weddings has become another reason for current shortage of materials.

"I've never seen anything like it," said one wholesale formal dress manufacturer. "Girls used to be satisfied with perhaps just one bridesmaid, maybe two, but nowadays they want four and even seven or eight."

Any bride-to-be who plans her wedding for the Fall should start right now thinking about her dress.

"We have to have our orders placed at least six weeks ahead of time," the manufacturer continued. "And even then we aren't sure we can fill them."

He scanned the barren walls of his stock room. "To think there actually was a day when we had dresses hanging there," he said. "Now we're lucky if in a month we can fill 35 out of 50 wedding-gown orders. And as for satin—well, we usually count on filling perhaps six out of 50."

Women's Activities

AIKINS' W.M.S.

The July meeting of Aikins' W.M.S. was held in the church. In the absence of the president, Mrs. E. Hubble, the 1st vice-president, Mrs. S. Westover was in charge.

There were 16 members present and 7 Mission Band and Baby Band members, some of the latter assisting with the program.

The program was presented under the leadership of Mrs. W. Bush. The worship service emphasized listening, as an important part of prayer and necessary to service. Following the worship service, "We Look at the W.M.S.", a prepared program, was carried out. This program gave an excellent idea of the W.M.S. organization, the work of the departments and the results in home and overseas missionary work. The members assisting Mrs. Bush in the program were Mesdames U. Perry, P. Hamilton, C. Smith, W. Bailey, W. Johnston, M. Jeffrey, S. Westover, S. Spafford, O. Pearson, H. Hamilton, C. Grills and L. Grills. Band members who helped were George Arthur Perry, Gordon Hamilton, Mary Lou Pearson, Doreen Pearson and Barbara Hamilton.

The pastor Rev. Mr. H. Hillis also aided with the presentation of the program. Mrs. Pearson advanced the cause of temperance by an excellent reading and a solo by Barbara Hamilton delighted everyone.

NUMBER OF FIRES DECREASES

Toronto, July 15 — (CP) — A sharp reduction in the number of fires for the first six months of 1946, as compared with the same period in 1945, was reported yesterday by W. J. Scott, Ontario Fire Marshal. The comparative figures are 8,516 for the first half of this year, and 9,227 for the first six months of 1945, a decrease of 711.

50 YEARS OF ROMANCE ENDS IN MARRIAGE

Chicago, July 13 — (AP) — A romance more than 50 years old blossomed into marriage yesterday as the former Mrs. Dorcas Ireland, 74, and John Wesley Cutler, 78, were married at the National Shrine of the Women's Christian Temperance Union. Cutler courted Mrs. Ireland when both were students at Drake University in Des Moines. After leaving school, both married and moved to different parts of the country. In the decades that followed, Mrs. Ireland was widowed and Cutler's wife also died.

BASEBALL RULES

FOUL TIP AND BUNT

A foul tip is a batted ball that goes directly to the catcher and is legally caught by him. Whether a foul tip is caught or not by the catcher, the base runners are not allowed to advance on the bases. If the third strike is a foul tip and is caught by the catcher, the batter is out, unless the ball hits the catcher or his clothing or equipment before the catch is made.

Any ball not swung at, but met by the bat is considered a bunt hit. If the attempt to bunt results in a foul hit, the batter is charged with a strike, except in the case where the foul bunt is on the batter's last strike. In the case of the latter the batter is out.

The moment a fielder touches a bunt in foul territory, whether it grazes his fingers or is firmly in his grasp, it becomes a foul ball.

New York, July 15 — (AP) — The real world tennis championship will be decided at Forest Hills in September . . . Look at this prospective lineup for the United States amateur championship: three American champions, Frankie Parker, the defending titleholder and ex-champions Ted Shroeder and Don McNeill, plus Jack Kramer and Bill Talbert for the home side; newly-crowned Wimbledon champ Harry Hopman and the youthful Bobby Barnes representing Australia, Tony Mottram, G. L. Paish and E. R. Avory from Britain; Jacques Van Den Eynde and Philippe Washer from Belgium; possibly the Yugoslavian Davis Cup team and, if the U.S. L.T.A. can get him, the Czech, Jaroslav Drobny. Pancho Segura will head a large Latin American delegation.

They Can't Hurt Us

Apparently the nickname "Dodgers" is sufficient excuse for odd happenings to a ball club, but the Newport News, Va., Dodgers couldn't dodge these troubles that struck within one week . . . The entire reserved section of the home park burned down, three leading players were benched with injuries, the trainer was bedded with a rash of boils, the groundkeeper broke his nose when a foul clipped him and the team dropped in the standings ... The last item is what hurt.

Bostons Willowy Williams Is Logical Heir to Throne Held Formerly by the Great Babe

Red Sox Slugger Hits Three Home Runs in Game Against Cleveland; Yanks Drop Farther Back; Cards Dump Brooks Twice

Whether the willowy star hits three home runs in one game, as he did yesterday against Cleveland, or strikes out with the bases loaded before a Yankee stadium sellout, he reeks with that vague substance called "color."

Williams' performance yesterday should help him gain a 1947 salary boost. His one-man show enabled Boston to stretch its lead to 11 games by sweeping a doubleheader from Cleveland 11-10 and 6-4. Ted drove in eight runs with three homers and a single in the opener and doubled down the right field line in the second tilt.

The Yanks fell two games farther back in second place when they bowed twice to Detroit. After Hal Newhouser hung up his 17th victory on a three-hit 5-1 score, Stubby Overmire earned his first decision of the season 6-3, before a Yankee stadium throng of 61,940 fans.

While the Red Sox were tearing apart the American League "race", St. Louis was applying the tightener to the National chase by dumping Brooklyn twice. The double loss reduced the Dodgers' margin to 8 1-2 games with two more games to play in St. Louis during the current series.

Enos (Country) Slaughter was the big gun in the opener, driving in four runs with a pair of singles and a homer in the 5-3 triumph. Stan Musial's round-tripper on the first pitch in the 12th broke up the nightcap with a 2-1 Cardinal win for Murray Dickson over Vic Lombardi.

Chicago also closed in on the Durocher gang knocking over New York 7-4 although Hank Borowy, once again, was unable to finish what he had started. A blister on his pitching hand forced Fordham Hank to give way to Emil Kush when the Giants rallied in the ninth.

Boston clung to a first division berth by one percentage point by dividing a pair with Pittsburgh. After Warren Spahn had curved his way to a 4-1 nod over Fritz Ostermueller, Rip Sewell got the Bucks an even break with a seven-hit effort 5-2.

Johnny Vander Meer won his fourth straight and his first shutout of the year against the Phillies 3-0, but Ken Raffensberger squared matters by silencing Cincinnati Reds with six hits in the 8-2 afterpiece.

In the American League, Washington climbed over the .500 mark by trouncing St. Louis in both ends of a twin bill 5-3 behind Sid Hudson and 4-2 on an eight-hit job by Rae Scarborough.

Connie Mack's Athletics sunk a little deeper into the cellar by splitting two with Chicago. Russ Christopher got credit for the opener 5-4, although he needed help to best Orval Grove but Bob Savage dropped the second to reliefer Al Hollingsworth.

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press)

Frank Stanahan, Toledo, O., amateur, defeated the best U. S. pros yesterday to win the $20,000 invitation golf tournament at Kansas City, one stroke better at 274 than Johnny Bulla of Chicago. Tied for third place at 276 were Byron Nelson of Toledo, Tommy Hines of Chicago and Harold McSpaden of Sanford, Me. The previous major victory for Stanahan was his triumph over a pack of pros in the Durham, N. C. Open last November.

The reward for Stanahan's Kansas City win was a trophy while first money of $2,500 went to Bulla and the third-place finishers each received $1,433.33.

With a three-set runaway triumph over Don Budge, Bobby Riggs became the singles champion in the National pro tennis tournament yesterday at Forest Hills, N.Y. After making 64 errors, Budge apologized to the crowd of 7,500 for his poor showing.

By sweeping two singles matches yesterday at Varberg, Sweden, Yugoslavia virtually clinched the European zone of Davis Cup tennis play. The winner would meet the survivor of the United States-New Zealand draw, for the right to face Australia for the trophy.

Maureen Ruttle defeated Diana Fishwick Critchley 13 and 11 yesterday in All-British final for the French Women's Open golf title over the Mortefontaine course near Chantilly.

With Harold Gimblett responsible for 231 runs, Somerset ran up 472 for eight wickets against Middlesex at Tauntonnin English cricket Saturday. At Sheffield, Yorkshire hit 300 against India before declaring and the tourists replied with 70 for three wickets.

The $80,775 Arlington Futurity at Arlington Park Saturday went to Cosmic Bomb, owned by William Helis, in an upset victory which paid his owner $65,875. Lord Boswell came through with a win in the $35,450 Dick Wells Stake, second feature of the card.

Louis B. Mayer's Honeymoon, a 1-3 favorite, scored a six-length victory to take the $50,000 Hollywood Derby at Inglewood, Calif., Saturday. It was her fifth win of the Hollywood Park meeting.

Former manager of the Toronto Leafs, Burleigh Grimes has been appointed temporary manager of the Kansas City Blues in the American Association until the health of Bill Meyers permits a return as pilot. Grimes has been scouting for New York Yankees.

The four year old Algiers copped the free-for-all trot in Grand Circuit racing at Old Orchard Beach, Me., Saturday in 2:03½ to equal his Santa Anita track record.

Chips Off The Sports Block

"I was never so embarrassed in my life," drawled the merry-eyed Rip Sewell after the recent all star game, referring to Williams blast of his blooper ball. "I ain't been so ashamed since the day I was pitchin' in this same park for Detroit. I tried to sneak one past Smead Jolley with the bases full and he knocked that dang thing plumb into the next county—and me down to Beaumont in the Texas League."

Before the game a reporter was strolling across the field with Dixie Walker during American League batting practice. Suddenly the leading swatter in the National League grabbed the scribe by the elbow. "Let's take in the sight," he drawled and gestured toward the cage where Williams was lashing at the ball with his silken swing. "Ain't that somethin'?" he asked in open-mouthed admiration. "He shore is purty."

Well, that Bockwinkle-Lee Henning rematch has all been arranged so Promoter Phil (The Voice) Lawson telephoned last night. Henning raved all the way back to Toronto about the treatment he received down here at the hands of the fans—and he claims this boy Bockwinkle is just another wrestler. "Just grist for Lee'sy's mill," "The Scowl" scowled. So they'll go at it again Friday-night—and will travel the ninety-minute limit in an effort to get a decision. Bockwinkle was eager to get the rematch—and this time he declares, there will be no fooling. Looks like a dilly, eh?

TORONTO DUNKS ROCHESTER WINGS TWICE SAT.

Leafs Move Nearer Baltimore Orioles; Other Teams Split Doubleheaders Over Weekend

By The Associated Press

Toronto's chances of making the play-off grade in the International League were considerably brighter today after a double conquest of the tail-spinning Rochester Red Wings.

While all the other clubs were dividing Sunday doubleheaders, the Maple Leafs knocked off the Wings 8-7 and 5-4, moving to within 4 1-2 games of the fourth place Baltimore Orioles.

Luke Hamlin put the clincher on Rochester's third straight home doubleheader loss with a decision in the second game after the Leafs had rallied to pull the opener out of the fire.

Montreal Royals had to be satisfied with a split in Buffalo after a grand slam homer by Catcher Dixie Howell had assured the leaders of an easy 7-3 verdict in the first tilt. Vic Wertz socked his 12th and 13th home runs in the Bison's 7-6 nightcap victory behind reliefer Pete Appleton.

Lefty Herb Karpel of Newark turned in the best pitching job of the day, a neat three-hitter in the second game 9-1 victory over Jersey City, after Art Fowler of Jersey City had stopped the Bears in the opener 9-4.

Earl Harrist earned a split for Syracuse with a 9-5 nod over Baltimore in the nightcap of a twin bill witnessed by 7,732 fans. Ed Robinson of the Orioles had slammed two homers in the first game, an 8-4 Baltimore triumph.

HENNING MEETS BOCKWINKLE AT ARENA FRI. NIGHT

When Lee Henning and Warren Bockwinkle fought it out here to a draw in their wild and woolly wrestling match last Friday, there was considerable division among the fans as to who held the upper hand. Some felt that the marvellous wrestling ability of Bockwinkle had proven superior while others contended that the violent ruggedness of Henning was too much for the St. Louis star.

In any case the men have been re-matched and Henning will have a chance to prove up on his boast that "if the match had gone ten minutes longer I'd have beaten him." Because on Friday next the two big fellows will lock horns again and this time they'll have an hour-and-a-half to settle things. Both men eagerly agreed to the unusual ninety minute limit and Henning expressed particular satisfaction. "I know I'm just too hard and tough even for Bockwinkle" said big Lee as he accepted the terms "and this time even those Belleville fans will have to admit it."

However talking about it is a whole lot easier than actually beating Bockwinkle. The "Bock" is a near-perfect athlete, trained to the minute and weighing two-hundred and thirty-eight pounds he has the dynamic force to shock even such a wild man as the Cornhusker. In over the ninety minute limit something is bound to give with those two powerhouses exploding around the ring. This Henning has a veritable genius for thinking up new and painful dodges with which to be-devil opponent and his trick of hanging up his opponent by one leg has given him quite an advantage at times.

Bunny Dunlop whose colorful showmanship is almost as great as his enormous strength gets a big test when he meets Wilbur "Toar" Morgan in the semi-final match. Dunlop has been getting in the customer's hair for a long time now and Manager Walt Gerow figures, he and Morgan should make a regular "Donnybrook" out of it.

In the third bout tall and handsome Ben Sharpe, the senior brother of the Hamilton boys, meets Jim Goon Henry, to round out a great card of action.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

(Canadian Press, Staff Writer)

Montreal, July 15 — (CP) — Seems that there's a new — and we must add, refreshing — trend in sport spectator participation, that's brightening up the scene more and more these days.

Maybe it's just the work turning as a delayed reaction from the wartime days when some sport attractions weren't exactly that but rather on the distracting side. But anyway it's providing a lot of fun.

The little Rosy-around-the-ring in New York Friday night after the Sugar Ray Robinson - Joe Curcio episode was just a sign of the times — and may be more than a passing indication that the characters who attend those boxing whirleroos may be prepared to provide the necessary action themselves when the shuffling denizens of the ring don't.

Harness Hops

Harness racing is staging a game struggle in Montreal, now that the runners aren't functioning here, but reports have it that the characters aren't going too strongly for the sport, although its staunch supporters will find it hard to believe.

Main grief for the running horse addicts here is the delay in getting the trotters and pacers off for each heat. To a fan used to the sudden action once the starting gate is opened and the gee-gees gallop down the track, the frequent call-backs and false starts with the skittish harness nags are irksome.

A starting chute was tried on the Montreal track, but it didn't pan out too well, so they went back to the old system.

Alarm Clock Leads to Arrest

Boston, July 15—(AP)—A thief sneaked into a Northampton Street apartment, took a pillow slip from a bed and stuffed a small radio and an alarm clock into the improvised bag. The thief was walking along the street when the alarm clock rang. While two men peered over his shoulder, the thief fished into the bag to quiet the ringing. The two men — detectives George Harnden and James Whitman—got a good look—and took the thief into custody.

After my copy goes to the newspapers is when I really worry. Times are when I shoot off my big mouth about deviations. My fear is that I may turn you away from a good rule.

Bridge players should start out with simple rules like—(1) lead the top of partner's suit, (2) second hand low, (3) third hand high, (4) cover an honor, (5) always return partner's lead, and such.

These are all good rules. They are better than any other rules on the same subjects. Most assuredly, they are much better than no rules. You should know them.

Such rules are better than any of their exceptions. But there will be times when you must deviate from them. Such digressions are often determined by what you see in dummy.

Sit east when the clubs and diamonds of a deal are in the four hands you see here:

NORTH
♦K J 10
♣8 6 3

WEST
♦Q 9 7 2
♣K 10 5

EAST
♣Q 7 4 2

SOUTH
♦8 6 4
♣A J 9

Your partner in the west leads a diamond. His lead will be the deuce, his fourth best in a suit of four or more cards. When dummy in the north plays the ten, you, you take that trick with your ace.

One look at dummy should tell you the diamond situation. Even if that suit has been led by partner, would you return it? If you do, you should have your teach-following the rule of returning partner's lead. It is plain to see that you must deviate from this rule. To return diamonds is into the jaws of the dummy K. J.

Thus, there are times when you do not return partner's lead. The main thing is not to let it discourage you from believing in the rule.

You may not always know when to deviate. But knowing the rule has one advantage. At least, you know when you are deviating.

Hollywood Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, July 15—(AP)—It is about time we were coming to grips with the bow tie question.

The nearest thing to a controversy in men's clothing since the zoot suit went into decline, is whether or not men should wear bow ties.

Bow ties definitely are on the upsurge. Men's stores that once kept them hidden among the spats and garters now are offering large cases of them. At Hollywood parties they often reach a percentage of 33 1-3.

Most inveterate bow wearers, lots of them newspapermen, frown on the "floppy monstrosity" which Frank Sinatra sports.

Searching for comment on the momentous issue, I received a variety of answers from Hollywood actors——

Walter Pidgeon: "I'm jealous of a man who can wear a bow. I don't have the face for it—look too much like a dandy with one on."

Van Heflin: "I'm against ties of all kinds."

George Sanders: "I can't stand bows. Perhaps because when II was a boy I always got into trouble when I wore a bow tie."

Frank Morgan: "They're okay for long, anemic faces, but not for a nice, fat one like mine."

Sonny Tufts: "A single man should never wear bow ties. they require too much attention and it gives women a chance to trap him."

Eddie Albert: "After four years in the navy I've forgotten how to tie them."

Lee Bowman: "Bow ties are all right for sports clothes when they are neat and out of the way."

Lon McCallister: "I agree with the newspapermen. Although I have only one bow tie, I wear it often. And it's not the 'drooly' kind. It's the straight collegiate type."

But of course the test is whether the women like them. One reaction is Joan Crawford's:

"I hate bow ties. When Sinatra sings. I close my eyes."

The two, rounded up in a hectic weekend chase which took police to Arnprior, 40 miles west of Ottawa, were Nicholas Minnille, 32, and Henry Ceretti, 25.

JAN STAUBO WINS TENNIS TITLE BY FAULTLESS STYLE

Norwegian Defeats Quebec Ace to Cop Eastern Canada Crown

By GEORGE FORSTER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, July 15 (CP) — Jan Staubo of Norway displayed faultless court strategy to defeat Jean Marois of Quebec 6-4, 6-2, 6-3 in the final men's singles round of the Eastern Canada Tennis Championships Saturday. The 26-year-old Royal Norwegian Air Force veteran covered the court with machine-like precision to turn back Marois, Ontario singles champion.

Jean Adele Burritt of Toronto, Ontario Ladies' Singles Champion added the Eastern Canada crown to an impressive list of championships by beating Mrs. Ruby Fisher of Toronto 6-4, 6-4.

Marois, 23-year-old former goaltender for Toronto St. Michael's College hockey team, threatened only once in the match—he led 4-3 in the first set but Staubo broke through his service after tying the score and went on to take the set.

Henri Rochon of Montreal, member of Canada's Davis Cup team, and J. G. (Pinky) McLean of Toronto defeated former Ontario singles champion Georges Leclerc of Ottawa and Don Hodges of Regina, youthful Saskatchewan champion 6-2, 6-2, 4-6, 6-1 for the men's doubles title.

In an all-Toronto final for the Ladies' Double Championship, Mrs. Fisher and Mrs. Ken Salmond defeated Miss Burritt and Mrs. Louise Brown 8-6, 6-2.

A measure of revenge came for Marois later in the day when he and Mrs. Fisher defeated Staubo and 19-year-old Nina Irwin of New York, Junior Grass and Clay Court Champion of Eastern United States 6-2 in a one-set mixed doubles final. Darkness shortened the scheduled best-of-three sets match.

AMATEUR BASEBALL

(By The Canadian Press)

Bunching three hits and a fielder's choice in the ninth inning, London Majors broke up a scoreless pitching duel between Tommy White of the Majors and Harvey Willis of the Kitchener Panthers at Kitchener yesterday and a 2-0 triumph in the Intercounty Baseball Association senior schedule.

The Panthers threatened in each of the last three innings but White bore down in the pinches. White and Willis each fanned 8, White walking two and Willis one, until the ninth not a runner passed second base for either club.

After a long drawn-out Kent County baseball fixture at Stirling park in Chatham the Taylor A. C. nine dished out a convincing defeat to Chatham seniors 15-12. The seniors tossed no less than seven miscues into the fray.

On a battle at Galt for fourth place in the senior standing, the Galt Terriers took a 9-6 verdict in their clash with Waterloo Tigers.

Petrolia Hard Oils defeated the Muellers Brass Company team of the northern section of the Blue Water League of Port Huron, Mich., in Petrolia, 4-3. Scotty Kerr for Petrolia struck out 14.

In Merriton Saturday, the Thorold Thomers' new pitcher, young Ronnie Hanson, hurled them to a Niagara District Senior Baseball League win 11-4 over Hamilton Consumers in a five-hit display.

With a 7-1 victory over Newcastle at Peterboro, the Petes maintained their grip on top place in the Lakeshore Baseball League. Bill Edger, on the home slab, hurled three-hit ball and struck out 12 in a fine mound chore.

Two runs by Porcupine Combines in the ninth at Timmins won them a game over Hollinger Bombers 3-2. Combines' Alex Kosick was taken for a total of seven hits and a walk, while Mike Cheravaty, on the mound for Bombers, allowed only five.

Mimico In First Place Tie

Brampton, July 15 — (CP) — Mimico Mountaineers went into a first-place tie with St. Catharines in the Senior Ontario Lacrosse Association Saturday night, when the Mimico club defeated Brampton Excelsiors 24-14 here. Mimico now has played 14 games without a defeat.

Simpson, with four goals, led the Mimico attack. Sandford, Williams and B. McDonald each scored three. Pritchard, Maclean, McPhail and Mackay each scored twice, and the other goals came from A. Dixon, L. McDonald and Lee.

For Brampton E. Taylor scored three goals and Garbutt got two. Other scorers were Bill Anthony, F. McLean, Graham, Madgett, Raine, Ferri, Steel, L. Crawford and Brunskill.

SAY POW PREFER CANADA

St. Thomas, July 15—(CP) — German prisoners of war in this district prefer Canada to their homeland, a survey by local farmers revealed. Questioned about their desires to remain in Canada until the harvest is completed, four prisoners working with a local farmer all volunteered to remain.

Jap Surrender Assured Even Without A-Bomb

Washington, July 15 —(AP)—President Truman's strategic bombing evaluators say United States airpower had so beaten up and starved out the Japanese war machine last summer that capitulation within five months was assured.

Even had there been no atom bombings, Russian entry into the Pacific war or threat that the Japanese mainland would be invaded, the survey group concluded, surrender would have come before last December 31 and probably two months earlier than that.

Domination of the air had cut off the island empire so sharply from vital supplies in its conquered territory that it could not have carried on much longer, said the survey report to President Truman Saturday.

Questioning of more than 100 Japanese military, government and industrial officials disclosed that some high leaders realized as early as March, 1944 that the war was lost, the report said.

Emperor Hirohito and his chief political and naval advisory decided in May, 1945 that the war must be ended on any terms.

Brutal Slayer Is Sought In Suburban N. York

Toronto, July 15—(CP)—Police combed the suburban North York township area today for clues in the brutal slaying of Joseph P. Ward 55-year-old postal employee, who was found late Friday night dazed and battered and died in hospital yesterday without regaining consciousness.

He was found by a passing motorist in a Lawrence Avenue ditch, one arm broken and face badly smashed. He was beaten sufficiently to have caused death an autopsy revealed.

Police were working on the theory Ward was murdered. Robert D. Jackson, who lives a block away, said he thought he heard the voice of an elderly man calling for help from a sedan going west on Lawrence Avenue shortly before Ward's body was found.

He went to his front door and saw a young man running beside a Buick sedan. The car was going slowly and as the man caught up with it, the car pulled away. He caught up with it a second time and Jackson heard him shout to someone inside, "Don't be a fool." He climbed into the car, which then drove off.

Ward was last seen by a neighbor at his home at aproximately 7 p. m. Friday. He was seen getting out of a coupe driven by a young man. His wife and daughter, only other occupants of the house, were absent.

A veteran of the first great war, he would have returned to his duties at a postal station tomorrow after his annual vacation.

NOW BAILIFF HAS TO EVICT HIMSELF

Chicago, July 15 — (AP)—For the last 20 years eviction bailiff Zientek has been carrying out court orders to move people out on the street. Last March Zientek's landlord notified him he would have to move from his apartment. Now Zientek is faced with the problem of kicking himself out of his own apartment following issuance of a court order for his eviction.

CHAPTER 7

Since the ten thousand dollars had been given to Mrs. Wade for safekeeping, Eve being a minor, Selina turned her adroit mind to the proper clothes her talented daughter should have. To Iris' disgust she even made mild hints that if there was anything Iris wanted no one would be the wiser if she bought it for her. Iris refused politely, but for days during her lunch hour she shopped with Eve until the clothes closets at home were filled to overflowing with what resembled a costly trousseau.

In the interlude there was no time for Joel or Mark. Iris talked with Joel by telephone one day.

"I've got a surprise present for you," he said. "I got that extra night work I was telling you about. When your sister goes away, we're going places," and there was a cockiness in his voice she did not like.

Late Friday afternoon Eve left. She was an excited and charming figure dressed in a new dark suit, an absurd little hat over her short dark hair, and carrying Iris's roses in her arms as she stood in the circle of family and friends at Mt. Royal station. Mark was there, as was Sabine, the little teacher.

Iris, looking at Eve, felt a wave of sadness for her. "In a week," she thought, "she's changed. When she comes back to us, what will freedom have done to her?" And when she took Eve's hand, she could say nothing. Eve, smiling nervously a childish smile of triumph, did not notice the deep concern in Iris's eyes but Mark, ever attentive, saw it and wondered now if this grand gesture of his had been wise.

He smiled at Iris. "Don't look so forlorn. Aren't you happy for her?"

"Very," she said, smiling a little. "But I want her to come back as sweet as she is and I know—she won't."

After many kisses and embraces Eve's face in the smart new hat looked at them through the dusty train window as the train slowly pulled away. Iris saw her press her hand childishly to her mouth to control the frightened tears at being so alone and young suddenly set free.

With a sigh, Mrs. Wade dried her tears and then turned to what interested her most — Iris and Mark, standing apart, talking earnestly, and Iris looking lovely in a printed silk dress and a broad brimmed blue hat. Seeing Mark loving Iris with her eyes, Selina quite forgot about Eve about to step from the threshold of a quiet middleclass home into the tempting unconventional life of student artists, and then finally to make the gap broader by going abroad.

Mark said, "I'll drive you home, Iris, and your mother and brother, too, of course."

Without Eve's music the old house seemed very still. Selina returned to her bridge games, to making adroit bargains for Iris's clothes, and to stinting on the table. Iris took up the routine of her life again, trying not to worry about Eve, and thinking about Joel and Mark and Annette Tracy.

"Mrs. Bailey has an appointment at eight," Iris reminded Dr. Tracy.

"Did you make an important date tonight? I need you here to assist me."

"I have a date with my knitting needles," she returned smilingly.

"Then you're going to dinner with me."

Her eyes scolded him.

"But Mrs. Tracy wouldn't like...."

"She won't know anything about it, my dear, and besides, taking one's secretary to dinner is not grounds for divorce."

At a small table in a supper club they talked about Mark and Eve. It was strange, she thought, that Joel who was so deeply involved in her life was never mentioned when almost every decision and plan of her life centered about him. In the present state of affairs Iris was afraid to look forward, seeing in the future Mark's dark eyes under the heavy dark brows, Joel, both humble and surly, and the accusing eyes of Annette Tracy.

"Don't look so troubled," said Louis. "I have told Annette that Mark is pursuing you in the most gentlemanly manner."

"And she says that Mark will never marry a working girl."

"That's what she says."

Toward the end of the meal a waiter with unsteady hands tipped the water goblet over into Iris's lap. As he apologized again and again, expecting a reprimand, she quietly excused herself and went upstairs to the dressing room.

The damage was slight. When she came out into the dimly lighted hall, she looked up startled, seeing a man and woman in a close embrace. For a moment she was amused, debating whether to hurry past or retreat to the dressing room again.

There was time for nothing, for Annette Tracy, over a strange man's shoulder, saw Iris standing there, crimson with embarrassment.

"I beg your pardon," Iris said in a tight little voice.

"Oh, it's you!" cried Mrs. Tracy in a clipped high voice. "Now run along and tell Louis what you have seen and then both of you, scheming to get rid of me, can gloat beautifully over it."

The man touched Annette's arm.

"Don't make a scene. This girl doesn't mean anything. There's some one coming up the steps."

Iris winced. Was Louis coming up the stairway?

"I can't go downstairs," said Annette. "Louis is down there."

"We'll go at once," Iris said firmly and brushed by them.

She could not look directly in Louis's eyes when she reached their table. He was sipping contentedly on a liqueur. Iris thought bitterly, "Somebody else is using me for a tool. Mrs. Tracy wants to divorce Louis, wants to name me, and then collect alimony. But I can't tell that his wife is unfaithful. I can't!"

She said casually, "My dress is soaked, Louis. I think we'd better go."

For days afterward Iris was mentally ill at the encounter with Annette and the strange, surly, handsome man/ Moreover, conditions at home were becoming so unbearable that when the business day was over she winced at the thought of returning to it.

Mrs. Wade bickered continually, complained and grumbled about the old subject of money. Tommy was discouraged and miserable with his job.

"I don't know what you can be thinking about not to encourage a man like Mark Christian," Selina whined at the dinner table. "You're ungrateful, Iris. And all I've done for you. Do you want to go on living like this, skimping and pinching pennies all your life for the few clothes and comforts you have? You could have everything." Her hard blue eyes blinked with tears. "I should think you'd think of me and of Tommy."

Tommy grunted. "I'm not complaining. Let up on Iris."

And Iris, her dark head lowered, bit her lips to control the pain and hurt inside of her, feeling if it did not cease she would have to flee from the house. "If only," she thought, "I could have some peace. If only I could come home one night and be met with pleasant faces. If only one night we did not quarrel at dinner."

She put her fork in her plate.

"You haven't eaten anything," said Mrs. Wade.

"Can you blame her?" cried Tommy. "Why don't you let her alone? You'll drive her crazy with your preaching. I'm not complaining, am I? I'm a grease monkey in a gas station and I don't want Iris to marry money—for me. If she were your own daughter, you wouldn't want her to sell herself!"

"My own daughter—indeed? Haven't I been a mother to her? Did I put her in an orphanage when her father died. I'm going old and tired and Iris owes it to me for what I've done for her."

"Tommy," said Iris," don't go on with this."

Tommys eyes were sullen. "Why don't you tell her why you don't encourage Mark and get it over? There won't be any peace here until you do."

Selina's eyes were bright through her tears.

"What is it I haven't been told? What are you keeping from me? So—there are secrets between you. Iris, I believed in your honesty...."

Iris got up, walked to the door, and turned.

"It's the only way," said Tommy.

"You're married to somebody else?" her mother said.

Iris shook her head. Her voice was firm and clear. "No. Not married. But I'm engaged to Joel. You've probably forgotten the boy who came here two years ago and stopped coming because you were so sarcastic and rude to him...."

"You've been seeing that — that boy?"

"Yes. Secretly for two years. I've promised to marry him as soon as he makes enough money. I can't break my promise to him," and the anger and hate in Selina's eyes was mild to Iris' contempt for herself. She thought, "Go on. Say what you're thinking. Nothing you can say will matter.... I love Mark. That's why this hurts so much. I love Mark."

Tommy said soberly, "Don't say anything you'll be sorry for, Mother. Don't forget that Iris paid for Eve's music lessons, pays for nearly everything around here. You've got no right to own her life."

"And who are you to tell me what I shall say to my step daughter!" she cried vehemently. She looked at the slim strong little figure in the doorway. "You were determined to defy me, weren't you? You don't care about the people who need you."

"Don't care!" Iris cried.

"You needed me once,' Selina cried, "and I loved you and raised you!"

Iris shook her head. "There are so many, many things you don't know," and then turned abruptly, went into the hall, and put on her coat and hat.

She walked heedlessly down Gwynn's Falls Parkway and through the park. In the warm spring night she saw silhouettes of couples walking arm in arm and gay roadsters parked beside the calm lake. For a while she sat on a bench, realizing now how physically tired she was. It was unthinkable to return home until Selina and Tommy were in bed, and it was also unthinkable to remain in the park alone.

At the approach of a sinister figure with a hat pulled over his eyes, Iris got up quickly, crossed the bridge, walked up a steep hill, and cut across the Hopkins campus where the night students were going to class.

Cruiser With Stalled Engine Drifts on Shore

Whipped up by the strong wind which prevailed during the latter part of the afternoon, heavy waves in the Bay of Quinte brought at least one cabin cruiser to grief on Sunday.

The cruiser, only recently purchased by a returned war veteran, was being taken from Belleville to Trenton for repairs when a stalled engine left her to the mercy of the waves and blown by the heavy wind she drifted helplessly to shore dragging her anchor. Two persons aboard her got safely ashore although they were forced to get out into shoulder-deep water.

Three Belleville young men, Howard and Gordon Booth and Eugene Morden, braving the heavy waves in the latter's cedar skiff endeavored unsuccessfully to free the cruiser from where she was grounded. The cruiser was still ashore this morning, it was reported.

Trial of Redin Nears its Close

Seattle, July 15 (AP) — The trial of Russian naval Lieut. Nicolai Gregorovich Redin in espionage charges, now more than three weeks long, neared its close today as Chief Assistant United States Attorney Allan Pomeroy and Defence Counsel Tracy E. Griffin prepared to offer their final arguments before a Federal court jury.

Each has 2½ hours and veteran court attaches predicted that Judge Lloyd L. Black would require at least half a day to instruct the jury, which would place the case in the jury's hands tomorrow.

Redin, 30, accused of conspiring to obtain secrets vital to national defence, has denied that he sought or obtained secret data on the destroyer tender U.S.S. Yellowstone from Herbert Kennedy, an engineer.

Veto Procedure in Security Council Attacked by Australian Member

By FRANCIS W. CARPENTER

New York, July 15 (AP)— Dr. Hervert V. Evatt, Australian Foreign Minister, today attacked the veto procedure in the United Nations Security Council as "undemocratic and unjust" and declared there must be "no veto" in the Paris peace conference.

Dr. Evatt, who is retiring as chairman of the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission, said in a broadcast heard here and in Australia that the "illogical system of voting in the Security Council" is the "most serious disability under which the United Nations is now working."

"It is a travesty of democratic procedures when any one nation can block the unanimous opinion of the remainder of a council of 11 when it is endeavoring solely to conciliate and adjust international disputes and situations.

"Australia has therefore given formal notice that the general assembly will be asked at its next meeting to review the way in which the veto power has been exercised during the past year.."

Meanwhile, the bids of five countries, two of which are loaded with political dynamite, were on file as the deadline arrived for applications for membership in the U.N. to be considered at the September meeting of the General Assembly.

The five applicants are Albania, whose papers have been in for months; Siam, the Mongolian people's republic (Outer Mongolia), Afghanistan and Transjordan.

Yugoslavia is sponsoring Albania, with Soviet Russia looking large in the background favoring the request of Albania's premier, Enver Hoxha. Standing squarely against the Albania request is Britain, which has not recognised Hoxha. The prospect of argument between Russia and Britain over the application makes it the one most likely to cause the greatest headache to the security council.

The second application likely to cause trouble, according to U. N. observers, is that of Siam. France is said to be the principal threat to the Siamese application.

Siam has protested to the U. N. against French "aggression" in Indo-China and has decided to submit that case to the council. Although not a member, Siam may do so by agreeing in advance to accept the council's decision.

Meanwhile, members of the U. N. Atomic Energy Commission were studying the latest United States memorandum on atomic control, submitted by Bernard M. Baruch to the working committee of the commission last Friday and made public Saturday night.

It would provide that the Security Council take jurisdiction over atomic matters actually threatening world peace. This is in keeping with the Russian contention that the Security Council is the agency charged by the charter with maintaining peace.

But it would provide also that the five permanent members of the council holding the veto would agree voluntarily not to use their veto rights on atomic matters. The memorandum in that respect ran counter to the evident Russian course of upholding the veto right.

FIGHTING FLARES IN MANCHURIA AND NORTH CHINA

Communist Troops Strike Blows in Shantung Peninsula

Nanking, July 15 —(AP)— Fighting flared in Manchuria and North China again today as the country's sporadic peace negotiations were stifled by summer heat.

Associated Press correspondent Tom Masterson reported from Peiping that Communist troops had struck at a railroad station south of Tientsin, in Hopei Province, and launched new attacks in the vicinity of Tsingtao and Tsinan, at the base of the Shangtung peninsula. There are American Marine bases at Tientsin and Tsingtao.

The reports were carried in the Independent Peiping Press, which late last week reported 20,000 Red troops had opened attacks on Ntaionalist outer defences at Tientsin.

Other Chinese press reports said that 10,000 Communists had assaulted Chienchang in Manchuria and reportedly had completed encirclement of the city while others captured Hungfantzu, a bridgehead on the north bank of Manchuria's Sungari River.

Twenty thousand other Reds were reported attacking Chimo, 15 miles north of Tsingtao, while a similar number reportedly fought across Shangyang in an engagement in the Chiaohsien area 10 miles north of Tsingtao.

Heat Interrupts Negotiations.

A heavy mobilization of Communist soldiers was reported taking place between Harbin and the Chiamusze-Peia area northwest of Harbin.

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek deserted the heart of Nanking and direct peace negotiations for the mountain air of Kuling, flying to his summer capital with Madame Chiang and their elder son, Chiang Ching-Kuo.

A truce conference scheduled for Sunday between the Nationalist and Communist Manchurian army commanders was called off. Communist quarters expressed resentment that Chiang had gone off to the summer capital.

It was apparent, however, that the peace negotiations could not get far right now because Gen. Chou En-Lai, the Communist negotiator, still is in Shanghai.

Some Chinese sources have termed Chiang's decision to quit Nanking a "death blow" to a peace solution for China in the immediate future.

Survey of Food Prices on Border

Fort Erie, July 15 (CP)—A weekend survey of food prices in Buffalo, N.Y., and Fort Erie yielded results that should make Canadians heave at least a small sigh. Butter, in Fort Erie, 42 to 45 cents; in Buffalo, 79 to 85. Milk, 13 cents a quart; in Buffalo, 19. Bread, 10 cents; in Buffalo, 14. Eggs, 43 cents a dozen; in Buffalo, 54. Hamburger, 23 cents a pound; in Buffalo, 35. Porterhouse steak, 48 cents a pound; in Buffalo, 65. Sirloin, 44 cents a pound; in Buffalo, 53.

Butter Output Down in June By 8.1 Per Cent

Toronto, July 15 (CP)—Production of both creamery butter and cheddar cheese in Ontario was lower in June than in June 1945, the Ontario Department of Agriculture reported in its monthly dairy report issued today. Butter production dropped 8.1 per cent and cheese 7.1 per cent.

June output of creamery butter was estimated at 10,110,400 pounds as against 11,004,000 pounds in June 1945, while cheddar cheese was estimated at 18,156,000 pounds compared with 19,545,100 pounds in June last year.

Cumulative production of creamery butter for the first six months of this year is 23,332,300 pounds, 13.8 per cent less than the same period last year. Cumulative production of cheddar cheese showed a decrease of 20.8 per cent at 37,336,900 pounds.

Retail and wholesale sales of fluid milk in May totalled 41,327,600 quarts compared with 35,406,000 quarts in May 1945. Retail and wholesales of fluid cream in May amounted to 1,142,900 quarts, as against 1,037,000 quarts for May last year.

Britain and U.S. Resume Talks On Palestine

London, July 15 —(CP)— British and American negotiators resumed talks on Palestine today amid growing indication that Britain insists on all-or-nothing in implementation of the Anglo-American committee report.

Details were withheld under a news blackout imposed at Britain's request, but foreign office sources made it plain that London would not recede from its view that admission of 100,000 Jews could not be considered separately from the other nine recommendations in the report.

These include recommendations that Britain and the United States, with other countries, should endeavor to find homes for displaced persons irrespective of creed and nationality; and that terrorism, illegal armies and threats of violence — by either Jews or Arabs — be suppressed.

American negotiators were understood to be under instructions to offer any financial and technical assistance necessary to implement the immigration of 100,000 Jews to Palestine, but not to commit the United States to military assistance.

In Baghdad, Jamil Pasha Alrawi, Iraq's acting minister of foreign affairs said in an interview that the Arab states resented American intervention in Palestine.

"Anglo - American politicians should mediate well," he said, "before making decisions that will arouse grave consequences in the whole Arab world."

Diplomatic observers expressed belief that the talks might continue for three or four weeks without any decision on implementation of the committee's recommendations. Some quarters suggested the talks might be followed by consultations between British Foreign Secretary Bevin and State Secretary Byrnes of the United States.

Maj.-Gen. Sir Edward Spears, head of the Spears mission to Syria and Lebanon in 1941, predicted meanwhile that if 100,000 Jews were sent to Palestine this year as recommended by the commission "all hope of peace and security in the Middle East would end."

"Zionist Fascism," Sir Edward said in a letter to the Sunday Chronicle, "is one of the realities of the Palestine problem, and to ignore it is unrealistic."

APPOINTED CHAIRMAN

Toronto, July, 15—(CP)—Dr. Fred Routley, National Commissioner of the Canadian Red Cross Society and official Canadian representative to the League of Red Cross Society's convention meeting at Oxford, England, has been appointed chairman of the advisory health committee, Red Cross officials here announced today.

Sheep: $8.50 good light ewes downward to $3 for culls.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE

Toronto, July 15 — (CP)—The gold stocks were lower at midday on the Toronto Exchange and other groups had gains, the industrials and base metals firming about a half point. The turnover was small at 398,000 shares for the first three hours.

The steel issues were strong despite the calling of a strike in the steel plants. The liquors were higher and the foods lower.

Among the stronger gold issues were Pioneer, Pickle Crow, Sylvanite, Macassa, Hard Rock, Athona, Campbell Red Lake and Cochenour Willans. The shares of Osulake Mines Limited were listed today and trades were boarded around 83 cents.

Western oils were in dull action at firm to strong prices.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

New York, July 15—(AP)—Stocks generally continued thier retreat in today's market when an early selective recovery flurry soon faded.

While selling pressure never was pronounced from the opening on, the drift was lower by fractions to two points or so near the fourth hour.

Canadians had a weaker tone on the big board at noon. Canadian Pacific was off 1-4 at 18 3-4, Distillers Seagram down 1 at 28, International Nickel off 1-4 at 38, Dome mines unchanged 22 7-8.

HOGS

Toronto, July 15 (CP) — No settled quotations were reported by bacon-hog markets early today.

Brantford later reported prices unchanged $20.85 plus transportation.

MONTREAL LIVESTOCK

Montreal July 15—(CP)—Trading was slow with buyers bidding $1 and more lower on good cattle on livestock markets here today. There were only a few good cattle with some good quality sows selling for $10.

Receipts: cattle 1,027, calves 1,159, Hogs 575 and sheep 811.

Sales were fairly active and prices steady for calves. Best vealers made 14.75 - 15 with common to fair ones 10 - 14.50 and drinkers 9 - 11.

Sales were slow and prices unsteady in the hog market.

Prices were steady for sheep with lambs 9-16 per cwt, according to weight and quality. Sheep were 4-9.

MILITARY COURT REJECTS APPEAL

London, July 15 (CP)— The Moscow radio said last night that the Polish supreme military court had rejected the appeal of the nine defendants sentenced to death last Thursday for setting off the bloody July 4 pogrom at Kielce, in which 41 persons, mostly Jews, were killed. A Polish military court tried and sentenced 12 persons in all. The three others, including one woman, received prison terms.

21 LIVES LOST IN ACCIDENTS IN EAST CANADA

Ten Drowned, Six Killed in Traffic Accidents During Weekend

By The Canadian Press

Across Eastern Canada, 21 persons lost their lives in weekend mishaps, it was shown today in a survey by the Canadian Press. Ten were drowned and six were killed in traffic accidents.

One death was labelled by Toronto police as possible murder. Found dazed and battered in a ditch in the suburbs of Toronto Friday night, Joseph P. Ward, 55-year-old postal employee, died in hospital Sunday.

Clifford Martin, 38, died in a Toronto hospital from injuries suffered Friday when he fell from the roof of a high school at Simcoe.

Harvey Dow, 60-year-old night watchman, was found dead in an elevator pit at a Pembroke factory, and Fernand Desrosiers, 28, died from injuries suffered in a fall down an elevator shaft at Montreal.

Killed in automobile accidents were seven-year-old Andon D. Nicholls at Dundalk; William Maxwell, six, struck by a motor truck at Bancroft; Mary Pilger, three, killed by a taxi at Orillia; Leonard Kryzanowski, 17, in a car accident in Toronto; James Cassidy, 45, in a car accident at Palmerston and Mrs. Oscar Dale of Rome, N.Y., killed in a car collision at Ste. Adele, Que.

Included in the drowning fatalities was Morris E. Taylor, who died at Owen Sound from injuries suffered when he was diving Wednesday. At North Bay, Eldon Belfoy, 32-year-old guide, was drowned when he fell from his boat, and the body of a girl, believed to be that of 17-year-old Irene Dansereau, was recovered from the St. Lawrence at Montreal.

Jack Cless, 17, of Outremont, Que., was drowned in Petit Long Lac, near Ste. Agathe, Que., while swimming Sunday.

Other drowning victims were Cecil E. Frood, 20, at Leith, near Owen Sound; Malcolm MacLeod, 22, at Port Credit; William Lowery, six, at New Liskeard; Kenneth Laxton, 27, at Winona; Harold D. Vaughan, 19, at Halifax, and William O'Brien, nine, at Windsor, N.S.

WAR' SEND SAW

The German missiles "used every known type of remote control and fusing means, including radio control, wire control, radar CW (continuous wave), acoustics, infra-red light beams and magnetics. In similar fashion all methods of employing jet propulsion for subsonic and supersonic speeds were being fully exploited."

He said the Germans were far ahead in the development of the ram jet engine, which is only now being put to use by the American Army and Navy Air Forces. In 1944 the Germans actually flight-tested a unit designed to produce a gross thrust of 4,400 pounds at 500 miles an hour, Col. Putt reported.

Fantastic List

Enzian—Winged flak rocket, 17 feet long, carrying 990 pounds of explosive and controlled by radio. Intended for use against heavy bomber formations.

Wasserfall—26-foot flak rocket, similar in design to the V-2, visibly controlled by radio, later by means of radar tracking. It had highest priority for development at war's end.

X-4 Ruhrstahl—Six-foot rocket bomb launched from fighter aircraft and controlled from the fighter through two four-mile lengths of wire.

Fritz X—Armor-piercing, radio-controlled bomb used by Germans against Allied ships at Salerno landing.

HS 117—"Butterfly" rocket propelled, radio controlled missiles to be launched against bomber formations at 560 miles an hour. They were in large-scale production in January last year at Norhausen underground factory.

Rheintochter—One of latest anti-aircraft missiles, rocket propelled to 48,000 feet altitude at 1,100 miles an hour, carrying 330 pounds of explosives.

A-4—Better known as the V-2 this rocket was the Nazis' greatest actual achievement in missiles with a range of 250 miles and top speed of 3,500 or more miles a hour. About 10,000 were made.

Melbourne, July 15 — (Reuters) — Victorian Members of Parliament are frowning on Sept. 2 as the federal general electio date because the football fin will be played that day.

They claim the game will attract 80,000 people which will effect polling figures.

Other suggested election date have been turned down for various reasons.

Sunday Midnight Dances Out in Verulam Township

Lindsay, July 15 — (CP)—Sunday midnight dances in Verulam township have been doomed by township by-law. Only one pavilion, at nearby Greenhurst, police village where the operato decided to ignore the townshi regulations, still opens its door every Sunday night at 12:05.

DR. BAKER'S COLUMN

HINTS

In dog training what one has to do is make the animal understand what is wanted and teach him what are the meanings of the words and signs. A dog fears nothing he fully understands. Be gentle and kind and put yourself in the student's position. Remember that human beings, with their higher intelligence, have difficulty in understanding what you want when they do not speak your language.

The important thing to remember is never to weary the pupil. Teach one thing at a time. Make very sure that the dog has learnt that one lesson thoroughly before taking up something new.

Hamilton Plant Produces 2,000 Tons First Day

Steel Mills at Soo, Sydney Are Both Strikebound

By TIM DICKSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Hamilton, July 16 —(CP)— The Steel Company of Canada announced today it produced 2,000 tons of steel ingots in the first 24 hours of the strike of the United Steelworkers of America (C.I.O.) against Canada's three basic steel producing plants.

The Hamilton plant is the only one to attempt to continue operations during the walkout, called by the union to enforce its demands for a $33.60 weekly minimum wage and a 40-hour week. The other strikebound plants are the Algoma Steel Corporation at Sault Ste. Marie and the Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation at Sydney, N.S.

The figures on Stelco production in the first day of the strike were given in a telegram from President H. G. Hilton to F. B. Kilbourn of Montreal, named controller of the basic steel plants when they were taken over by the government last Wednesday in a fruitles effort to avert strike action. There was no announcement as to normal Stelco production but it is roughly 1,000,000 tons a year, or about 3,000 a day.

Same Rate as Second Day.

Mr. Hilton's telegram said:—

"Production data for 24 hours ending 7 a.m. this morning follows: coke, 85 per cent of capacity; B blast furnace, 600 tons; ingot production, over 2,000 tons, all rolled in blooming mill; turn production in plate mill, rod mill and bar mill satisfactory.

"Operating rate this morning the same as yesterday and conditions in plant satisfactory. Additional men reported for work in plant yesterday and many others have signified their anxiety to get into work."

Yesterday the company said it had more than 2,000 of its normal working force of 4,800 at work but the union disagreed with these figures. Eamon Park, representative of the union's national office and in charge of strike publicity at Hamilton, said the Stelco strike was 85 per cent effective with not more than 1,200 men in the plant.

Newspapermen who toured the sprawling works along Hamilton's waterfront yesterday could not accurately estimate the number of men at work, although they saw many. They came away with the impression the plant generally was running at about two-thirds of its normal production rate.

Blind Work in Plant

Park said still in the plant were a number of employees of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind.

"We are informed that tremendous pressure was brought on the Canadian National Institute for the Blind by the Steel Company of Canada, who threatened them with the loss of their concession for providing meals in the plant if they refused to operate for strike-breakers," said Mr. Park.

Men on the picket line were on a system of four-hour shifts. The plan was worked out to give every man on strike a turn on the picket lines.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, July 16 (CP)—Synopsis at 7.30 a.m.: Clear and cool weather prevails over Eastern Canada and New England States which lie in an extensive high pressure area centred near Lake Simcoe. As the high moves eastward, winds over Ontario will be coming more southerly bringing in warmer air. A trough of low pressure east of the Rockies is giving scattered showers and thundershowers, but is not expected to affect southern Ontario before Thursday morning.

Says Heirens Denied Confessing Kidnap-Killing

Chicago, July 16 — (AP) — William Heirens, who was quoted by Warden Frank Sain of the Cook county jail as saying he had not "confessed" the kidnap-killing of Suzanne Degnan and the slaying of a former woman member of the United States Navy, was summoned into criminal court today for arraignment on 29 indictments charging him with 24 burglaries and five assaults.

Sain said last night that the 17-year-old University of Chicago student, who has been questioned in connection with the Degnan crime and the slaying of Frances Brown, the former Wave, summoned him to his jail cell after he had heard a news broadcast and said:

"I didn't confess to nobody."

Sain's reported conversation with Heirens came after State's Attorney William J. Tuohy and counsel for the youth had emphatically denied that he had made a statement in connection with the kidnapping and slaying of six-year-old Suzanne last Jan. 7th.

(The Chicago Tribune, in a copyright story, said it has learned "from unimpeachable sources" that "Heirens has told" of going to the Degnan home and kidnapping the six-year-old girl from her bed.

(He carried her into the basement of another building, the Tribune story added, and worked until nearly daylight cutting up her body. Then he placed the pieces of her body in sewers in the neighborhood, believing they would be washed away, the Tribune said.

(The Tribune story also said Heirens shot and killed Miss Brown when she emerged from her bathroom the night of Dec. 10 to find him ransacking her apartment. The story added that the shot didn't kill Miss Brown and that Heirens finished the job with a bread knife he found in her kitchen.

(The Tribune also said that Heirens fatally stabbed Mrs. Josephine Ross, 43, a widow, when she surprised him in the act of stealing her purse from her apartment June 3, 1945.)

Tuohy has said that Heirens' finger and palm prints match those on the $20,000 ransom note found in the Degnan home and he also has said his finger prints match those found in the apartment where Miss Brown, 38, was shot and stabbed to death last Dec. 10. Heirens has steadfastly denied any connection with either crime.

Red Embassy Asked to Have Gouzenko Handed Over to Them for Deportation

Ottawa, July 16 (CP)—The Soviet Embassy asked that Igor Gouzenko, former Embassy cipher clerk and key witness in the espionage probe, be handed over to them for deportation, it has been disclosed.

The Royal Commission on espionage revealed the Embassy's request in its final report made public yesterday. The Embassy had previously issued a statement alleging Gouzenko had stolen Embassy funds.

A request that he be handed over "without trial" for deportation followed an episode at Gouzenko's Ottawa apartment. Gouzenko had left the Embassy with documents which proved the key to the spy investigation.

When he failed to report for work, V. G. Pavlov of the Embassy staff with two other Russians went to Gouzenko's apartment. Pavlov was identified elsewhere in the commission report as head of the Soviet secret police in Canada.

They were unable to find Gouzenko because he was hiding in an apartment across the hall. Neighbors called the police and the Embassy in its note to External Affairs Department complained of the "rude" treatment of the Soviet officials when city police found them in Gouzenko's apartment.

Receiving no reply to its first request the Embassy sent another request a week later. There was no indication of a reply to that either.

Pavlov, it was disclosed, paid $5 to the owner of Gouzenko's apartment for damage done to the door and frame.

Savings Are Trebled By Individuals As Debts of Companies Are Greatly Reduced

By GEORGE KITCHEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, July 16 CP)—A cheery picture of a prosperous and wealthy Canada was put before the Commons last night by Health Minister Claxton in reply to what he called "gloomy" opposition criticism of budget proposals.

The second cabinet minister to rise during the week-old debate, Mr. Claxton said Canada's sound financial position had been achieved by paying as much as possible as expenditures rose and keeping up the value of the Canadian dollar.

Additional prosperity could be promoted by complete and satisfactory agreement with the provinces, co-operation between labor, management and government, and conditions abroad which would allow expansion of two-way trade.

Other speakers included Thomas Reid (L-New Westminster), G. S. White (PC-Hastings-Peterborough) and William Bryce (CCF-Selkirk).

At the House opening, Arthur Smith (PC-Calgary West) sought unsuccessfully to have the House adjourn its regular business to discuss the steel strike. Speaker Gaspard Fauteux ruled that it could be discussed in the budget debate.

Sidney Farmer Severely Hurt When Team Bolts

3rd. Sidney (Special)—Suffering possible broken legs as well as head injuries when run over by an empty farm hay wagon, Andrew Langstaff, age 60, 3rd. concession Sidney township, was admitted to Belleville General Hospital early Monday evening.

Mr. Langstaff with his son Clifford was preparing to leave the barnyard for the hayfield when the horses became frightened and started to move away. Mr. Langstaff ran and grabbed for the reins but succeeded in catching hold of but one. As result the horses circled the yard and Mr. Langstaff was thrown under the wagon, the wheels passing over his legs.

Head lacerations and a broken nose were also suffered by the farmer as he had come into contact with a block of concrete. The horses were stopped by Clifford Langstaff who eventually managed to get to their heads. The injured man is under the care of Dr. J. Russell Scott.

Russians Release Two Americans Unharmed

Berlin, July 16 — (AP)—Less than 12 hours after the Russians had released 2 Americans whom they had held incommunicado in the Soviet zone of Berlin for 15 days, United States Army headquarters announced today it was freeing three Russians held on suspicion of espionage.

The two Americans, WO. Samuel L. Harrison and his petite, brunette wife, Helen, were handed over unharmed to Maj.-Gen. Frank Keating, United States Berlin commander, at Russian headquarters here at 1:45 a.m.

Gen. Keating announced later that strenuous efforts were being made to effect the release of two other American officers, apparently held incommunicado by the Russians for almost two weeks.

A statement by Brig.-Gen. Edwin L. Sibert, chief of the headquarters intelligence division, said the three Russians had been held for two weeks in the United States sector of Berlin. Gen. Sibert said the three were wearing civilian clothes when arrested, and had entered the United States zone apparently for "clandestine operations."

He added that the arrests "in no wise violated any written, oral or implied quadripartite agreement in the city of Berlin" and that "our policy in the future must be the same or more severe, depending on the circumstances."

The Harrisons, at a press conference in the United States sector of Berlin, told how they had been arrested July 1 when they went 500 yards into the Russian district to visit a dog kennel.

The Russians kept the couple apart for the first two days of their imprisonment — Harrison in a dungeon-like cellar; his wife in a bare room. After that, they were reunited and received "passable food." Mrs. Harrison said she had answered "I don't know" when asked questions such as what ship had brought her to Germany, and how many troops had been aboard.

Meanwhile, although the Russians gave no official reason for the couple's prolonged imprisonment, United States Army officials intimated it had been in retaliation for the detention of the Russians by the Americans.

Meanwhile, American officials said they had no information of the whereabouts of Capt. Harold Cobin of Newark, N.J., and Lieut. George Wyatt of Oklahoma City, who were last seen July 4 boarding a train for Oranienburg, in the Russian zone. The officials said, however, that the Russians had promised to investigate their disappearance.

Brought into the army-sponsored press conference, Harrison had a two-day growth of beard. His wife, who had been on the verge of a breakdown when she was released, seemed composed.

"Those first two days during which we were subjected to considerable questioning were the most difficult, mainly because we were worried about one another," Harrison said.

"When we were released, everything that had been taken was returned intact — including our jeep."

Protest Groups Organize To Fight Rising Living Costs

Detroit, July 16 (AP)— Labor, veterans and civic groups across the United States were summoned today for demonstrations to protest the end of the office of price administration as the movement grew for buyers strikes against rising living costs.

In the first country-wide anti-inflation action since the O.P.A. expired July 1, the C.I.O. United Auto Workers Union called its 800,000 members off their jobs for two-hour meetings which President Walter Reuther declared "will herald a buyers strike such as this country has never known."

Many communities scheduled demonstrations later this week or next, while citizens committees and consumers councils in several cities scheduled one-day buyers strikes as a protest against the death of OPA.

In Detroit, citadel of the U. A. W.-C. I. O., most industrial plants faced a shutdown with U.A.W. officials estimating 250,000 C. I. O. members would attend today's protest meeting.

The union said nine-tenths of organized auto workers would leave their jobs, leaving only maintenance crews to man the plants.

A charge that the demonstration "is just a publicity buildup for the union boys" came from Charles E. Boyd, Secretary of the Detroit Retail Merchants Association.

"They might better stay on the job and help increase production," he said in a statement.

Chicago U.A.W. officials said 20,000 workers were expected to leave 60 plants today for a meeting at the 5,000-capacity Ashland Auditorium.

Similar rallies were called at Cleveland, where between 35,000 and 45,000 C.I.O. members were summoned from their jobs in 60 plants, and in other cities throughout Ohio, Indiana, Wisconsin and Michigan.

The Independent Citizens Committee in Rochester, N.Y., was sponsoring a buyers strike set for July 19, when representatives of labor, veterans and other local groups pledged themselves to buy nothing except bare necessities.

Revenue Minister Denies Report

Ottawa, July 16 (CP)—Revenue Minister McCann last night in the Commons denied the oft-quoted report that he had predicted in a speech at Renfrew, last March 11 that there would be a 50-per-cent reduction in income taxes this year.

Rising during the budget debate when G. S. White (PC—Hastings—Peterborough) mentioned the report, Dr. McCann said:

"I never made any such statement and the honorable member knows it."

He said that the statement had been made by several members, including John Bracken, Progressive Conservative leader, and observed that he was not responsible for newspaper headlines.

CHILD KILLED AT BULL FIGHT

Barranquilla, Colombia, July 16 —(AP)— A child, Hector Cortes, was killed at a bullfight when a bull shook off and sent into the grandstand a sword that a matador had just thrust into its back.

Search For Missing Plane Narrows

North Bay, July 16—(CP) — The search for the jet-propelled Gloster Meteor plane missing since June 29, was again focussed today on the Lavigne area 35 miles west of here.

A Royal Canadian Air Force Drummond Goose aircraft was scheduled to arrive here today from Ottawa to take part in the latest search, which began when Leonard Mayotte, a Lavigne district farmer, reported a 500-foot stretch of tree tops had been sheared, possibly by the wing of a plane.

Mayotte said he made his discovery after seeing a low-flying plane on the night of June 29.

Farmers searched the district on foot again today, and said they will examine the whole region at the west end of Lake Nipissing.

U.S. TO CO-OPERATE WITH ANY OR ALL OCCUPYING STATES

Necessity of Economic Unification of Zones Of Germany Pointed Out by Byrnes

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

Washington, July 16 — (AP)— The United States risked an open split with Russia today in an attempt to force economic unification of Germany.

State Secretary Byrnes said last night that orders giving Russia choice between co-operation or "economic paralysis" in Germany will go forward "this week" to Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, American military commander at Frankfurt.

The orders will be to co-operate with any or all of the other occupying powers — Britain, France and Russia — on finance, transportation, communication, trade and industry.

In a radio report to the American people on successes and failures of the four-power council of foreign ministers at Paris, Mr. Byrnes stated:

"We will either secure economic co-operation between the zones or place the responsibility for the violation of the Potsdam agreement."

President Truman listened in and telephoned congratulations to the United States state secretary immediately after the broadcast.

Russia declined at the Paris meeting to go along either on economic measures, guarantees for keeping Germany disarmed for 25 years, or the writing of a peace treaty for Austria.

Outlaw Bands Reported Holding 9 Jews Hostages

Warsaw, July 16 (AP)—Outlawed bands operating in the Kielce district were reported today to have seized nine Jews as hostages for nine Poles who were executed for setting off the July 4 pogrom at Kielce.

The nine Jews according to these advices from the troubled city of 60,000 south of Warsaw, were threatened with death at the time of their seizure if the lives of the Poles were not spared.

The nine Poles were executed in secret Sunday by a firing squad for thir part in the pogrom, which cost the lives of 41 persons, mostly Jews. News of the executions was not generally known in Kielce, however, since newspapers have not published it. A foreign ministry spokesman announced the shootings Monday.

3 PICKETERS ARRESTED

Montreal, July 16 —(CP)— Arrest of three picketers at the East-End Hochelaga Mill of Dominion Textile Company Limited yesterday marked the strike at four of the company's plants here which continues in its seventh week.

Four Powers in Berlin Get Along 'Very Satisfactorily' Says Gen. Keating

By HAL BOYLE

Berlin, July 16 (AP)— The Irish combat soldier who bosses the United States garrison in this show window of Allied occupation considers relations between the four powers in Berlin "very satisfactory."

Maj.-Gen. Frank A. Keating also reports that the army's "spit and polish" campaign has sharpened up occupation troops, but that results would be even better if the soldiers were more mature.

Gen. Keating, who rose from the ranks, said that "contrary to the general belief" a "friendly spirit prevails at all meetings, notwithstanding that we very frequently do not see eye to eye on all issues."

Gen Keating added that many of the Americans in the European theatre are young and just out of school, and haven't attained proper standards.

"I believe that if the average soldier was in an older age bracket we would be able to do more than we are now doing."

Gen. Keating said that despite "a howl from the cafe owners" he would continue for some time the "off lights" ban against German night clubs, cafes and restaurants in order to curtail black market activities and "deny prostitutes a convenient place to effect pick-ups."

Troops have complained this left them no place to take decent German girls. Gen. Keating pointed out that 'we do allow them to take frauleins to certain service clubs and other places for dancing."

Several Parallel Rings at Work; 9 New Names Noted

Comintern Seen Still Directing World Activity

By DOUGLAS HOW
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, July 16 (CP)— An historic document was before the public today with its 250,000-word exposure of a Russian fifth column that has drawn its lifeblood almost exclusively and with "uncanny success" from the cells of the Communist movement in Canada itself.

And one of the major warnings of its authors, the two Supreme Court Judges who comprised the Royal Commission on Espionage, was that in five months of driving work they had succeeded in unravelling the story of only one of its several parts. And even that story had its loose ends.

This final report of the Commission tumbled fact upon fact until its 733 pages spoke with an impact its authors obviously hoped the public would read and would heed. Amid the inforinformation, it disclosed that:

1. Not one but several parallel, secret Russian organizations were—and, in at least some cases, still are—at work in Canada, stemming from the Embassy in Ottawa.

2. It has been possible to look deeply into only the military intelligence system that operated under the military attache, Col. Nicolai Zabotin.

Much Information Fed to Moscow

3. That one alone was feeding to Moscow "a very great deal of secret information from a number of departments and agencies of government" and was concentrating on research developments "which would play an important part in the post-war defences of Canada, the Unit d Kingston and the United States."

4. One agent got the "wiring diagram" of the Canadian-developed "V.T." fuse that "knocked the Japanese air force out of the war;" samples of two types of uranium, the source of atomic energy, had been "delivered" and flown to Moscow; radar information "of the greatest importance" had been obtained and it "would be unwise to assume anything but that all Canada's anti-submarine information has been compromised;" mush top secret political information related to the policies of Canada, the United Kingdom and the United States went out.

Says Comintern Still Directing

5. Evidence corroborated a statement that the comintern, proclaimed dissolved three years ago, still is directing the world Communist movement from Moscow and indications are that the networks here report directly to it.

6. Russian agents have been active in Canada for as long as 22 years.

Espionage Report Highlights

Ottawa, Juluy 16 (CP)— Following are highlights of the final report of the Royal Commission on espionage:

The Soviet operated several spy rings in Canada along fifth column lines.

Extensive secret information was disclosed to the Soviet.

Recruits for spying were obtained chiefly from Communist Party ranks.

Successful efforts were made to obtain false passports.

Preparations for a third Great War were a common topic in the Soviet Embassy.

The commintern still directs Communist activities throughout the world.

Nine Canadians not previously named in reports were linked with spy activities.

Large-scale expansion of Col. Nicolai Zabotin's network was planned.

Activities of the Soviet secret police in Canada date back to 1924.

Bulk of technical information sought was on post-war defences.

Date on a highly secret VT fuse may have been disclosed.

Samples of stolen uranium were flown to Moscow.

More Soviet agents were to be brought into Canada with possibilities of sabotage.

Seven Kidnapped Marines Sought By Planes, Men

Peiping July 16 (AP) — More than 1,000 men and seven aircraft pressed the search today for seven United States Marines kidnapped Saturday by a band of 80 Chinese.

Marine Corps headquarters here said no trace had been found of the missing men, who were taken prisoner in a village near Chinwangtao.

All Marines in that area of North China have been put on the alert, a Marine Corps officer said. Two companies of 600 Marines and a similar number of Chinese government soldiers have been detailed for the search.

Chinese papers said the kidnappers were Communists, but there was no confirmation. Numerous bandit gangs operate in the area.

Meantime, Chinese press dispatches said a force of 80,000 Communists was attacking strategic Tatung in Shansi province, a weakly-defended city famed for its huge stone Buddhas.

A cease-fire team was reported en route there.

The government - controlled Central News Agency said the Communists had halted their attacks on the Tientsin-Pukow rail line in Hopei Province after more than a week of fighting, and that the Tsinan-Tsingtao line had been cleared of Reds.

City and District News

SMALL QUANTITY RASPBERRIES OFFERED

A small offering of seasonal fruits and vegetables greeted Tuesday morning shoppers on the city market.

Raspberries made their seasonal debut with a small supply of the red variety quoted at 50 cents the box.

Black sweet cherries were offered at $1.90 the six-quart basket with the Montmorency variety quoted at $1.75. A few boxes of English black currants sold at 60 cents each. Red and white currants were sold at 20 cents the box. Huckleberries brought 60 cents the box.

New potatoes sold at 70 cents the peck with cabbage and cauliflower ranging upwards to 35 cents the head.

CLOTHING RECOVERED

Clothing and other articles stolen last week from the City Cleaners on Moira Street, East, have been recovered, it was reported by police today. The stolen goods were found along the river-bank by a passerby who reported the find to police.

Entry was gained to the City Cleaners premises by breaking a door glass and turning the lock with approximately $500 worth of clothing, an electric drill and a metal order form being stolen. It is believed that all goods stolen were recovered. Investigation into the theft is being continued by police.

COL. R. VANDERWATER APPOINTED TWP. CLERK

Colonel Roscoe Vanderwater, Foxboro, was appointed clerk of the township of Sidney at a meeting of the township council held at Wallbridge Monday night.

Col. Vanderwater succeeds former clerk W. M. Nobes, who resigned from the position recently due to ill health.

Barbara Palmer Feted by Friends

The Misses Margaret and Mary Aman were hostesses on Friday evening at a miscellaneous shower in honor of Miss Barbara Palmer, bride-elect of this month. The room was prettily decorated with pink crepe paper streamers and hanging from the centre of the ceiling a parasol of pink fluted crepe paper with garlands of roses.

The evening was spent in playing cards, after which Barbara's gifts were presented to her in the form of a treasure hunt, the clues for which she found in the centres of the paper roses. Later dainty refreshments were served and Barbara very graciously thanked the girls for their lovely gifts and her hostesses for the delightful evening.

Local Golfers Score Low Cards In O.G.A. Tournament

Golfers from the Bay of Quinte Club and the Belleville Club entered the district O.G.A. tournament at the Cataraqui Golf Club in Kingston on Saturday.

Harry Ridley of the Belleville Club finished the eighteen holes with a score of 83 and Tommy Carruthers had an 84. Murray McIntosh took third place honors in B flight with a total of 84. Also playing were Ken Reid (86), Doug Green (88), and John Funnell (101).

The winner of the match was C. Baiden of Cliffside, Toronto, with a tally of 80.

Canada's Largest Air Liner Will Be In Service Soon

Montreal, July 16 (CP)—Test flight successfully completed last night, Canada's newest and largest aircraft—a four-engined transport designed to carry 40 passengers—today awaited official christening Saturday when it will be named the North Star by Mrs. C. D. Howe, wife of Reconstruction Minister Howe.

After the flight at the big Canadair plant in suburban Ville St. Laurent, test pilot Bob Brush of Santa Monica, Calif., said the transport "handled remarkably well," and that the four Rolls-Royce engines "performed perfectly."

The craft, development of which took some three years and employed 8,000 persons, will have a maximum cruising speed of 325 miles an hour, a non-stop range of 3,500 miles at an altitude as high as 28,000 feet. It will be used by Trans-Canada Air Lines and the Department of National Defence in trans-Atlantic, international and transcontinental services.

The plane is a combination of Trans-Canada and Douglas design with a British-built power plant.

The specially-designed, liquid-cooled engines—model 620 — are a development from engines used in the Spitfire, the Mosquito, the Lancaster, the Mustang and others.

A feature of the plane's equipment is "loran" a long-range navigation device which gives the pilot his location in a few seconds when flying as far as 1,500 miles from a shore station. The radio altimeter will give the pilot his exact height above water or ground.

Besides the regular radio beam, an automatic pilot can land the craft automatically.

HERO-ACTOR

Hailed as "The most decorated G. I.," Audie Murphy, 22, of Farmersville, Texas, has started his post-war career in motion pictures. Holder of 17 war decorations for bravery in eight different theatres of combat, the young war hero has just signed a contract and is to be groomed for important roles in forthcoming productions. Among his decorations are the Congressional Medal of Honor, three Purple Hearts, two Silver Stars, the Croix de Guere, the Service Cross and the Legion of Merit.

Press Party Finds Steel Mill Working at Two-Thirds Capacity

By TIM DICKSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Hamilton, July 16 (CP)— I spent three hours yesterday inside the big steel plant of the Steel Company of Canada against which the United Steel Workers of America (CIO) called a strike along with those of Sault Ste. Marie and Sydney.

At the time the strike was 10 hours old, and it was 24 hours since picket lines had been established.

Eight newspaper and radio men toured the giant works and when they left the plant after talking to dozens of workers and officials, they were agreed that production appeared to be two-thirds of normal.

Both company and union had agreed to the press tour, and picket captains had received notice that we were to pass through picket lines at the main gates of the Hamilton Works. The firm has two smaller plants here.

I was delayed in leaving my hotel, and the rest of the party went ahead and passed through the picket lines. I was left to go through the lines alone.

Challenged by Pickets

Half a dozen pickets challenged me. I told them I belonged to the press party for which passes had been arranged. A fair-haired union man whom I did not recognize as an official elbowed his way to the front and said:

"You can't print anything that's unfavorable to the union. If you do, you can't come back here tomorrow."

I said my instructions were to write a factual story, fair to both sides in the strike. The union men said they would let me through, and called after me that I could probably catch the others if I sprinted. The press group was waiting at the inner gate, well inside the main gates.

At the gate we met K. H. Gillies, works manager of Stelco's Hamilton Works. He said we could visit any part of the plant we wanted to see, and talk to any men. Only stipulations were that no names of workers were to be mentioned, and photographs should not show faces of workers. The conditions were the same as those we had agreed to when we made the arrangements.

We started out in motorcars and first stop was at the plant's bank of 130 coke ovens. That appeared to be in full operation. We saw glowing coke unloaded from an oven and were told the production of coke — mostly for use in the plant — was about 80 per cent of normal.

Foremen Run Furnace.

Next came one of the three giant blast furnaces. Workers said one was closed for repairs and another was banked, and out of production. The man in charge of the one in operation said all but one furnace man had left the plant. The remaining one, together with foremen and assistant foremen, were running the furnace and keeping production up to normal.

We donned colored goggles and peered through a peephole at the molten mass inside. Several men were working around the furnace. They said the furnace was producing iron which would be processed into steel elsewhere in the plant.

From there we went to the open hearth furnaces and saw that all were in operation.

Next was the blooming mill, where the big ingots were transformed into bars or slabs of steel. We followed the process from the time the red hot ingots started through a series of gargantuan crushers to the time they ended their journey as a number of incandescent strips at the far end of the mill.

Workers said the mill was running in two shifts instead of the usual three but that output for each shift was "right on the top line," as one man put it. They said some of the mill's experienced men had been loaned to other departments but as soon as they could be returned the mill would go back on three shifts.

Next call was at the sheet and strip mill, also on two shifts. When we saw it it was rolling steel slabs into big sheets, ½ inch thick, about eight feet wide and 40 feet long.

At the tin plant mill workers said production was about 25 per cent, that is the mill where imported "black plate" sheet metal is coated with tin.

Conditions Satisfactory

Three girls, all that remained of the normal working force of about 53 in the inspection department of the tinplate mill, were checking the tinplate turned out. We talked to them and they said they were satisfied with working conditions.

One of the reporters asked one girl what she thought of the union. She said: "They'd kill me if I ever tried to go through that picket line. They know how I feel about the union."

Here and there about the plant we saw double-decked cots. We toured an improvised dining hall in the shipping warehouse of the tinplate mill. Four electric ranges and a bank of two-plate electric burners provided cooking facilities. Behind them were stacks of canned goods and other foodstuffs. Dining hall workers said that on Sunday they had served 650 dinners. All through the plant we questioned workers about the meals. One said that he and his fellow-workers were "living like kings." He mentioned dinner dishes like chicken stew and barbecued beef. Another pointed to cases of oranges. The men in charge of the cooking said they served 'a normal restaurant meal' soup, two vegetables, meat, dessert and coffee.

Five dining halls were in operation in the plant, two of them company restaurants normally operated for the workers. Meals are free. So are cigarets.

We saw the 1,000 foot landing strip on company property facing the waterfront. A light plane was scheduled to land with supplies but a stiff cross wind was blowing when the aircraft approached and the pilot apparently decided not to risk a landing until the wind abated.

Men in the plant said they were working eight hours a day and being paid for 24 hours. The hourly rate was 10 cents higher than that paid before the strike.

Production Picture

This was the production picture drawn from talks with individual workers and foremen inside the plant:

Coke ovens, 80 per cent.

Blast furnaces (two capable of producing but only one operating) two-thirds of possible production.

No. 2 open hearth: full production.

No. 1 open hearth: partly closed.

Blooming mill, plate and strip mill: two-thirds normal.

Tinplate mill: 25 per cent.

Mihailovic Will Likely Be Shot Early Wednesday

Belgrade, July 16 (Reuters) — Gen. Draja Mihailovic's appeal against a death sentence imposed Monday was rejected today by the Presidium of the Yugoslav National Assembly. It was expected the beared former Chetnik leader would be executed at dawn Wednesday.

Mihailovic, former Yugoslav war minister and guerilla leader, was convicted and sentenced to death for collaboration with the Germans and other war crimes. The court ordered that he be executed by shooting.

Kingston Man Charged With Murder

Kingston, July 16 (CP) — Gerald Smith, 22, Kingston, was remanded to July 23 for preliminary hearing on a charge of murder when he appeared in court here yesterday as an aftermath of the fatal shooting of Richard Morgan of Kingston, July 7.

Smith, previously held on a vagrancy charge, told Magistrate J. B. Garvin he had had no opportunity to confer with counsel and said he understood W. F. Nickel, former Ontario Attorney-General, had been retained to defend him. Following his court appearance Smith was taken to the county jail and held under special guard.

Morgan was found dead at the wheel of his truck after police answered a call to Smith's home.

Bowmanville Mother Wears 3 Silver Crosses

Bowmanville, July 16 (CP) — Mrs. A. J. Colville of Bowmanville, believed the only Canadian mother whose three officer sons were killed in the Second Great War, wears three silver crosses in memory of her sons, Alex, William and John, all of whom died on active service with the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Mrs. Colville said John enlisted "to avenge the death of his brothers." The 21-year-old airman once wrote to a friend: "Every time I press the gun button, I think of my brothers, Alex and Bill."

Howard Hughes Somewhat Improved

Los Angeles, July 16 (AP) — Howard Hughes was somewhat improved today, nine days after his experimental photo reconnaissance plane crashed and burned in Beverly Hills on its maiden flight.

His doctors said Hughes' average pulse beat now is 120, his average temperature 101 and his white blood count 16,000. They administered a blood transfusion late last night to give him a lift, since he has moderate anemia.

The airplane builder-pilot has nine rib fractures, a collapsed left lung, and severe burns.

But for the first time, the physicians' bulletin last night omitted reference to his condition as "still critical."

ACCIDENT NOT AS BAD AS HIS DREAM.

Brantford, July 16 (CP) — Leslie Beckham's dream accident turned into reality but it wasn't as bad as the dream.

Last night he dreamed his truck crashed into a ditch through a wire fence, crushing him in the cab. The vision was so vivid he woke his wife to tell her about it.

Today the big truck he was driving overturned about four miles south of here. He was unhurt and the truck wasn't damaged much, but he felt the dream was too close to reality for comfort.

43 S.S. Troops Sentenced to Die For Slaughter of Americans, Belgians

Dachau, Germany, July 16 (AP) —An United States military court sentenced 43 veteran German S.S. troops to death today for the slaughter of 900 American soldiers and Belgian civilians during the Winter battle of the Ardennes Bulge.

The crimes were committed during Germany's last offensive around the Christmas season of 1944.

Prison sentences ranging up to life were given the other 30 of the 73 officers and men convicted last Thursday.

Col. Joachim Peiper, who gave the order that the S.S. troops were to take no prisoners, was one of those sentenced to die. Testimony was that he ordered frozen, exhausted and disarmed American prisoners shot during the battle and that the Germans sang songs of massacre on the eve of the offensive.

Col. Gen. Josef (Sepp) Dietrich, veteran of Adolf Hitler's abortive Beer Hall Putsch in 1923 in nearby Munich and commander of the German Sixth Panzer Army, was sentenced to life imprisonment. His troops spearheaded the December-January battle.

Lt.-Gen. Hermann Priess, commander of the 1st. S.S. Panzer Corps, was sentenced to 20 years in prison.

Peiper, the highest ranking officer among those sentenced to die, laughed when a photographer's flash bulb exploded in his face when the sentence was pronounced. Peiper was the daredevil commander of the "Task Force Peiper", an armored formation which included his own first S.S. Panzer Regiment. It was his men who participated in the massacre of American prisoners of war at the Belgian town of Malmedy, a key in the decisive battle.

Brig. Gen. Fritz Kraemer, chief of staff to Dietrich, was given ten years.

Hanging was provided for those sentenced to death. The doomed men asked the court for permission to be shot instead. The court announced that a recommendation to that effect would be made to Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, commander of United States forces in Europe.

Obituary

LATE MRS. LILLIAN FROST (Tweed)

Tweed, July 16 —(Special)— The funeral of Mrs. Lillian Frost, widow of J. George Frost, took place on Saturday afternoon, July 13th., from the Cassidy Funeral Home here. The service there and at Victoria Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. A. L. Sisco.

The bearers were Russell Frost, Charles Porritt, James Garrett, S. A. McCarey, J. A. Sager and H. S. Connor.

The late Mrs. Frost, who was in her 81st year, was born at Stratford, Ontario, and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Pratt. For some years she resided in Chatham, Ontario, and was the organist at Park Street United Church in that city for a considerable time. Forty years ago she came to make her home in Tweed. Her gifts as a musician were soon recognized and she became the organist at St. John's Methodist Church, later the United Church, and also taught a class in music as long as age and health permitted. Throughout her long residence here she held a high place in the regard of many friends.

She was the last of her family and is survived by four cousins, Mrs. (Rev.) E. Sexsmith, Cardinal, Ontario; Mrs. Oscar Chambers, Oso, Ontario; Mr. Bert Garrett, Three Rivers, Quebec, and Mr. James Garrett, Peterborough. Her husband died about three months ago.

JOHN GUERIN (Stoco)

Tweed, July 16 —(Special) — The funeral of John Guerin of Stoco, who died in the Belleville General Hospital on Friday, July 12th., took place on Sunday afternoon from the Cassidy Funeral Home here to St. Edmund's Church where the Libera was sung by the Rev. Father McCabe who also said the committal prayers at St. Edmund's Cemetery.

The bearers were William Whalen, Simon Whalen, William Mulroney, Patrick Mulroney, Cecil Cournyea and Simon Cournyea.

The deceased was born 90 years ago in Montreal and resided in the Stoco district for 45 years. His wife survives him. A daughter, Mary, died in 1927.

LATE MRS. S. F. SARGENT (St. Ola)

The funeral of Mrs. Sarah Frances (Embury) Sargent, wife of Mr. Morley P. Sargent, took place from her home at St. Ola on Monday afternoon to the United Church in that village where service was conducted by the Rev. James Wood, who also conducted the service at the graveside in St. Ola Cemetery.

The bearers were Patrick Plumb, Harry Phillips, Thomas Carroll, Edward Carroll, Frank Hubbs and David Mawson.

MRS. CHARLOTTE ROY (Trenton)

Mrs. Charlotte Roy, wife of Mr. Thomas Roy, Front Street, Trenton, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Monday afternoon. She was forty-two years of age and was a patient in the hospital since July 12th.

SEES MAN SLUMPED OVER WHEEL

Fort Erie, July 16 (CP)—On his way home from work yesterday Vick Ray saw a man slumped over the wheel of a car at the side of the road. He investigated and found the front seat covered with a pile of $5, $10 and $20 bills. He called the police, gathered up the bills. The man in the car slept on. In police court Hugh McCarthy, 38, Toronto, paid a $25 fine for careless driving.

CARD OF THANKS

Mr. Claude H. MacInnes and boys, Floyd and Donald wish to thank their many friends, neighbors, pallbearers, also those who so kindly provided cars, for their many acts of kindness, expressions of sympathy, and condolence and for their beautiful floral offerings during their recent sad bereavement of a loving wife and mother.

(Frankford Advocate and Bancroft Times please copy.)

Little Miss Heather MacDonald wishes to thank Dr. Locke and Dr. Scott, also her nurses, Miss Crowe and Miss Small for their kindness to her during her recent operation.

Play Lives Up To Advance Notice

By JACK O'BRIAN

New York, July 16—(AP)— Jules Pfeiffer, producer of a flat-tire satire called "Maid in the Ozarks," which opened last night at the Belasco Theatre, had the strange temerity to announce in advertisements prior to the Broadway premiere that his show would attract a critical consensus, as the "worst play ever seen on Broadway."

He is approximately perfect in his prognosis. A supposed lampoon of "Tobacco Road," this untidy little mess just about defies any other summation than the one so adequately anticipated by the producer.

SURVIVED BY 61 GRANDCHILDREN

Toronto, July 15 (CP) — Mrs. Melina Carrey, 83, a resident of the Sudbury district since 1883, died here yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Angeline Chouniard.

Mrs. Carrey is survived by a daughter, eight sons, 61 grandchildren and 12 great grandchildren.

A native of Bouchette, Que., she lived at Massey and Espanola, Ont., as well as Sudbury.

Famous Battalion of World War 1 To Hold Reunion in Ottawa in Aug.

Of the 5,211 men of all ranks who passed through the ranks of the 2nd Canadian Infantry Battalion C.E.F. (1914-1919) of whom 1,353 were killed or died of wounds, and 2,618 were wounded, there are still many survivors of that famous unit, known as the "Iron Second". Most of these survivors are living in Ontario and western Quebec, and they, with their sons, who saw service in World War II, are to have a reunion in Ottawa from August 3rd to 5th.

Major H. H. Hester, President of the Ottawa Branch of the old battalion association, which has more than 300 members, has arranged a three day program, features of which are a dinner at the Chateau Laurier, a special service on Sunday afternoon, August 4th, around the Battalion Colors in the Military Museum, followed by the placing of a wreath at the National War Memorial in memory of those of the battalion's dead, and special entertainment. The Drill Hall, Cartier Square, is to be the registration and assembly point during the reunion. The battalion is perpetuated by affiliation with the Governor General's Foot Guards, of Ottawa, and the Prince of Wales' Rangers of Peterborough, Ont. The battle honors on the G.G.F.G. and Prince of Wales' Rangers regimental colors represent 10 of the 21 engagements in which the battalion took part in France and Belgium.

Major H. H. Hester, President, Ottawa Branch, 2nd Battalion Association.

Highlights of History

A glance over some of the highlights of the 2nd Battalion's history indicates that the survivors and their sons are well justified in not letting the record pass into the limbo of the forgotten. The battalion, a vounteer force, was organized at Valcartier, Que., on September 26, 1914. It proceeded to England as unit of the First Brigade, First Division, sailing from Gaspe Basin, on October 3rd, and landing at Plymouth on October 14, 1914. The winter of 1914-15 was spent under canvas on Salisbury Plains—and what a wet, cold winter it war. In February 1915, the unit was sent to France and received its baptism of fire in the Armentiers Sector. It was in the line and held the left flank at the Battle of Neuve Chapelle. The Germans used poison gas for the first time in modern warfare at Ypres on April 22, 1915, against troops wholly unprepared for this type of attack. The line was broken and the 2nd Battalion was one of the units rushed into the breach. Greatly outnumbered and with no protection against the chlorine gas except dampened handkerchiefs, the 2nd Battalion not only held the line but also made repeated attacks against strong enemy positions. The Battalion went into this action with four companies of approximately 240 men each. Its total casualties were over seven hundred. No. 1 Company had only 18 survivors.

Vanguard of the "First"

As the Vanguard of the First Canadian Division, the Battalion was the first organized unit of the Canadian Infantry to cross the German Frontier. This event took place at Poteau on December 4, 1918. The Rhine was crossed at Cologne on December 13, 1918, and for nearly four weeks the Battalion garrisoned the outpost line at Lohmar and Seefscheld in Germany. Two members of the 2nd Battalion, Cpl. Leo Clarke and Major Okill Massey Learmonth, won the Victoria Cross. Other awards were: eleven D.S.O.'s, fifty-three M.C.'s, forty-one D.C.M.'s, one hundred and sixty-one M.M.'s and many other British and Allied distinctions. In the Menin Gate at Ypres are the names of 326 officers and men who met death in that salient and have no known grave. Members of the 2nd Battalion fought in North Russia, Italy, Persia, the mountains of Kurdistan, Siberia, and the Balkans. It was demobilized at Kingston, Ont., on April 23, 1919.

Among the Belleville men who served with the "Iron Second" are Lieut. Col. B. C. Donnan; Lieut. Col. Roscoe Vanderwater; the late Col. "Paddy" O'Flynn and others.

Union Head Critical Of Mitchell Tactics

Toronto, July 16 (CP)—Joseph McKenzie, Canadian Director of the United Rubber Workers of America (C.I.O.), charged Labor Minoster Mitchell of adopting tactics "that come perilously close to strike-breaking" in the strike involving 10,000 Ontario rubber workers.

The union director said the minister has sent letters to all the strikers urging them to accept settlement proposals contained in a report of Judge J. C. A. Cameron of Belleville, government-appointed commissioner.

In his letter the minister was, in effect, calling on the union to rebel against its leadership which had rejected the Cameron report proposals, he said. The mailing list was obtained from the companies, the union leader charged, describing the action as "unprecedented in the history of the Federal Labor Department."

MAN IS IDENTIFIED

Toronto, July 16 (CP)—Police in suburban Leaside identified as William Morrow of Preston a 72-year-old man they found Sunday wandering about the Don River Bridge.

The aged man left his home in Preston Friday to attend an Orange Lodge July 12 celebration in Welland and when he failed to return home a search was instituted by Preston and Welland police.

When found here by police he had no means of identification and could not recall his name. His description was circulated by police and he was identified by relatives.

SEVERAL PARALLEL

nounced the commission's existence, the report added nine names to those already linked with the investigation. There was no immediate indication as to if and when any of the persons would be detained or with what they might be charged.

It was considered possible that something might develop from a meeting at the Justice Department here tomorrow or prosecution counsel connected with spy cases in Montreal and Ottawa.

Of the 14 persons so far charged in Canada, four have been sentenced to prison and one has been discharged from court. Two of those sentenced have appealed and their cases and those of the others still awaiting trial have all been stood over until Autumn.

Nine New Names Mentioned

The report listed the new names under several headings. Said to have organized "cells" from which agents were recruited or to have acted as media for communication of information were: Agatha Chapman, 39, Bank of Canada employee in Ottawa; Freda Linton—now vanished—former secretary to John Grierson when he headed the National Film Board; Samuel Sol Burman, Montreal insurance agent, and Henry Harris, Toronto optometrist.

Named as active in procuring a false Canadian passport were Sam Carr, now vanished, too, but "one of the two main cogs" of The Zabotin chain; Henry Harris; Dr. John Soboleff, Toronto doctor and W. M. Pappin, Ottawa passport office clerk.

Named as not active in subversive activities "but would have done so if required" were A. Norman Veall, Montreal, an R. A. F. officer; Fred Chubb, Montreal chemist, and Jack Isidor Gottheil, Montreal, an army captain.

Five Known by Code Names

Five others still were known only by their code names. Still another, Germina Rabinovitch, temporarily in Canada with the International Labor office, had admitted carrying out certain financial activities here in connection with a network in Europe but under Zabotin's supervision.

The Commission said Carr had probably been sent to Canada in 1924 after "schooling" in Moscow and that he had acted as an agent since. Fred Rose, 38, his twin as a cog, was an agent as far back as 21 years ago. Now a member of parliament, he has been imprisoned for his activities, but has appealed a six-year sentence.

It renewed its contention that Dr. David Shugar, former naval anti-submarine expert now back with the health department, communicated confidential information for Russia. Magistrate Glenn Strike has refused to commit him on a charge of conspiracy.

Communism Within Canada 'Principal Base'

On "overwhelming evidence," the commission charged the Communist movement in Canada was "the principal base within which the espionage network was recruited."

Adopting various disguises, such as social gatherings, music-listening groups and groups for discussing international politics and economics, its members and sympathizers brought forth the "candidates" for "agents" who fitted into the spy networks after careful scrutiny both here but always finally in Moscow.

Feeding on this bloodline, the commission said, are several networks. Zabotin's was apparently only one of two military networks. There was a political group. The N.K.V.D. or secret political police still was "powerful" here. Zabotin was planning a large-scale, post-war expansion when he left late last year and a naval system of intelligence was under preparation.

Only Zabotin's Group Deeply Probed

But only Zabotin's group had been probed deeply because only on his were there documents available. Igor Gouzenko, Zabotin's former cipher clerk who uncovered these documents, could only tell general facts about the other networks. There was a cipher clerk for each, but each clerk knew only about his own work.

STEEL

The union official said that men were continuing to come out of the plant.

The cit yremained quiet. No incidents had been reported last night, and apparently there were no attempts to break through the picket lines. A company announcement said arrangements had been made whereby relatives of men in the plant could communicate with them through a downtown office opened by the company yesterday for that purpose.

Refer to Coke Production

Union sources indicated that if the Federal government attempts to defeat the local strike, the union would order maintenance crews out of the coke ovens at the Sault and Sydney plants. Unlike Hamilton, the two other plants are large producers of coke for shipment, and their output is said to be a factor in feleral plans to meet any fuel shortage next winter. The union estimated the strike so far at Sydney and the Sault has caused a loss of 3,450 tons of coke.

In Sydney, the giant stacks of the Dosco plant were smokeless as the industry, strikebound by walkout of 4,303 of its employees, functioned on an organized maintenance schedule. The gradual slowdown of operations which got underway Saturday was expected to be complete today.

Quiet on Strike Front

All was quiet on the strike front. Union headquarters had lined up plans for the men assigned to maintenance of furnaces, a plan agreed upon by the union in exchange for assurance of no strike-breaking methods by the company.

Back in Hamilton, another C.I.O. union, the United Electrical Workers, announced plans to establish joint action committees representing striking U.E.L. workers at Hamilton Westinghouse, striking workers of Firestone Tire and Rubber Company—members of the C.I.O. United Rubber Workers Union—and the steel workers to handle suh matters as financial support and publicity.

The steel union is striking for a 40-hour work week and basic minimum wage of $38.60, which would mean a 1 1-2 cents an hour increase at Hamilton and the Sault, and 24 1-2 cents an hour at Sydney.

Will be Dismissed From the Service

London, July 16 (CP) — Capt. Harold Francis Dixon of Vancouver, B.C., found guilty by a General Court Martial in Amsterdam last May of giving false evidence to an earlier Amsterdam Court Martial, has been setenced to be dismissed from the service, Canadian Military Headquarters announced.

Tried on five charges, Dixon was found guilty of four by the court but only three were confirmed by military authorities. At the first Court Martial last March, Dixon, a member of the Foyal Canadian Ordnance Corps, faced charges of improperly disosing of dealing in army property. Statements he hade under oath at the hearing were the subject of the second Court Martial.

Kentucky Battle Claims 3 Lives

Harlan, Ky., July 16 (AP) — Sheriff J. S. Cawood reported that three men were killed Sunday in a remote section of the eastern Kentucky mountains when the male members of two families "shot it out in the middle of the road" following an argument about a poker game.

The Harlan sheriff said it had not been determined how many men took part in the gun battle.

Sheriff Cawood identified the dead as: Lloyd See, 64, a farmer, shot four times with rifle bullets. Arthur Muncy, 64, a farmer, shot 10 times with rifle bullets. Rufus Muncy, 24, son of Arthur Muncy, shot 14 times with rifle bullets.

TORONTO SPORTSMAN DED

Toronto, July 16 (CP)—Frederick Charles Foster, 78-year-old Torontonian, well known to city sportsmen, died yesterday in hospital. Born in Toronto, Foster was a high-wheel bicycle champion in his youth and was a member of the early lacrosse teams on which Sir Sam Hughes and James Hughes played. He went overseas in 1916 with the 180th Sportsmen's Battalion and served for two years.

NOMINATED FOR BY-ELECTION

London, July 15 (CP Cable) — D. G. West, Labor and Peter Welch, Conservative, today were nominated for the July 23 by-election caused by the death of A. Jenkins, Labor. Mr. Jenkins had a 19,383 majority over the Conservative candidate in the general election last July.

U. S. Loan to Britain

The United States loan to Britain to the amount of three and three-quarter billion dollars is seen as having a number of important results not only for the United States and Britain but for the world. These include improvement from the austere manner of life which the people of the British Isles have been forced through circumstances of war and their readiness to help nations in a sorry plight, though the effect is not seen as likely to be felt immediately, it is said. Another benefit is improvement of world trade. And not least important is the sense of comradeship of the British and American peoples which reached a high level in the war period. Britain too has always been the United States' best customer.

Canada some time ago advanced a substantial loan to Britain and it was heralded at the time as lending a real measure of stability to the world.

British Policy for Germany

The piece de resistance at Thursday's sitting of the Council of Foreign Ministers was Mr. Bevin's statement on British policy for Germany.

On long term policy, Mr. Bevin confined himself to re-affirming the United Kingdom Government's approval of the American plan for a twenty-five (or forty) year treaty to keep Germany disarmed. Mr. Bevin also declared that the United Kingdom Government favored united control by the Four Great Powers, with the co-operation of their allies, as the best approach to the problem of ensuring European peace. That approach was most likely to produce the greatest stability.

In the matter of short term policy, the United Kingdom Government stands by the Potsdam Agreement on condition that it is fully carried out in spirit as in letter.

But one of the main Potsdam provisions is not being carried out — the provision that Germany should be treated as an economic whole. This is the basis of the economic structure designed at Potsdam. On it depend reparations, the balance of exports and imports, and the minimum living standard which Potsdam prescribed for the German population.

Mr. Bevin devoted the major part of his statement to this acute problem. At present, it is pointed out in London, there is a disparity of economic practice in the four zones. In the Russian zone there is a surplus of food and other essentials, of which there is a grave deficit in the other zones. Instead of making this surplus available to the other zones (not gratis, but for payment,) the Russians are taking it for reparations. The Potsdam Agreement does not permit such removal of surpluses unless the total German exports balance the total German imports. The result is that the United Kingdom and U.S.A. Governments are compelled to make up the deficits in their zones out of the pockets of British and American taxpayers. This is costing Britain's taxpayers £80,000,000 a year and American taxpayers £50,000,000 a year. This could be avoided if there ware co-operation to distribute surpluses between the four zones on a reciprocal basis.

In this connection, Mr. Bevin uttered a serious warning. "I must formally state that the United Kingdom will co-operate on a fully reciprocal basis with the other zones. But insofar as there is no reciprocity from any particular zone, or no agreement to carry out the whole of the Potsdam protocols, His Majesty's Government will be compelled to organize the British zone in such a manner that no further liability shall fall on the British taxpayer." Mr. Bevin did not specify what measures the United Kingdom Government would feel obliged to take in the eventuality depicted. He rather emphasized the hope that as a result of the present discussions of the foreign ministers, such action might be unnecessary.

It may be presumed, however, that the United Kingdom Government would have to consider, firstly, the raising of the level of German industrial production in the British zone to enable exports to pay for imports; secondly, the withholding of German industrial equipment earmarked for reparations to Russia, as the U.S.A. Government has already done in the American zone.

Mr. Bevin, however, was not content with uttering a warning. He submitted a practical proposal, the adoption of which would eliminate the need for a warning.

The proposal was as follows. "In order to put into practice the principle of treating Germany as an economic whole, and to regulate in an orderly manner the taking of reparations from current production, the Four Powers agree: firstly, there should be equitable distribution of indigenous resources throughout Germany. Secondly, indigenous resources surplus to approved requirements of one zone must be made available to meet any deficit in the approved requirements of the other zones. The council for Germany should establish a procedure whereby the four occupying powers may satisfy themselves that the principle is being effectively carried out."

"If the surplus of current production in any zone is not required in that zone or in any other zone, it may be exported as reparations only if there is no deficit on the balance of payments in any other zone. Should such a deficit exist, the surplus must be treated as a commercial export and paid for in acceptable currency, the proceeds being used towards meeting the said deficits. The proceeds of exports from stocks shall be treated similarly."

The American, French and Russian representatives undertook to study Mr. Bevin's proposal.

In the course of the discussion which followed Mr. Bevin's statement, Mr. Bidault made the announcement that the French Government had decided to give provisional approval to the principle of German economic unity, inclusive of the Ruhr, Rhineland and Saar, which France wants separated from the Reich. This decision of the French Government is warmly welcomed in British quarters as putting an end to the uncertainty which has contributed to hamper Allied co-operation in administering Germany.

On the other hand, Mr. Molotov, who spoke after Mr. Bidault, made no positive response to Mr. Bevin's call for greater co-operation.

Study Use of Radar for Blind

British scientists may use a radar device in a portable guiding instrument for the blind. They are working on a committee on sensory devices for the blind set up by St. Dunstan's, famous United Kingdom Organization for men and women blinded on war service. Speaking about the committee's work recently, Sir Ian Fraser, chairman of St. Dunstan's, said: "We don't imagine radar can make a blind man see but something analogous to radar may be used in constructing our guiding instrument." This instrument — it is often referred to as the "ear torch" — would emit rays which, reflected back from obstacles, would indicate their distance. Already laboratory models designed for St. Dunstan's are capable of giving notice of obstacles by a warning note and calculating their distance bo a focusing device. Much research, however, is still necessary before the instrument is perfected. Another of the committee's projected aids for the blind is a print-reading apparatus. It is hoped to evolve a machine which will convert any type of print into sound, achieving a kind of synthetic speech. One difficulty is to devise a simple code for the translation of print into sound so that it can be "read" easily.

TIME

Time is a heartless, sullen thing
That pays no heed to serf or king
 Or wish or prayer.
The hands upon the clock go round,
The chimes the even hourrs will sound
 Upon the air
Though mightiest of men cry: "Stay!"
Or: "Hurry, hurry on your way!"

Time needs not either love or hate
Or place or circumstance or fate
 Or right or wrong.
Indifferent to human will
Or hope of good or fear of ill,
 It moves along.
For rich or poor, or sad or gay,
Time keeps the self-same steadfast way.

No plea is heard; no whim allowed;
The great, the wealthy and the proud
 Can seize no more.
The wish of millions, or of one,
Time disregards and passes on—
 Just as before.
Nothing on earth Time's step can stay;
From all men's grasp it slips away.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS.

20 YEARS AGO

July 16th., 1926

The announcement is made today that Mrs. E. J. Neate has decided to retire from business on Front Street and will not continue in any other location. Mrs. Neate has been actively engaged in business in this city for over twenty three years and her reputation as a business woman and her record for fair dealing in business is indeed enviable. It is to be regretted that the name E. J. Neate is to be eliminated from our Front Street business section.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank McCarty left today on a motor trip to Sarnia.

Mrs. M. O'Donohue, Campbellford is the guest of Mrs. F. Fitzpatrick, John Street.

Mrs. C. A. W. Thompson and daughter, Hope, are visiting friends in Kingston.

Mr. Russell Woodley is spending a vacation of two weeks at Crowe Lake.

Mrs. Sidney Smith has returned to the city after a visit with friends in the United States.

30 YEARS AGO

July 16th., 1916

Mr. Clarence Lapp of Brighton was in town today.

Mr. James Wilson of the Montreal Herald, who resided in Belleville forty five years ago and was an employee of the old Chronicle and Ontario, is renewing acquaintances in the city.

Mr. C. M. Reid and a party of friends left today on a motor trip to New York City.

Mr. Harry Fitzpatrick of Rochester, N.Y., is here on a visit to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Fitzpatrick, Church Street and also his brother Mr. James Fitzpatrick, Trenton.

Mrs. R. P. Niven of Montreal is visiting her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Draycott.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Why is chinaware called porcelain?

"Porcelain" literally means "little pig" and the story of its application to chinaware is interesting.

It is derived through French from Italian "porcellana," which in turn is a diminutive derived from Latin "porcus," hog, or "porca," sow.

Sometime during the 13th century, or earlier, the Italians gave the name "porcelana" to Venus shells and other univalves belonging to the genus Cypraea. Why this odd name was given to these shells is a point that has not been definitely settled. The conventional explanation is that the shells were so called because the curved shape of the upper surface was fancied to resemble the raised back of a little pig. It is easy, says the Oxford dictionary, to make toy pigs with Venus shells and putty, and such toys are sometimes seen on the market.

However, Ernest Weekley offers a different explanation. He says that the shell took its name from the shape of the orifice — "porca," sow, being used for "vulva" in Latin. At any rate, a certain fine white earthenware first made in China was called "porcellana" because it resembled the interior of the shell in smoothness and whiteness or because it was popularly supposed to be made of the same substance.

The story that "porcelain" is derived from French "pour cent annes," for a hundred years, because it was formerly believed that the material used in making this earthenware was matured underground for a century, does not ring true and has the earmarks of being a mere conjecture.

Porcelain was made in China as early as the fifth century A.D. and was introduced into Europe in the latter part of the 16th. "China dishes" occurs in Shakespeare's Measure for Measure" (1603).

It is a fancy, that can be neither proved nor disproved, that an alchemist discovered the process of making porcelain while experimenting with a view of obtaining a mixture of earth most suitable for durable crucibles.

Newsprint Production Increased 29.7 Percent

New York, July 15 (CP) — Canadian newsprint mills during the first six months of 1946 produced 458,422 tons more than during the same period of 1945, an increase of 29.7 per cent, the Newsprint Service Bureau reported yesterday.

Output in Newfoundland was up 16,224 tons or 9.9 per cent, and in the United States up 20,224 tons or 5.5 per cent more than during the first half of 1945.

Production in Canada during June totalled 334,207 tons and shipments 322,805 tons.

Stocks of newsprint paper at the end of June were 123,161 tons at Canadian mills; 69,879 tons at Newfoundland mills and 6,416 tons at United States mills, making a combined total of 199,456 tons.

BURIAL OF VICTIM OF DROWNING

Napanee, July 15—(CP)—Funeral service was held today at Roblin for Levy Ellen Llowarch, four, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Llowarch, of Carmen, Man., who was accidentally drowned in the Salmon River Saturday 10 miles north of here. Her parents just arrived the previous day and were visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Volney Woods, Roblin. The girl was on a fishing trip with her father.

CLAXTON PICTURES

Prime Minister Mackenzie King tabled report of the Royal Commission on Espionage, which he said confirmed the seriousness of the situation which led to establishment of the Commission.

Study Distribution of Reparations

Mr. King also announced that an inter-departmental committee is studying methods for distributing war reparations when they are received from Germany.

Veterans Minister Mackenzie announced the signing of an agreement with the British Columbia provincial government in connection with the settling of war veterans on British Columbia lands. He gave no details.

During the budget debate, Mr. Claxton said 629,000 more persons were employed in Canada now than in 1939 and added that production and earnings were higher than in any other peacetime period. Output of goods was at an all-time high.

He said the savings of individuals had triples since 1939 while the debts of leading companies had declined from $139,000,000 in that pre-war year to $66,000,000. Rates of tax reductions from their wartime high were greater than those in Britain, the United States, Australia and New Zealand.

In addition, prices were more effectively controlled than in any other country while the Canadian dollar was as strong as any other currency. Repatriation and demobilization had been more successful than had been expected and Canada's veterans' legislation led the world.

Reputation Enhanced

Mr. Claxton said Canada's cooperation in the international sphere and the state of her domestic affairs had enhanced her reputation throughout the world. This reputation had been built up through the government's handling of economic and other problems.

Mr. Reid expressed disappointment that the new federal offer to the provinces, as outlined in the budget, did not include a social security program and said that "we must not allow two provinces to run this country forever."

He also urged revision of rental regulations, which were giving some landlords a "terrific" beating, and asked for an investigation into alleged reports of irregularity in the distribution of Unrra supplies in Europe.

G. S. White Speaks on Succession Duties

Mr. White said changes in succession duties proposed in the budget would mean an increase of 100 per cent in duty for small estates and expressed belief all tax reductions should have been made retroactive to July 1 instead of being deferred to next Jan. 1.

The income tax collection system also should be overhauled and brought up to date.

Mr. Bryce argued that exemptions proposed for personal income tax were too low and also expressed criticism of the proposal to tax co-operatives. This iction would destroy the co-operative principle and turn co-operatives into profit-making bodies.

U.S. TO CO-OPERATE

But on the success side of the ledger Mr. Byrnes listed the calling of a peace conference for July 29 to consider treaties, drafted in tentative form at the Paris council, for Italy and the former Axis satellites.

Prospects are bright, he said, for treaties that will let the people of five occupied states "live and breathe as free people."

The state secretary said he was ready to believe it was as difficult for the Russians to understand us as it is for us to understand them.

"But I sometimes think our Soviet friends fear we would think them weak and soft if they agreed without a struggle on anything we wanted, even though they wanted it too."

Saying Russia was "hard pressed" to find real objection to a treaty to keep Germany impotent for 25 years, Mr. Byrnes asked: "Is German militarism going to be used as a pawn in a struggle between the east and the west and is German militarism again to be given the chance to divide and conquer?"

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

Signed letters, not more than one page or 100 words long, pertaining to personal health and hygiene, not to disease, diagnosis or treatment, will be answered by Dr. Brady if a stamped self addressed envelope is enclosed. Letters should be brief and written in ink. Owing to the large number of letters received only a few can be answered here. No reply can be made to queries not conforming to instructions. Address Dr. William Brady, care of this newspaper.

Readers addressing letters to Dr. Brady will please include the word "Canada" on their return envelopes, as these letters have to be forwarded to Dr. Brady. And it is requested that readers use standard size envelopes that will hold a small booklet

SO YOU NEVER EAT POTATOES?

In the past two years, writes Miss R. T., I have gained thirty pounds. It is not that I eat very much, in fact I never eat potatoes:...

There seems to be a popular obsession that potato is "fattening." The lady goes on to list what she does eat, including so many slices of bread a day....

Weight for weight, bread is nearly three times as "fattening" as potato—that is, it yields nearly three times as many calories.

Anyway, it isn't the food itself but the quantity of it that one consumes that determines whether it is "fattening" or not. As between potato and bread or anything made of wheat flour or any cereal, it is generally easier to get fat on the cereal or cereal product than it is on potato. Seldom if ever does one eat potato when one is not hungry—but with cookies, cakes and the like it is different. These titbits, like so-called ice "cream"—much of which has scarcely enough butter fat to merit the name—and pudding and sweetened carbonated beverages and candy, are well suited for eating when you are not hungry and do not need nourishment.

If your purpose is to reduce, then, it would be more sensible and perhaps more healthful to restrict your daily intake of breadstuff, cake, pie, pudding, ice cream, candy and sweetened beverages—unless they are sweetened with saccharin instead of sugar. Any one may use up to 5 grains a day of saccharin with impunity. A tablet of one-fourth grain gives the sweetening effect of about a teaspoonful of sugar.

The protein (nitrogenous material) in potato is of the highest biological value, that is, it contains all of the amino-acids essential for good nutrition, whereas the protein in wheat is of lower biological value, lacking certain amino acids required for good nutrition.

Potato is a good source of vitamin C, if it has not been kept too long in storage. Ordinary cooking, particularly steaming in the skin, destroys little or none of the vitamin C in potato, but if the cooked potato stands half an hour or more before it is eaten it loses most of its vitamin C value. Baked potato loses 20 percent of its vitamin C during baking, and the loss is over 50 percent when the baked potato stands half an hour or more on the steam table or in the oven before it is eaten. Mashed potato, I tell you dispassionately, loses nearly 30 percent of its on standing hot for half an hour or more.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Coffee

Have Ben Told that a cup of coffee each morning will make my blood pressure go up.

(Mrs. P. D.)

Answer—I don't know what ails you, if anything, Ma'am, but whatever it may be, I imagine that if I were in your place I'd advise Ben to tell it to the Marines and enjoy my coffee without much concern about any ill effect on blood pressure.

Luck, Eh?

Having had such fine luck with by Brady Babies I'd like to have a copy of your pamphlet about common stomach troubles—the Yanks Are Coming.

(Mrs. W. H. L.)

Answer—Luck, nothing. If you bore 'em and raised 'em by the Brady Baby Book of course they are fine specimens. Any one going into the baby business should have the handbook—send ten cents and stamped self addressed envelope for The Brady Baby Book. Send stamped self addressed envelope for the pamphlet Yankee Stomach.

"Strange Army" Invades Spruce Forests in West

The Pas, Man., July 16 (CP)—Two entomologists from the Federal Department of Agriculture left here by airplane yesterday for an area near the junction of the Stupert and Fox Rixers, about 350 miles northeast of here. They will investigate recent reports that an army of strange insects are causing extensive damage to spruce forests here.

Vote to Strip Geneva Red Cross Committee Of Its Authority

Oxford, England, July 15 (CP)—A Russian proposal to strip the Geneva International Red Cross committee of its authority won unanimous approval of two commissions today at a conference of the League of Red Cross Societies.

"At present the International Red Cross committee, made up exclusively of Swiss citizens, has occupied the role of supreme arbitrator," a League spakesman said.

"A movement is developing in the League, which is made up of 60 individual societies, to make the League the supreme authority."

British Scientists Work on New 'Ear' For Deaf People

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Teddington, Middlesex, July 16 (CP)—A mass spectograph used in the development of the atomic bomb is off the secret list of the National Physical Laboratory, home of British scientific research.

The spectagraph was employed to distinguish between uranium 235 and uranium 238, an experiment closely linked with atomic research in Canada. A newly- designed spectagraph now is under construction but its details have not been disclosed.

Scores of other researches are going on this metropolis of science housed in 16 buildings covering 50 acres.

Visiting members of parliament saw themselves represented in one laboratory by electric light bulbs—each the equivalent of two members—concealed under aluminum covers, suggestive of inverted beer tankards.

A scientist explained that the bulbs demonstrated the body heat of members who will sit in the new House of Commons Chamber when it is completed in 1950. They were experimenting, he said, to find the best ventilating and heating system for the new chamber which replaces the one bombed out in 1940.

A supersonic wind-tunnel, built in 1942, was used during the war to study the behavior of projectiles travelling faster than the speed of sound—more than 700 miles an hour.

Outside the tunnel is an apparatus through which can be seen a stationary shell which, for scientific purposes, is "travelling" at 700 miles an hour. Beyond this speed the shell collides with a shock-wave which registers the force of impact.

Thousands who live in silence are being assisted by experiments with new aids for the deaf. Scientists are working on a cheap, efficient artificial "ear" to be issued under the National Health Service. The instruments will vary in design with pocket-types for men and handbag types for women but circuits will be identical and may be tuned to the required frequency.

Group of Insurance Representatives Attends Educational Congress

At the Educational Congress held in Kingston by the Manufacturers Life Insurance Company last week, the Belleville Division was well represented. Among those attending were Mr. A. Gilbert Stackhouse, supervisor, Belleville Division, Mr. W. Harold Cameron, Belleville, Mr. H. Malcolm Hicks, Picton, Mr. J. R. Smith, Napanee and Mr. J. J. Bronson, Bancroft.

The Belleville Division were leading producers in the Kingston Branch in the production of new insurance for the first six months of 1946.

Fatal After-Effects Of Atomic Bomb

Kawjalent, uly 15—(AP)—Atomic bomb violence at Bikini was considerably greater than at first pictured, it was intimated today by an officer who reported that animals which withstood the concussion of the blast now are "dying like flies."

The officer said the animals may appear healthy and have a normal blood count one day and just "drop off the next day."

Predicts Buyers' Strike

Chicago ,July 16 (AP) — A buyers' strike "such as this country has never known" will be touched off, President Walter P. Reuther of the C.I.O. United Auto Workers says, from the country-wide series of mass meetings scheduled by the union for today.

Reuther, addressing a meeting of union members of suburban Cicero, reported "our objective is the organization in every American city of a General Consumers' Committee, with a U.A.W. leadership, of religious, civic, community and other labor groups."

He reiterated plans for 800,000 C.I.O.-U.A.W. members walking off the job at 3 p.m. today to attend rallies as a protest demonstration against inflation.

Status Espionage Suspects Reviewed

Ottawa, July 16—(CP)—Court proceedings against Canadians originally detained for suspected espionage activities are marking time now until the autumn.

Of the 14 detained, 13 were picked up Feb. 15, the day Prime Minister Mackenzie King bared the royal commission probe into Russian espionage. One has since been freed. The 14th, Fred Rose, Labor-Progressive member of parliament for Montreal-Cartier, was detained later.

This is their current status:—

Discharged from court:

Dr. Davis Shugar, former navy anti-submarine expert now back with the Health Department in Ottawa.

Sentenced and serving terms:

Mrs. Emma Wolkin, external affairs cipher clerk, and Miss Mary Kathleen Willsher, ex-deputy registrar in the office of the British high commissioner, the former to 2½ years, the latter to three.

Sentenced and appealing:

Fred Rose and Edward Mazerall, National Research Council engineer, the former six years, the latter to four.

To face courts in Ottawa in fall:

Gordon Lunan, Canadian Information Service official; Prof. Israel Halperin of Queen's University, ex-army ballistics expert; Durnford Smith, N.R.C. engineer, all by speedy trial by judge alone; James Scotland Benning and H. S. Gerson, ex-munitions department officials, M. S. Nightingale, former R.C.A.F. communications officer, who will appear before Ontario Supreme Court juries.

To face Montreal jury in fall:

Dr. Raymond Boyer, McGill University professor and explosives expert.

Committed for trial but not yet arraigned in any court:

Eric Adams, Bank of Canada official, and F. W. Poland, former R.C.A.F. intelligence officer.

In addition, Mrs. Wolkin has been sentenced to six months and Lunan, Adams and Nightingale to three months each for contempt of court in the Rose trial at Montreal.

Policeman Turns Preacher

Toronto, July 16 — (CP)—Five Toronto policemen took the floor in a West Toronto Baptist Mission chapel Sunday night to call on church-going citizens to transform their faith from a formality into personal reality. The sermon was delivered by Inspector William J. McAllister, whose text was "Whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved."

Top o'the Morning-
TO OUR U.S. VISITORS!

A windy hill at sunrise . . . a woodland trail at noon . . . Ontario's bridlepaths invite horsemen from far and near. Time and again riders from south of the border come to enjoy the beauty spots of our Province. These visitors help us. We can help them by being good hosts . . . making them welcome . . . giving them a grand time!

WHAT CAN I DO? The answer is plenty! Here are some of the things anyone can do. The suggestions come from an Ontario hotelman, famous for his hospitality.

1. Know the places of interest and beauty spots in your district and tell people about them.
2. When you write your friends in the States tell them about the places they would enjoy visiting.
3. Try to make any visitor really glad he came.
4. Take time to give requested information fully and graciously.
5. In business dealings, remember Canada's reputation for courtesy and fairness depends on you.
6. To sum it all up, follow the "Golden Rule."

IT'S EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS . . . it's good business!

Worth his weight in gold! The province of Ontario profits to almost the same extent from tourist business as it does from the gold mining industry. It is up to each of us to see that it goes on growing.

This diagram, shows how everyone benefits from the Ontario tourist income. Every dollar is shared in this way . . . 1. Hotels; 2. Stores; 3. Restaurants; 4. Taxes, etc.; 5. Amusements; 6. Garages.

It works both ways! They treat us royally when we visit them . . . we can't do less than return the compliment. Remember that it costs money to take a holiday . . . so let's see they get a good return for every penny they spend.

"Let's make them want to come back!"

The GHOST Walks on Friday...

MECHANIC: Who are you? I never remember seeing YOU around here before.

STRANGER: Oh! I'm the Ghost—the fellow who brings your pay envelope. Here, take it!

MECHANIC: YOU bring me my pay envelope? How did you get into this?

STRANGER: I've been around here quite a while, but some folks don't look very hard. Remember those screws you turned out . . . the funny kind with the left-hand thread?

MECHANIC: Sure, I remember. They did seem wacky—who wants a left-hand thread? Say, you must be from that Bombay engineering company . . .

STRANGER: That's right. We bought your screws. And the money we paid for them is in your envelope now. My friends buy many more things you make.

MECHANIC: Your friends? How many more friends have you around this plant, Mr. Ghost?

STRANGER: Far more than you think. There's a gentleman from China that uses your parts in his rice mills . . . two from the Netherlands East Indies . . . another from Peru, and . . .

MECHANIC: Mm-mm. So that's where my wages come from. Look, Mr. Ghost, you and your buddies will stick around here, won't you? Perhaps there is something I can do to make it worth your while . . .?

STRANGER: There is something you can do. You can put your best work into each part you make. That will please us, and we will keep on buying more from you.

MECHANIC: Is there anything else I can do?

STRANGER: Yes, there is . . . but I don't like to mention it, because you people in Canada have gone without many things you like for a long time. But if you can share with us the things you make . . . right now . . . we will keep on buying in the future. That means your job will last.

MECHANIC: You mean . . . we can count on the Ghost walking every Friday? Plenty of employment?

STRANGER: That's right. Lots of work. See you next Friday my friend.

* At least 35 Cents of every Dollar you earn comes from Canada's foreign trade . . . the trade that creates one-third of all the jobs in this country. No matter who you are . . . export business affects you. So the better Canada's export business is, the better off you'll be. Everyone who buys or sells merchandise abroad makes jobs in Canada. That is why we have a Foreign Trade Service in the Department of Trade and Commerce. It maintains able trade commissioners in 29 countries, and an experienced export and import staff at head office, to collect the most up-to-date information on foreign markets and give practical help to every business that wishes to buy or sell in other countries.

WEDDINGS

FRIESEN—WOOD

On Wednesday, July 10, at 2 p.m. in the R.C.A.F. chapel at Trenton, the marriage of Ethel Irene, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Wood, Stirling, and Frank, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Friesen of Winnipeg, was solemnized by Wing Commander E. C. McCullagh, Command Chaplain, No. 1 Air Command.

The bride wearing a frock of white silk jersey, with a small white hat, and carrying a white Bible with streamers and Sweetheart roses, entered the chapel on the arm of her father, to the strains of the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin played by her cousin, Mrs. E. Woods at the organ.

Miss Marion Richardson, dressed in a frock of yellow silk jersey and wearing a corsage of mauve sweetpeas and baby's breath, was bridesmaid.

The groom was attended by Mr. Rayburn Wood, brother of the bride.

During the signing of the register the organist play "O Perfect Love."

Following the ceremony a small reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Mrs. Wood wore a frock of printed mauve silk jersey with a corsage of sweetpeas and baby's breath.

GREGORY—HENLEY

A very pretty wedding was solemnized on June 29, at the United Church, Frankford, of Rosella Elizabeth Henley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Henley, Frankford, to Girdwood Samuel Gregory, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gregory, Trenton, the Rev. H. H. Lackey officiating.

The bride was charming in a street length dress of white silk jersey, pale blue hat and veil, with matching blue gloves and a corsage of red Briarcliffe roses.

Mrs. Albert Bonisteel was bridesmaid for her sister, wearing blue silk jersey dress, white hat and veil, with matching white gloves, and a corsage of pink Briarcliffe roses.

Mr. Albert Bonisteel attended the groom.

After the ceremony the guests departed to the bride's home where a dainty buffet lunch was served to about thirty-five guests.

Amid showers of confetti the happy young couple left for a wedding trip to Toronto, Niagara Falls and New York.

On their return they will reside at Trenton.

Out-of-town guests were present from Trenton, Glen Miller, Tweed, Thomasburg and Belleville.

DAWE—SHEPHERD

White daisies and blue delphinium formed the setting in Christ Church, Belleville, July 15, at 4 p.m. for the double ring ceremony which united in marriage Muriel Margaret, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. J. Stepherd, and Gordon Lionel, son of the Rev. James Dawe and Mrs. Dawe of Parham. The ceremony was performed by the groom's father, assisted by the Rev. J. Grant Sparling. Mr. Kaye Martin presided at the organ and Master Stanley Creeggan was soloist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride looked charming in a portrait gown of white Baronet satin made on princess lines, the full skirt ending in a slight train. Her full length embroidered net veil fell from a Mary Stuart headdress and she carried a cascade bouquet of white gladioli and American Beauty roses. Miss Marion Shepherd, frocked in cameo blue net over satin with matching Dutch cap and carrying a Colonial bouquet of pink carnations and blue cornflowers, was her sister's only attendant.

The groomsman was Mr. John McCollum of Smiths Falls and the ushers were Mr. W. T. McCagherty and Mr. James Dawe, brother of the groom.

The reception following the ceremony was held at the home of the bride's parents where Mrs. Shepherd in a blue and white printed sheer with navy accessories and corsage of Talisman roses, received the guests, assisted by Mrs. Dawe in mauve silk crepe with white accessories and corsage of Johanna Hill roses. Mrs. Wm. Shepherd, of Ottawa, grandmother of the bride, presided at the tea table which was centred with the wedding cake made by the maternal grandmother of the bride, Mrs. W. E. McCagherty.

CANUCK COUPLE MARRIED IN GERMAN U-BOAT

In the torpedo room aboard the former German submarine U190, tied up in Halifax harbor, was the chapel where Vincent L. Ferrquist, New Westminster, B.C., of the Canadian navy, and Dorothy A. Drummond, Malagash, N.S., were married. The bulkheads of the ship, which surrendered to Canadian naval forces off Newfoundland more than a year ago, were draped with flags for the ceremony. Rev. W. S. Irving, Dartmouth, N.S., performed the ceremony.

Stimulating Lagging Appetites

It often seems, in the sultry days of summer, that the members of the family lose part of their enthusiasm for food. In the case of the children this may be due to the fact that the regular routine of school days is changed. They are more interested in playing than in eating and it is hard to coax them to the table. When this happens it is time to start thinking of food that will stimulate the appetite on sight and at the same time be easy to prepare, for the cook must consider herself also.

Jellied salads, either fruit, vegetable, meat or cottage cheese do not require much time for preparation and can be very attractive. Meat loaves are also an easy hot weather dish. With an abundance of fresh fruits, desserts may be simplified and consist of raw fruits or of simple fruit desserts or ice cream with fruit sauce.

Vegetables are also plentiful. Vegetable-plates, raw or cooked can be served as a main dish. Several vegetables may be cooked in the same kettle, thus using only one burner and reducing the heat in the kitchen.

Plan to use the oven for more than one dish at the same time. Something for supper, to be served cold, may be cooked at the same time as the main dinner dish, preventing heating the kitchen twice in the day.

The following recipes have been tested by the home economists of the Consumer Section in Canada's Kitchen in the Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

CHERRY WHIP

1 cup sour cherry pulp (about 2 cups pitted cherries)
2 egg whites
1/3 cup sugar
Pinch of salt

Wash, stem and pit cherries. Force through a sieve or crush to a fine pulp. Drain. Beat egg whites with salt until stiff and gradually add the sugar. Add cherry pulp to the egg mixture and mix thoroughly with rotary beater. Pile lightly into a serving dish or into individual dishes. Chill thoroughly and serve garnished with fresh cherries. Serves six.

Note: A custard sauce may be made with the two egg yolks and poured cold on the cherry whip just before serving.

BEANS IN CUCUMBER RINGS

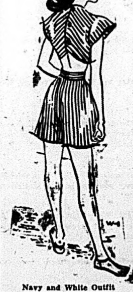
Cooked, green or wax beans, uncut
12 cucumber rings
French dressing
Lettuce
Carrot curls or radish roses.

Allow 12 to 16 beans per serving. Marinate in French dressing for 10 minutes. To make cucumber rings, cut cucumber into slices and remove pulpy centres. Fill rings with the whole beans, allowing two rings for each serving. Arrange on lettuce leaves and garnish with carrot curls or radish roses. Serve with additional salad dressing. Six servings.

MOULDED EGG SALAD

1 tablespoon unflavored gelatine
¼ cup cold water
1½ cups boiling water
2 tablespoons vinegar
1 teaspoon salt
4 hard-cooked eggs, sliced
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
3 tablespoons chopped pickle
1 tablespoon grated onion
1 tablespoon chopped pimiento

Soften the gelatine in the cold water. Add boiling water, vinegar and salt. When the gelatine mixture begins to stiffen, add the remaining ingredients. Pour into wet moulds and chill until firm. Serve on crisp lettuce or other salad greens and garnish with mayonnaise.



Navy and White Outfit
By VERA WINSTON

Boldly striped chintz in navy and white is used for a gay little shorts and midriff blouse get-up, nice for play hours. The midriff top uses the stripes diagonally. It has a high neck and buttons down the back with bright navy composition buttons. he shorts, vertically striped, button in back, and have slit pockets at the sides. A matching dirndl skirt worn over the shorts makes for a nice off-to-the-village outfit.

Questions and Answers

Readers may direct their questions, giving name and address and mentioning the name of this paper to Information Branch, WPTB, 490 Sussex Street, Ottawa.

Q. My husband has not yet returned from overseas and I am worried about him getting civilian clothes. I notice priority certificates are no longer issued to veterans. Is there anything I can do about it before he arrives home in September?

A. You have been misinformed. Priority certificates will not be issued after October 30, 1946, but your husband will be entitled to receive one if he arrives home before that date. These certificates will be valid for purchase of a suit up to December, 1946.

Q. Is the price of an automobile controlled by the Board when it is offered for sale at an auction?

A. Yes. All motor vehicles are subject to price ceiling regulations regardless of how they are sold.

Q. Being a returned man and my wife an English bride we are not very familiar with price control regulations. I went into a store and bought a quarter of a watermelon and was charged 70c. I saw a quarter in another store for 45c. Is this legal?

A. It is possible that both stores were selling watermelon within the ceiling price. The melon is sold by the pound and ceiling price a pound is 26c. As you probably noticed, some of the melons are larger than others and, naturally, a quarter of a larger melon would weigh more than that of a smaller one. If you write in again and send your name and address we will place your wife's name on our mailing list to receive a copy of Consumer's News each month. This pamphlet contains latest news on price control and rationing regulations.

Q. Is there still a ceiling price on hotel rates? I sent my reservations in for accommodation for two weeks and find the rates almost twice what they were last year.

A. Yes, there is still a ceiling on hotel rates. Hotels may not raise their prices without permission from the Rentals Administration, and while a few increases have been granted, certainly no hotel would be permitted to double its rates. Every hotel room must display a card indicating ceiling rent.

Women's Activities

U.P.E. BELLEVILLE WOMEN'S CLUB

Mrs. Fred Cory, Charles Street, opened her home for the July meeting of the U.P.E., Belleville Women's Club. With 29 members and 5 visitors present, an interesting afternoon was enjoyed by all.

Mrs. Weese read an article entitled "Keep Step With Times," closing with:

"If we could see beyond today
as God can see;
If all the clouds should roll away
The shadows flee;
O'er present griefs we would not fret,
Each sorrow we should soon forget,
For many joys are waiting yet
For you and me."

It was decided to hold the picnic early in August with each member inviting a guest.

Humorous readings "How to Cook a Husband" and "Choosing a Husband" were given.

Mrs. Spencer gave a talk on Iceland, showing views of towns. Mrs. Wilson Stoneburg recently returned from Florida told of community life and interesting features of her surroundings there.

Mrs. Schryver put on a contest with the prize going to Mrs. W. Barber. Community singing was led by Mrs. Ackerman.

Delicious refreshments were served by Mrs. Cory with her daughter and daughter-in-law and also Mrs. Reid assisting, and a vote of thanks extended to them.

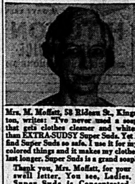
BURR'S W.A.

Burr's—Mrs. K. VanCott and Mrs. Eric Edwards opened their home to the July meeting of Burr's W.A. on Thursday afternoon. Beautiful bouquets of fragrant sweetpeas were placed throughout the rooms and were much admired. Mrs. J. E. Bird, Mrs. Fred Maxwell, Mrs. C. Maxwell, Mrs. W. Soble and Mrs. C. McQuaid were guests at the meeting. Following the devotional which was led by the president, Mrs. Don Parks, the plans for the afternoon tea for Thursday of this week were completed and a date set for a social early in August. The usual program was dispensed with as a quilt was tied. Mrs. M. Adams offered her home for the August meeting.

ESCAPE WITH $1,000

Dashwood, Ont., July 15—(CP)—A three-man gang early today cracked open the safe in the general store of Restemayer and Miller at the main intersection here and escaped with over $1,000 in cash, bonds and checks.

Duncan Snider, who lives next door to the store, said he heard the men smashing the safe but at first believed it coming from the operators working in the building. He dressed and reached the street just as the thieves drove off in their car.



Mrs. M. Moffatt, 58 Rideau St., Kingston, writes: "I've never used a soap that gets clothes cleaner and whiter than EXTRA-SUDSY Super Suds. Yet I find Super Suds so safe. I use it for my colored things and it makes my clothes last longer. Super Suds is a grand soap."

Thank you, Mrs. Moffatt, for your swell letter. You see, Ladies, Super Suds is Concentrated. Super Suds actually gives you far more washing-power, which means sudsier, longer-lasting suds, for easier and quicker washdays. And Super Suds costs no more than ordinary washday soap.

Nothing Easier-Quicker-than JAM and JELLY MAKING with CERTO

You get 50% MORE JAM or JELLY from your fruit

SHORT BOIL SAVES TIME—ENERGY

Certo is a time and work saver because Certo jams need only a one to two-minute full, rolling boil . . . jellies only a half-minute to a minute. The Certo way is the sensible, modern way for a busy housewife.

ONE-HALF MORE JAM OR JELLY

In this short boil practically no precious fruit juice goes off in steam. You get up to 50% MORE jam or jelly from the same amount of fruit than by old-fashioned long-boil recipes. What a help that is!

FRESH FRUIT TASTE NATURAL COLOUR

The Certo boil is too short to spoil the fresh fruit taste or dull the natural colour. The delicious fresh taste and lovely colour of the fruit itself are retained.

NO GUESS WORK! NO FAILURES

There's a book of tested, easy-to-follow recipes with every Certo bottle—a different recipe for each fruit. For better jams and jellies follow the recipes exactly and be sure of success.

WHAT CERTO IS

Certo is fruit pectin—the natural jellying substance in fruit—extracted from fruit in which it is most plentiful.

And Certo makes such Delicious, Sparkling Jams and Jellies

Look for Book of Tested Recipes under the label of every Certo bottle.

A pound of jam or jelly made with Certo contains no more sugar than a pound made the old, long-boil way.

MOUNT. VIEW DEFEATS SACOS BY 5-2 SCORE

Up-and-Coming Airmen Provide Upset in Loop With Defeat of Leaders

Mountain View's fast-stepping softball squad provided a startling upset in Belleville Softball Association circles last night at the Fair Grounds when they defeated the league-leading SACOS squad by a 5-2 count.

Hunter, tall right hander of the SACOS pitched the entire ball game allowing only seven hits, while Latremont of Mountain View allowed eight.

The first two innings looked good for the SACOS as they scored a run in each, but Mountain View came back with one run in the second, three more in the third, and edged forward to take another in the fourth. Errors and safe hits in the third inning allowed three runners across the plate in front of catcher Temple to cinch the ball game. After that, the two teams tightened down and battled it out in a pitcher's duel, Hunter walking one man and Latremont walking two.

Lambley in centre field for Mountain View made sensational catches and earned the applause from the bleachers.

The teams:

SACOS—Foods, cf; Chapman, 2b; Carson, lf! LaBonne, 1b; Reid, rf; Sword, ss; Wardhaugh, 3b; Temple, c; Hunter, p.

x—Henn relieved Chapman in the eight.

Mt. View—Latremont, p; White lf; Murray, c; McCartney, ss; McKell, 2b; Miller, 3b; Allan, 1b; Burnett, rf; Lambley, 2b.

Score by innings:

SACOS ..... 110 000 000—2 7 2
Mt. View .. 013 100 000—5 8 2

ORPHANS NO MORE—FOUR SISTERS HAVE NEW PARENTS

A home where they can always be together and new parents who will love them as their own mark the end of the rainbow for these four orphaned children who have been charges of the Child Placing and Adoption Committee of the State Charities Aid Association in New York City. The committee sought the aid of newspaper readers in finding a home where the children would not be separated. A New York business man and his wife, who have a suburban home and a farm out west, were finally chosen from among many applicants and a once-sad story has a happy ending. The children are Betsy, four; Babs, five; Meg, nine, and Janie, two.

Hundred Tons of Peas Rushed By Air to Windsor From Trenton Plant

Aerial transport developed to a high degree of efficiency during the war years can also be utilized to save agricultural crops which might otherwise be spoiled, it was demonstrated in the Bay of Quinte district over the last week end when nearly 100 tons of freshly threshed field peas were transported 350 miles from Trenton to Windsor, Ont., for canning.

The peas were sent to Windsor by the Stokely-Van Camp Canning Company whose Trenton factory proved incapable of handling the volume of locally grown peas coming into the factory. Windsor factories were able to handle the peas because of the flood conditions occurring there earlier in the season which partially ruined the pea crop in that district.

Early Saturday morning a Douglas C-4 transport owned by the American Airlines flew in from Kansas, U.S.A., and started immediately taking on ten tons of peas for Windsor. One and one half hours after loading was completed the big plane landed at a Windsor airport from where the peas were rushed to the canning factory for canning.

Making the necessary number of trips with ten tons to the load, the big Douglas four-motored transport by Sunday night had flown close to 100 tons of peas to the Windsor area and the emergency at the Trenton factory was remedied.

Prevented Loss of Crop

"It was just impossible for our own factory to handle the peas they were coming in so fast from the viners," stated an official of Stokely-Van Camp to this newspaper. "We either had to try aerial shipment of the peas to factories not operating at full capacity, or lose a percentage of the crop."

Company officials stated it was the first time in Canada that aerial transport for threshed peas had been attempted, although the same firm two years ago flew tomato plans into Canada from southern United States when frost damaged Canadian plants already set in the fields.

For ease of handling and to keep tare weight to a minimum, square four-gallon tin cans holding approximately 25 pounds were used to transport the peas. Aided by a rubber track conveyor extended directly into the big plane, a crew of ten canning factory employees took exactly one hour to move ten tons of peas into the transport.

Two sets of crew came in with the big plane, the one crew operating while the other obtained sleep. In this way the big transport was kept in continuous operation. Three mechanics also made the trip. Pilots operated the plane on a schedule that might well be the envy of any passenger service.

"It was pretty expensive," commented an official of the canning company, "but we were absolutely tied up and we saved the peas."

War Bride Feted By Consecon W.I.

Consecon — Consecon W.I. met at the home of Mrs. R. Aylea Friday night after the business part. Mrs. Mary Young a war bride from England gave a very interesting talk on her impressions of Canada, and conditions in England when she left. The president thanked Mrs. Young and asked her to come forward. Mrs. A. Rattray read an address and Mrs. Wes. Kiser presented Mrs. Young with a beautiful plastic purse from the Women's Institute, after which Nancy Adair brought in a decorated basket of handkerchiefs and personal items from the individual members, and presented them to Mrs. Young. Mrs. Young opened the gifts and thanked each one personally, and the W.I. for their kindness to a stranger.

Later delicious refreshments of cake, ice cream and iced tea were served by the hostess Mrs. Adair and her assistants, and a social half hour enjoyed.

Mr. Ken Hamilton one of the boys recently returned from overseas after serving 6 years came in and in a pleasing manner thanked the ladies for the many boxes of good things he received from the Women's Institute while overseas.

Nine Pay Death Penalty

Warsaw, July 16 —(AP)— A foreign ministry spokesman said last night that nine men sentenced to death by a Polish military tribunal for setting off the July 4 pogrom in Kielce were shot to death early yesterday by a firing squad. The public was barred from the execution. The nine were sentenced last Thursday along with three others who received prison terms. A supreme military court yesterday denied appeals by the condemned men.

SCORES OF PASSENGERS ESCAPE DEATH

London — Scores of passengers escaped death last night when a night express from London to Aberdeen was derailed at high speed just north of here and piled up in a tangled mass of wreckage.

REV. F. M. SHERLOCK DIES

Toronto, July 16 — (CP)—Rev. Frank Magill Sherlock, for some years rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, Cranford, N.J., died here Sunday. The son of John Sherlock, leader of the noted Sherlock male quartette, he came to Toronto from Kingston, Ont., as a youth.

CAUSED POGROM?

The story of nine-year-old Henry Blaszczyk that he was kidnapped by Jews and held in Jewish headquarters at Kielce for three days, and had seen the bodies of 15 Gentile children who had been killed by Jews, is blamed by Polish authorities for the pogrom that cost the lives of 40 Jews in Kielce early this month. The boy's father admitted the story was false, and the boy himself said he has been told to tell the lie by a peasant with whom he had stayed in the country without his parents' permission.

Quick-Thinking Averts Hold-up

Chatham, July 16 —(CP)— Quick thinking of night watchman James Robertson yesterday foiled an attempted hold-up at the Cadillac Hotel in Blenheim, 10 miles southeast of here. Robertson, alone in the hotel office at the time told police he surprised two masked men in the hallway sneaking up on him. Pretending to have a gun in his pocket, Robertson said he told them to get out "or I'll fill you full of lead."

Crisis in Food In British Zone Eases Somewhat

This is the last in a series of four stories on the situation in Germany by Ross Munro, who accompanied Imperial Press Conference delegates on a recent tour of Europe.

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Hamburg, July 16 (CP Cable) —The food crisis in the British zone of Germany is easing considerably and there is a possibility that for the next ration period starting shortly German rations will be increased.

British authorities are eager to add to the present rations of slightly more than 1,000 calories daily to halt deterioration in the German attitude toward British occupation forces. The prolonged scarcity has adversely affected the British program of rehabilitating German economy and political thinking.

There will be a reasonably good harvest in the zone despite a scarcity of fertilizer which is reducing yields and officials predict the situation is bound to improve with harvesting now under way.

Undernourishment

A few months ago many officials held grave fears there would be serious food riots in big cities and in the Ruhr because of ration cuts and it is surprising there have been no disturbances. Experts say there are definite signs of undernourishment and increased disease in cities but the people generally are not dying from starvation. In country districts they eat fairly well.

If most Germans had lived on the official ration—which in effect means the United Kingdom ration for three days would have to be spun out for a week—there would have been widespread starvation in cities, a British official said.

Germans Get Extras Somehow

The Germans get extra rations somehow, "it is extremely difficult to determine exactly where," the official said.

"There were known to be large depots of tinned and preserved foods scattered through Germany before the collapse and yet when our trocps came through Germany they didn't find many of these stores and it may be that all this surplus has been distributed in bootleg fashion over a wide section of the city."

A black market in food still flourishes and that is given by most Germans as the source of additional food they obtain so mysteriously.

Urges Vaccination Campaign

Toronto, July 16 —(CP)— In view of a "definite risk" of scattered outbreaks of smallpox in Canada, the Canadian Medical Association Journal, in its current issue, urges a campaign in support of vaccination and re-vaccination. Heavy post-war travel is fascilitating spread of smallpox into areas relatively free.

10-Year-Old Boy Killed by Car

Gananoque, July 16 —(CP)— James Burtch, 10-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Burtch of nearby Jones Falls, was killed yesterday by a car said to be driven by Earl Linton of Cobourg. According to police the driver stated that the boy stepped into the path of the car.

LARGEST CANADIAN-BUILT PLANE TEST-FLOWN

Montreal — The largest aircraft ever produced in Canada—a new, four-engined transport designed to carry 40 passengers—was test-flown last night from the Canadian plant where it was built for the Canadian government.

Wine Prices Up In Ontario

Toronto, July 16 —(CP)— An increase of 10 to 50 cents a bottle becomes effective today in the price of native wine in Ontario. Manufacturers blame the price jump on rising production costs.

ROBBED OF $250

Niagara Falls, July 15—(CP)— Capt. The Rev. George Burns of Toronto reported to police today that he was robbed of $250, taken from his pocket as he slept in his hotel room. The Padre said the door was open.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON Jr.

New York, July 16 — (AP) — Next week's public links golf championship, says U.S.G.A. secretary Joe Dey, provides a cross section of American life . . . it becomes especially cross after dubbing one into a bunker . . . The 192 qualifiers range in age from 17 to 59, including 47-year-old Carl Kauffman of Pittsburgh who won the tourney in 1927, 28 and 29 . . . The three qualifiers from Cedar Rapids, Ia., are the real comeback guys of the lot . . . Joe Knowles, who led in that section, was an infantile paralysis victim. Dale Smith, No. 2, was seriously wounded in the Battle of the Bulge and spent almost a year in hospital; Dale's brother Jack, also a war veteran, had to shoot a 34 on his last nine holes and then won a play-off to qualify.

Ump no Chump

Hubert Busby, a Navy dischargee who works as a newspaper linotyper, recently was elected to the Alabama State Legislature and umpires in the Montgomery City League, was called in to sub for a Southeastern League umpire . . . Busby did so well that prexy Stuart X. Stephenson offered him steady work, but Hubert turned it down . . . Like any ex-sailor, he wants to keep his feet on the ground.

Red Rolf, now a Yankee coach, has big league managerial ambitions but isn't eyeing Bill Dickey's job . . . Villanova U. is looking for a nice gentle wildcat for a mascot. The old one died after the Navy game last fall and the fans can't decide whether it was the heat or the score . . . Chic Harley, nephew and namesake of Ohio State's most famous athlete, is planning to enrol at the Buckeye institution soon. He was a good footballer at Chicago's Fenwick High School before joining the Seabees.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

Picton race officials claim his age to be hovering in the vicinity of 80, but personally we are of the opinion that "Pops" is much younger than that. The fact recalls an instance that occurred at the last regatta held in Picton where Pop was racing. As he drew close to the float accompanied by Mrs. Cooper, we asked him his age.

"I'm two years younger than the boss here" Pops smiled gesturing towards Mrs. Cooper.

That did it. The mystery was still unsolved when we left the proud smiling couple.

In any event the fearless oldster who has driven his boats at speeds nearing 85 miles per hour will be at the Rotarfy Club regatta at Massassaga Point on August 7th to compete in the 225 championships where it is expected world's records will go by the board.

• • •

And "Pops" will likely send his boat scudding over the bay in the early morning in an effort to establish a world's record for a measured mile. These trials will take place at dawn, weather and water permitting on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, and it will be well worth anyone's while to get up with the cockerels at crowing time and watch these mechanized water-sprites flash over the course.

"Marse" Joe McCarthy did not approve of his baseball players gazing at alcoholic brews while they were playing for him, so the story goes. On one occasion in an effort to impress his players that alcohol was injurious to their physical systems, "Marse" Joe placed a worm in a glass of whiskey.

The worm kicked up its heels ruffled its tail feathers, went into a wormy conga—and died.

"There," smiled Marse Joe triumphantly, looking at one of the players who favored the grape when it was crimson, "What does that prove."

The player looked up at "Marse" Joe and smiled sweetly. "It proves," he drawled, "that if I drink likker, I won't have no worms."

Thanks to the efforts of Homer "Red" Townsend there are published elsewhere on this page the averages of the leading hitters and pitchers of the teams in the Belleville District Baseball League.

• • •

"Lefty" Whitman, mastermind of the SWACOS squad is leading the field with the nice average of 480. The big guy can really sock the pill and he has been hitting consistently all season. White and "Moose" Matthews, Trenton Flyer socksmiths are second and third with percentages of 438 and 414 respectively. The "Moose", we believe, has drawn more walks than any man in the loop, but he too has been leading on the apple, especially in the clutches.

• • •

"Smoky" Smith, the Batawa southpaw ace heads the fling section with a record of three wins and nothing else. Ditto Paddy Sheehan of Trenton, although Sheehan has been taken out of the box on one or two occasions. The peerless 'Smoky' has yet to taste defeat in this league, and he has dominated players of outside loops with his sterling chucking. The Batawa team should go a long way in their search for an Ontario championship.

Batawa reversed the score on the Peterborough Marines on Friday up in the Liftlock City when Smoky et al dunked them by a 2-0 score. Coach Bill Easton believes in giving his players plenty of work, and the team has travelled farther than any other squad in the loop.

• • •

Bay of Quinte divot-diggers made a fine showing at the Ontario Golf Association district tournament held at the Cataraqui Golf and Country Club on Sunday. Harry Ridley carded a neat 83 with Tommy Carruthers scoring an 84. Murray McIntosh took third place in the "B" flight series with an 84.

• • •

Tonight at the Fair Grounds, Speedy St. Louis' Kiwanis Junior baseballers take on Lefty Whitman's SWACOS in a game that should be one of the better clashes of the season. SWACOS lost a close one to Latta in their last joust, and are out to see that it doesn't happen again. "Chuck" Barriage or Ernie Smith will likely do the slinging for the plant lads with Coach St. Louis in all probability nodding at Bobby Bunton to go out there and do his stuff. Game at 6.30.

Subject to the agreement of the International Olympic Committee, most of the major events in the 1948 Olympic.. Games will be held at Wembley, Britain's famous sports centre near London. Opening and closing ceremonies including the Prix de Nations for horse-jumping, all track and field events, football and hockey will take place at the Empire Stadium. Boxing, fencing, gymnastics, swimming, weight-lifting, wrestling and art competitions will be at the Empire Pool and other Wembley halls. President of the Games is Lord Portal of Laverstoke, and Lieutenant-Colonel T. P. M. Bevan has been appointed Organizing Secretary.

Tommy Colden's SWACO softball colleens trekked to Trenton on Saturday night and in a hard-fought game nosed out the local gals by a 5-3 score. Haneke was on the mound for the Coldenites with Nelson doing the receiving. Robertson, Trenton righthander served 'em up for the town girls with Jeffrey catching. SWACOS won the game in the last innings when they scored three runs to overcome a one-run lead garnered by Trenton in the fifth heat. After the game the SWACO gals were treated to an excellent steak dinner (Where do they get 'em) by Trenton officials. Tommy's girls were loud in their praises of the fine treatment and hospitality afforted them by the neighboring town. Oh yes, Twigg hit a three-baser for the home team with Calcutt doing likewise for our lassies. Proceeds went to the Kinsmen Club.

DAWES BLACK HORSE BREWERY

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

When partner is a thoughtless gink, he leads before he stops to think. Before your side gets started well, your whole defence is shot to pieces.

Return the suit your partner has led. This is one of the sound general rules of defensive play. Times are when you deviate therefrom. But only when circumstances make such a change advisable.

When you return partner's led suit, what card in that suit do you lead back? The highest card you have left in it? The lowest card you have left in it? Or some other card in it?

The general rule is: If you started with at least four cards, return the fourth best of your original holding. There is nothing new in this for you. It is done in any long suit.

What is the point in returning your fourth best (of original holding) in partner's led suit? So that he can count how many you had to start with. It tells him how many declarer has.

The hearts are divided in four hands as shown here:

NORTH
♥A Q 7

WEST
♥J 9 6 4

EAST
♥K 10 8 2

SOUTH
♥5 3

Your partner in the west seat starts out with an opening lead of the heart four. Dummy in the north plays the queen. You win the trick in east with your king.

Now you have a choice of returning your highest or lowest or middle remaining in hearts. To you it may not make any difference which you lead back. You already know partner started with four.

But you should lead back the deuce. West knows then that you had four hearts. It tells him that south began with only two.

If you led back the ten or eightspot, west would not know how many you had left. Nor would he know how soon south is going to trump that suit. And it throws him off the count in other suits.

The partners thoughtless are those you court less.

Hollywood Column

By BOB THOMAS

Portland, Ore., July 16 —(AP)—Never underestimate the power of Hollywood.

For instance, observe how Portland was captured completely by the movie forces, all for the sake of dear old publicity. The city capitulated without a struggle.

Walter Wanger filmed a picture called "Canyon Passage" in Oregon. So, to provide ample press lineage, Universal sent a glittering caravan to Portland for a premiere. Among those that glitter were Lou Costello, Joan Bennett, Peggy Ryan, Vancouver's Yvonne de Carlo, Hoagy Carmichael, Jess Barker and Elsa Maxwell.

From the time the artists were greeted with a brass band and a pack of Indians until they signed the last autograph and departed, Portland was under control of the Hollywood invaders. Even Mayor Riley and Governor Snell of Oregon pitched in on the ballyhoo.

Oh yes, the picture. It would be unfortunate to come this far to see a punk movie. Happily, "Canyon Passage" turned out to be a very nifty western. In fact, it ranks favorably with "Stagecoach," also produced by Wanger.

The fine Ernest Haycox story portrays frontier life in Oregon in the 1850's. The good cast is headed by Dana Andrews, who is excellent as always. So is Susan Hayward.

Note to you from Hollywood . . . Things are tough all over dept.: Dick Powell and June Allyson have sold their three planes. They're now shopping for a boat. . . . Hollywood influence — the toe dancers in "Ballerina" will wear sweater bodices instead of the usual satin.

BUFFALO TAKES LEAFS 7-2, AND ROYALS LOSE

Veteran Pitcher Paces Wings' Drive Up Ladder; Newark Trounces Jersey City

(By The Associated Press)

Glenn Gardner, veteran right-hander, of Rochester Red Wings who won only eight games for the 1945 tail-end Wings, is hurling some excellent baseball in Rochester's bid to move up the International League standings.

The 30-year-old veteran racked up his ninth conquest of the season last night as he scattered 9 Montreal hits in tossing the Wings to a 4-2 victory over the Royals, who pace the loop by 11 games.

Rochester hammered Montreal's Jean Pierre Roy for 10 hits in less than six innings with rookie outfielder Chuck Diering pacing the attack with a triple and double.

The win moved the seventh-place Red Wings to within one game of the sixth-place Toronto Maple Leafs who were defeated 7-2 by Buffalo Bisons.

Denny Horton, bothered with sore arm, made his first home start in weeks and set down the Leafs on four hits. Horton was deprived of a shutout when Johnny Bero made a wild peg that enabled the Leafs to score twice in the fourth frame.

Ed Mierkowicz led the Bisons' 10-hit assault on Herman Besse by banging in three runs on a homer and single.

Baltimore Orioles nosed out the runner-up Syracuse Chiefs 5-4 to strengthen their hold on fourth place and move to within four games of Syracuse.

Newark's third place Bears narrowed to 1½ games the gap that separates them from Syracuse by trouncing the last-place Jersey City Giants 9-2.

POSTHUMOUS AWARD

New York, July 16 (AP) — The American Telephone and Telegraph Company announced that a gold medal and $1,000 had been awarded postumously to Mrs. Julia C. Berry, telephone operator who remained at her switchboard and died in the La Salle Hotel fire in Chicago June 5.

The medal and cash award will be presented to Mrs. Berry's son, John Joseph Berry, 15, who was orphaned by his mother's death.

With Jaroslav Drobny of Czechoslovakia defeating Dinny Pails of Australia in straight sets, the three-cornered tennis tournament at Paris ended in one even term with France included, each having won five matches. The Australians were given the team award, however, as they had taken the most sets.

'You Can Have Williams,' Is Cry of Card Fans, Whose Hit Hero Is Thumping Musial

The Hit-Blasting Stanley is Pacing His Team to Loop Leadership; Yanks Defeated Again; Phil Marchildon Throws 2-Hitter

By RALPH RODEN
Associated Press Sports Writer

Boston can have Ted Williams, its colorful thumping outfielder. St. Louis fans will take Stanley Frank Musial, the belting Pole who is punishing National League hurling and leading Eddie Dyer's Red Birds in their drive to overtake the league lead from Brooklyn Dodgers.

The 25-year-old star, who leads his league in hits, runs scored, doubles and triples has enjoyed some of his biggest days at the plate against the Dodgers. Before 28,476 fans at Sportsman's Park last night, Musial sparked the red hot Cards to a 10-4 victory over the Brooks by smashing four hits in five trips to the plate, including a home and a triple.

The victory was the Cards' third in a row over Brooklyn and it narrowed the Dodgers first place margin to 1 1-2 games. St. Louis hopped on Hugh Casey for two runs in the opening inning and iced the decision by scoring three more runs in the fourth and fifth frames.

Chicago's third place Cubs advanced to within 4 1-2 games of Brooklyn as Hooks Wyse pitched the defending National League champions to a 3-1 victory over New York Giants. Ed Waitkus batted in two of Chicago's markers with two singles as Wyse became the third senior league hurler to notch 10 victories.

Although defeating Pittsburgh Pirates 3-2, Boston Braves dropped into a fourth place deadlock with Cincinnati Reds, who downed Philadelphia Phillies 4-2. Johnny Niggeling, veteran right-hander, limited the Pirates to six safeties as Boston tallied all of its runs in the first inning.

Rookie Johnny Hetki, scattered seven Philadelphia blows in the Reds' win. Grady Hatton, another recruit, slammed a three-run homer in the fifth inning to account for Cincinnati's margin of victory.

The American League, Detroit Tigers defeated the slumping New York Yankees 2-0 behind the two-hit pitching of Freddie Hutchinson before 39,893 night game fans at New York. It was Detroit's third straight triumph over the Yanks and moved the third-place Bengals to within 1 1-2 games of the runner-up Yanks.

The crowd increased New York's home attendance to 1,480,775 in 44 games which is 4,391 admissions short of the major league mark established by the pennant winning 1929 Chicago Cubs.

Penetanguishene's Phil Marchildon of Philadelphia Athletics also turned in a two-hit triumph, whitewashing Chicago White Sox 12-0. The Mackmen clinched the game in the second inning when they pounded five runs home.

St. Louis Browns fell into a fifth-place deadlock with Cleveland Indians, who, along with the front-running Red Sox, were not scheduled. The Browns lost 4-2 to Washington Senators.

FLYERS STAGE STRONG RALLY TO DEFEAT NAPANEE

Score 3 Runs in 7th to Win 7-6 After Trailing by Two Runs

Staging a three-run last inning rally, "Moose" Matthews' Trenton RCAF Flyers turned what appeared to be certain defeat into victory at the Alemite Field last night when they turned back the Napanee squad by a 7-6 count.

The losers were enjoying a 6-4 lead going into the last innings when the Flyers bats came to life and before the smoke had cleared had shoved over the tying and winning runs.

Flyers started off auspiciously in the first inning by scoring three runs but McTaggart, Napanee hurler settled down after that and the best the airmen could do until the seventh was one run in the fifth.

Napanee got singles in the first and second and they broke out in a scoring rash in the fourth sending four runners scampering across the plate. It looked as though the lads from Gibbardville were headed for their first victory. But Trenton thought otherwise and their strong finish netted them the victory.

Trenton used their entire string of pitchers with Al. Wade starting the game. He lasted until the fourth when he was relieved by Curtis who in turn gave way to Gibb in the next innings. The lads from down east garnered eight hits off the trio.

McTaggart was nicked for eleven safeties over the seven inning route, striking out six.

Robertson, Flyer left fielder paced his team's attack with three safeties. White and Lee got two each. Van Vlack was the hitter for Napanee getting two, one a two-bagger. Holmes also connected safely on two occasions.

Top-Seeded Players Meet Today In Tennis Quarter-Finals

Ottawa, July 16 — (CP) — Top-seeded players in the junior singles brackets were scheduled to meet today as competition narrowed in the Canadian junior tennis championships at Rideau Lawn Tennis Club.

In quarter-finals matches, Lorne Main, two-handed 16-year-old exponent from Vancouver, was favored against Redmond Quain of Ottawa, while it seemed likely Bruce Logie of Toronto, third-rankel junior, would be able to dispose of 13-year-old Andre De Chevigny, of Quebec.

However, the little Quebecker, side seeded No. 1 in the boy's singles, made a handsome showing in the junior brackets yesterday by downing Robert Labelle of Ottawa 4-6, 6-3, 6-2, and later dropping Carroll Laurin of Ottawa, 6-3, 6-4.

TIGERS NIP BARRIE IN ROUGH GAME

Hamilton, July 16 — (CP — In an unusually rough game, marred by players' attempts to officiate in place of the referee, Hamilton Tigers defeated Chuck Davidson's Barrie Lakeshore lacrosse team 18-13 here last night.

Jack Gair, the Tiger ace, played one of his best games this season, notching five goals and getting credit for one assist, while the Bengal captain, Arnold-Smith matched him with the same number of goals and assists.

What's Doing in Sport

Forty-year-old Red Kress is starting a second playing career in major-league baseball — this time as a pitcher. A former American League infielder, Kress was signed to a player's contract last night by Manager Mel Ott of the New York Giants, with whom he has been serving as a coach. He had done no mound work until he went to the minors and first performed in a relief role for Toronto and Louisville.

Last season with the International League Baltimore Orioles Kress earned a record of five victories against seven defeats but one of his wins was a one-hit performance.

India's touring cricketers ran up 490 for five wickets in their match with Yorkshire yesterday after the county eleven had declared at 300 for six wickets in the first innings Saturday. Azare scored 244 not out for India.

Catcher Frankie Hayes, who had been secured from Cleveland Indians for the $7,500 waiver price, was scheduled to report to Chicago White Sox at Boston tomorrow, Sox manager Ted Lyons said last night.

Don Boyle Ineligible to Play For Point Anne Softball Team; Hook, Mallory Protest Upheld

Belleville Executive Upholds SACO Protest Regarding Players Charged With Playing for Two Teams; Boyle May be Out for Season

It depends on the attitude of officials and management of the Point Anne softball entry in the Belleville Softball Association whether Don Boyle, youthful pitching star of the team remains in softball for the remainder of the 1946 season.

At a special meeting of the League Executive last night it was learned that the Ontario Amateur Softball Association has declared Boyle ineligible to play for the Ox Point team.

Manager Phil Loft, it was stated at the meeting, has refused to give Boyle his release, in order that he may play with a team of the OASA centre nearest to his place of residence, which in this case is Belleville.

If the Point Anne management insists on retaining Boyle's certificate, it means that the youngster will not be able to play for the remainder of the season.

The executive after lengthy consideration of a protest of the SACO Marines team against Hook and Mallory, members of the Army and Navy Flashes squad, upheld the protest and ruled the players involved out of softball in this league for the season. The protest charged that the players had played with a Kingston team and that Hook had signed a playing certificate with the squad from the city east of here.

While no evidence that Hook had signed a certificate with the Flashes squad was produced, members of the executive stated that they had seen the certificate signed by the player for a Kingston team. The body then ruled that Hook was ineligible to play softball and will recommend to the OASA that he be barred from playing for any team for the remainder of the season. After further discussion it was decided that the player Mallory would come under the same category, because of his having played with two teams.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By DAVE McINTOSH
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, July 16 —(CP)—Never so early has so much talk been bandied about concerning this year's football prospects in Canada, and especially here in Montreal, for many years a poor rugby town.

Already raids and counter-raids have allegedly been perpetrated by Montreal and Toronto clubs in their scramble to grab off the best.

Recently screams of "robber" greeted Lew Hayman, manager and coach of the Alouettes, in Toronto when he went up there on a short trip. One began to imagine Lew, with coat-collar turned up and hat pulled well down over his eyes, phoning from a small booth to arrange a secret trysting spot with one of that city's football luminaries.

Last weekend Teddy Morris, the little fellow whose great heart made him a top plunging helfback for Argos, slipped into Montreal and secretly conferred with several local boys. None of the results was made known.

The Alouettes' management gave out that Lew Hayman had gone to Toronto to witness the King's Plate, which, as a matter of fact, he did.

There hasn't been so much interest in football here since Warren Stevens, now athletic director at the Nniversity of Toronto, led the old Winged Wheelers to the Dominion championship in 1931. He and Hayman both hail from Syracuse and it is perhaps appropriate that Lew is taking up where Stevens left off —15 years ago.

The Alouettes realize it will be almost impossible to make a go of it unless they win the support of the French-speaking population. To that end they have their name, Leo Dandurand as president and a board of directors half made up of prominent French-speaking businessmen. Their schedule is planned, box seats sold and the team colors of red and white announced.

CHAPTER 8

Later she realized that subconsciously she knew where she was going all the time and that pure chance had not directed her halfway across the city to stand before the apartment house where Mark lived. "Why am I here?" she thought. "He took out a gay amusing girl. He doesn't want to see a half hysterical girl and hear what she has to say. How foolish of me to run to him because I love him!"

Mark, coming out to his car, saw her.

"Iris!"

She wanted to turn and run into his arms, and put her head against him. Then everything would be all right with Mark close, looking down on her. When she turned, she jerked her mouth into a smile and came toward him.

This was not the Iris he had seen before. Her hair had been blown from the tight close waves and her eyes had naked anguish in them. He understood. "Iris," he thought, "you have come to me. Because you love me— or because there was no one else you could go to?"

"It is you," he said, smiling, "on a night when I'm going out to seek company. Why didn't you call me?"

"I didn't know I was coming —and suddenly I was here."

"Come upstairs and tell me about it."

When she stepped in the living room, she thought, "Did I really come to see Mark or to spend a few hours in this quiet lovely room that has never heard the strife and misunderstanding of my home?"

"You don't have to tell me anything," he said. "It was your mother.'

"So many other things, too. Louis's wife is jealous of me."

He smiled kindly at her. "You take this too seriously, Iris. You're puzzled because you see people who are mercenary and selfish get the best from life, while you meet misunderstanding everywhere you turn. It does seem to go that way unfortunately."

"Running away is really terribly silly. I think I could cope with the other things if my home life were happier. I don't remember having a pleasant meal at home—even when my father was living."

"I'm flattered that you came to me, Iris."

"Rather than going to Joel?" She touched her hair and shrugged. "He's very excitable. He'd have insisted on our marrying at once and having a violent scene with mother. I knew," she said, "you wouldn't do that."

"And are you afraid of the consequences with Joel?"

"Not of being poor. I've always been poor. But I am afraid of incompatability. We think and feel so differently about things." She caught a glimpse of her face in the mirror and then looked down at the mud on her tall heeled slippers. "Look at me," and laughed.

He looked at her through the curtain of cigarette smoke. "Iris I like the girl who came to me in trouble, the girl with mud on her shoes, better than the lovely poem Mary North told me about."

"If ever there was anything glamorous about me, I've thrown it away tonight."

Mark's deep voice was restful. "Glamour is illusion, Iris. It's very nice to dine and dance with but one doesn't want to marry it. It's the sand that women throw in men's eyes. After tonight, you know, we're not going to be the casual friends we have been. Do you know that?"

She smiled. "Now I'm flattered. Most men would have been terribly bored with this."

"It's ten o'clock," she said finally, "and the classes are letting out at Hopkins."

"I'll take you home."

There was an eagerness in his voice that made her think, "He broke an engagement for her. I'm keeping him." But Mark wanted her to go not because Camilla Winters was probably still waiting for him but because being alone with Iris in this room made it difficult not to take her in his arms and tell her, between kisses and the wonder of having her close, how deeply he loved her.

When he stopped the car before her home, he asked, "Do you want me to go in with you?"

"Thank you—no. There are no lights on and, tomorrow," she turned and looked at him, "the atmosphere will be very chilly for the springtime."

He saw her enter the gloomy house and he did not leave until a light shone from an upstairs window to indicate that she was in her room. He lighted another cigaret, debating whether to go to Camilla or return to his apartment to which something new and intimate had been added since Iris's visit. He was never to look at the high-backed fireside chair in his living room again that he was not to remember Iris's head against it and her red mouth, now serious, now smiling. But to go home was to be reminded bluntly of the futility of loving Iris. Flipping the cigaret to the sidewalk, he started the car and drove to Camilla's.

The next morning Mrs. Wade reluctantly served Iris her breakfast. She was grim and silent. Tommy had left early. Iris wondered pulling her hat down over her dark curls, how long the cold estrangement would last. "Until she needs money," she thought, "or needs me."

It was good to be out of the house. Evidences of spring were everywhere.

She had been at the office only a little while, had changed into her white uniform, and was opening the mail when Joel called.

"Where've you been keeping yourself?" he asked good-humoredly. "What a swell day. I'm going to surprise you one of these days and call for you in a new car."

"Are you making all that money with your extra job?"

He chuckled. "I'm saving it — for us. Are you—that is—you're not going out with the eligible Mark Christian tonight, are you? Because I want to take you to dinner, a show, and then to a bar. And I've got a surprise for you."

"It sounds very exciting, Joel. No, I'm not going out with — with anyone tonight and the idea of going home doesn't appeal to me either."

"Is your mother...."

"I'll call for you at the office at five. Cheerio, darling."

There were three patients in the waiting riom when the phone rang again. Iris said her usual pleasant, "Good morning, this is Dr. Tracy's office," and then heard the unmistakable sobs of Mrs. Wade.

"What is it, Mother? What's the matter?"

The paients looked up with concern.

"Iris, you've got to come home at once. It's—it's about Eve. I had a letter from Cousin Martha and...."

"Is Eve ill?"

"No," sobbed Selina. "I think she's lost her mind. I don't know what to do, Iris. You must.."

"I'll be home at once," she said, feeling quite numb.

She changed back to her street clothes and went in to see Dr. Tracy.

"I don't know what's happened but I've got to go home. My sister seems to have gone haywire or gotten married or...."

"Or something," he grinned. "Run along. I'll manage. It would be a lucky break for you if your whole family got married and let you alone."

"I didn't want her to go away alone," said Iris, pulling on her gloves. "She's too young to have so much money. Mother let her have a thousand dollars."

He patted her shoulder fondly. "And you're too good looking to have so little."

Hurrying to the street, she hailed a cab. Apparently Selina had forgotten about last night. "She needs me again," thought Iris. But there was no comfort, no triumph in being needed.

Mrs. Wade met her in the hall, waving a letter frantically. Iris' hands were the steady capable hands of a doctor's assistant when she took her mother's shoulders firmly.

"Don't get so excited. Tell me what it is."

"Cousin Martha went to see Eve. She isn't studying, isn't doing anything but spending money and going with a wild crowd. Martha says it's disgraceful, the way she's living. Oh, I never thought she'd turn out like that. I never thought that a daughter of mine...."

"Then you must go to New York at once," Iris said calmly. "Or I'll go if you prefer."

"I'm going, said Selina.

"You should have gone with her in the beginning."

Selina trembled. "I can't be with both my daughters at once. I didn't want to see you throw away the opportunity of your life. And you have. Thrown it away on a worthless clerk, a cheap bank teller...."

(To be continued)

"I was on edge all the time.. because I forgot one simple fact"

"COLUMN after column of figures... did they get mixed up deliberately to tantalize me? An accountant's office is no place for a person who feels headachey and listless all the time. I know... that's how I used to be.

"Then a friend suggested trying Kellogg's 30-day test. Am I glad I did! That simple change of diet really helped me keep fit. Feel grand during working hours, and after, too. And do Kellogg's ever taste good!"

3 to 1 say Kellogg's are favourite
In a recent survey, 3 times as many housewives voted "Kellogg's" their favourite Bran Flakes as named any other brand. Look for the golden-yellow package— try the large, thrifty size.

Make this 30-DAY TEST

1. If you're really ill see your doctor! But if you just feel dull and headachey, you may only be suffering from incomplete elimination. Especially if you're over 35. Here's how one simple change of diet can help you keep fit:

2. Start right now to eat Kellogg's Bran Flakes every morning. No harsh doses... just keep fit the natural way! Get more of the "bulk" your system needs by eating delicious, gently-laxative Kellogg's Bran Flakes With Other Parts Of Wheat.

3. Just thirty days should prove to you how grand it is to feel alert, to have the energy for all the extra things you'd like to do. You'll want to go on keeping fit the Kellogg way!

Keep fit with Kellogg's every day in the year

Basic Gasoline Rate in Britain Upped 50 P.C.

By JAMES McCOOK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 16 (CP Cable) — Fuel Minister Shinwell today told the House of Commons that the basic British gasoline ration will be increased 50 per cent Aug. 1 because of purchases made possible by the $3,750,000,000 loan from the United States.

The increase will allow pleasure automobiles to be driven about 270 miles a month instead of the present 180 miles. Mr. Shinwell said a "rather more generous allowance" would be made for essential industrial users.

Before the United States Congress ratified the loan, Mr. Shinwell had been cold to repeated suggestions that supplies should be increased.

The top in the basic ration is seven gallons monthly for a car of 20 horsepower and over. Basic rations are being drawn for 1,600,000 cars in the United Kingdom but for 900,000 of these supplementaries have been granted for some priority consideration. Many other cars are still in garages awaiting relaxation of gasoline restrictions before being put back into use.

For three years Britons actually were without a basic ration as on July 1, 1942 the ration was abolished and allowances granted only in case of general need.

Roosevelt and Hull Reported Absolved Of Attack Blame

By JACK BELL

Washington, July 16 (AP) — Eight of the 10 congressional committee members investigating the attack on Pearl Harbor, Dec. 7, 1941, were reported today to have signed a report absolving President Roosevelt and former State Secretary Cordell Hull of any direct responsibility for the surprise bombings.

Republican Senators Owen Brewster of Maine and Homer Ferguson of Michigan declined to sign, it was learned.

The 112,000-word majority report, details cloaked in secrecy until its formal release later this week, is said to place the blame for American failure to anticipate the attack on both Washington military officials and the commanders at Pearl Harbor. These were Maj.-Gen. Walter Short and Admiral Husband E. Kimmel.

The committee was said to have made 25 recommendations for administrative changes in United States army and navy procedure as a result of disclosures in connection with the attack.

Senator Ferguson has prepared a minority report which Democratic members said was printed by the official Senate printer before the majority report of the committee had been completed.

In his minority report, Senator Ferguson was expected to lay emphasis on a contention he had repeated during the hearings that there was an arrangement between Britain, Canada, the United States, and The Netherlands for a Pacific defence plan long before the United States entered the war.

Livestock Prices Jump in Chicago

Chicago, July 16 (AP)—A no-holds-barred trade chalked up the highest live beef price and one of the sharpest price rises when strictly choice steers topped at $25.00, fully $1.75 over Friday's peak of $23.25.

At the same time a price record on live hogs was established. Good and choice kinds brought up to $19.00, topping the $18.50 figure set July 1,, which had been the highest since 1919. In that year pork reached a level of $23.60 a hundred pounds.

HOGS

Toronto, July 16 (CP) — Grade A, dressed, bacon-hogs, were up 15 cents cwt. at Brantford, $20.40 plus transportation and down 50 cents at Peterborough at $20.15 plus transportation, in markets reporting early today.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, July 16 (CP)—Losses recorded today in the early session of the Toronto exchange brought the level of prices down to within a couple of points of the lows for last Monday when the market broke on the Canadian dollar adjustment news. The industrials were off 1.30, the golds 1.44 and the base metals .99 at mid-day and the western oils were weaker by .24.

Only 479,000 shares changed hands in the first three hours.

The papers, steels, utilities and foods were the weak groups in the industrial section. The liquors were down also apart from a gain of 1 1-2 for Hiram Walker.

Soft spots in the base metal group included Smelters, Nickel, Noranda, Labrador, Steep Rock, Normetal and Sherriff. Some of the weak issues in the gold group were MacLeod-Cockshutt, Starratt ,Teck Hughes, Wasa Lake, Osulake and Amalgamated Larder.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

New York, July 16 — (AP) — The stock market steadied in spots today, with steels recovering, but many leaders continued to seek lower territory.

Dealings, active in the forenoon slowed somewhat as selective bids eventuated. While gains of a point or so were in evidence near the fourth hour, losses of as much predominated.

On the big board at noon Canadian Pacific had a gain of 1/4 at 18 3/4, International Nickel a loss of 7/8 at 36 1/4, Distillers Seagram was unchanged at 27 3/4 Dome Mines unchanged at 22 1/4.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, July 16 (CP) — Cattle trade was at steady to firm prices on all classes up to mid-session on the livestock market here today. Calves were firm and lambs and sheep steady. Hogs were still unsettled with no price established.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: Cattle 600; calves 420; hogs 375, sheep and lambs 480. Unsold from yesterday were 1,450 head of cattle, weighty steers and stockers.

Prices in the trade included:

Cattle: Weighty steers $12.-$13.50 for medium to good with plain downward to $10; heifers $11.75-$13 with common downward to $10; cows $10-$11 for good with canners downward to $5; good butcher bulls $10-$11, light bologna bulls downward to $8; fed yearlings good to choice $14-$15 with a few a bit higher.

Calves: $14-$15 good to choice, common downward to $10.

Lambs: $17.50, good ewes and wethers off-car, $17 off-truck, $1 cwt. discount.

Sheep: $8-$9 good ewes, heavies $5-$7, culls downward to $3.

No price was established for hogs yesterday. Sellers are asking steady prices, $21.50 Grade A, $21.50 Grade B1, dressed.

MONTREAL LIVESTOCK

Montreal, July 16 (CP) — Quality was mostly plain, and prices steady on livestock markets here today. Receipts: cattle 135; sheep 349; calves 520; hogs 362.

Heifers brought 7.50-12.50. Good butcher cows made 9.25-10; mediums 8.25-9, and commons 7.25-8. Canners and cutters were 6.25-7 with low quality ones 6 down. Good bulls sold for 10-10.50 and bologna bulls 7-9.50.

Best vealers brought 14.50-15 with common to fair quality ones 10-14.

Good lambs were 15-16.50 per cwt., and common ones 9-14 per cwt. Sheep made 5-9.

ACCIDENT VICTIM

Arlene Black, ABOVE, eight-year-old Wyevale, Ont., girl, was killed in a motor accident in which her brother, Bobby, five, and a cousin, Beverley Houden, eight, were injured. Joseph Bellfontaine, driver of the car, was charged with dangerous driving and failure to remain at the scene of the accident.

White's District

White's District—Over forty members of White's Church Sunday School enjoyed a picnic at Sarles' Beach, Oak Lake on Tuesday. The weather was ideal and the young folk enjoyed a swim before the dinner hour. Then all gathered around a well-laden table of home-cooked food. While the ladies cleared the table, the children went from the swing to the merry-go-round.

Then the superintendent Mr. W. A. Jeffery called all together and the girls and boys took part in a biscuit race, a potato bag race and the dash with the winners receiving prizes. Prizes were received by little Sharon Jeffery as the youngest member, and by Mrs. Robert Jeffery as the oldest person and the Hunt and Bowers family tied for the largest family represented.

Swimming was again enjoyed by the young folk, then all departed for their homes.

Mrs. Mooney is enjoying a holiday with friends and relatives in Calgary and Winnipeg.

Effects of Storm.

Thursday evening's electric storm disrupted the hydro service at 9 p.m. which remained off until 11:30 a.m. Friday causing delay to morning milking operations but no serious damage resulted locally though Mr. Earl Rathbun experienced an unpleasant milking session the night of the storm as there was a short circuit leading to the water bowls on the stanchions and every time a cow touched one of the bowls she received a shock which passed along the metal stanchions contacting each animal making them bawl, kick and become exceedingly restless while the persons attaching and detaching the milkers received shocks. The more restless the animals became the more often they touched the water bowls and the more difficult milking proceedings became. However with perseverance the milking was completed and someone sent for to search out and repair the cause of the trouble.

Mrs. Earl S. Anderson is this week the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Anderson, London.

Mrs. Jack McBride (nee Mildred Ainsworth) has returned to her home in Toronto following an extended motor trip, which itinerary included stops at Banff, Vancouver, San Francisco, Hollywood, Grand Canyon, New Mexico, and New Orleans. Unclean milk will not be accepted. Speakers included Dairy Instructor Henderson and former Instructor Hicks, F. J. Webster and W. H. Bedell, who gave a resume of the history of the factory. Music and refreshments added to the evening's enjoyment.

GERMAN NATIONALS MAKE JOURNEY HOMELAND

German nationals are pictured here as they were checked aboard ship for the repatriation journey to their homeland. These people lived in China during the war; many of them with much money and big homes, faring better even than the Japs. Recent stories from China have told of Germans buying their names off repatriation lists in effort to remain in China. Sums allegedly paid to Chinese for this service ran as high as $75,000.

5 PICKETS, SEVERAL WORKERS INJURED IN CLASH

House Committee Will Begin Probe Industrial Unrest

Unanimous Support Given By House to Proposal

Ottawa, July 17 (CP)— The Labor Relations Committee of the Commons today was confronted with an all-out study of labor unrest which has left 50,000 industrial workers idle and threatened strikes in other industries.

The committee, at an emergency meeting last night, pinpointed the steel strike, affecting 15,000 workers, as the key situation and wired C. H. Millard, Canadian director of the United Steelworkers of America, (C. I. O.) and H. G. Hilton, general manager of the Steel Company of Canada at Hamilton, asking their immediate attendance in Ottawa. The committee is slated to hold its second emergency session later today.

One of the standing committees appointed as a matter of form each session, the industrial relations committee which had not met for several sessions was thrown into the limelight unexpectedly yesterday.

Arthur Smith (PC-Calgary West) suggested in the Commons that the whole subject of industrial unrest should be investigated by a parliamentary committee. His proposal won immediate support from Prime Minister Mackenzie King who suggested the industrial relations committee.

The House gave unanimous support to a resolution, sponsored by Veterans Minister Mackenzie, directing the committee to meet within an hour to undertake immediate investigation of "all issues connected with industrial unrest in Canada." It was empowered to summon witnesses and employ counsel.

'National Crisis' Says Mackenzie.

The 35-man committee is under the chairmanship of Maurice Lalonde (L — Labelle). Last night Mr. Lalonde was out of town and Ralph Maybank (L — Winnipeg South Centre) acted as temporary chairman.

The hurried meeting was attended by 19 members and three non-member cabinet ministers. There was unanimous approval that its investigation should be given right-of-way over other committee sessions and that investigations should be pressed as quickly as possible.

"It's a national crisis," said Veterans Minister Mackenzie.

Labor Minister Mitchell suggested the committee should take evidence from the Prices Board, consumer groups such as farmers and all labor groups.

"The basic problem confronting the people of Canada is trying to protect the living standards of the working people of this country," he said. "We should see how best we can do it. We should see where we are going. The most constructive approach can be had from the people who have obeyed the law."

Mr. Smith, in suggesting a committee be convened, said he was not suggesting that it would immediately settle the strike. But it would evolve machinery of procedure, backed by a statute passed by parliament, not so much to settle strikes but to prevent them.

Prime Minister's Suggestion

Mr. King suggested that the committee arrange with the "utmost expedition" to have brought before it those who were the responsible leaders of labor, management and capital and that the committee have powers "of full investigation, under oath if so desired, of the whole situation, with a view to enlightening the Canadian people upon where responsibility most rests."

C.C.F. leader Coldwell, adding his support, said the steel strike was the "focal point" of the labor situation and would, if not settled, spread to other industries.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, July 17 — (CP)—Synopsis at 7.30 a.m.:Clear and relatively cool weather prevails over Eastern Canada and the Atlantic states, with temperatures ranging five to 10 degrees below normal yesterday. A small area of showery weather persists south of Lake Michigan, and thunderstorms are occurring over Southern Manitoba and the Dakotas along the leading edge of a cool air mass which has pushed over the Rockies from the Pacific.

Rumor Says Three More Will Likely Face Charges

Ottawa, July 17 (CP)— While the full effect of the huge Royal Commission report on espionage remained unclear today, it was reliably learned that at least three of the nine additional persons listed in the final report will likely be charged, and two top officials named in the report were rumored to be leaving Ottawa "hurriedly."

There was no hint of the nature of the charges to be laid, but the nine persons were listed as actively engaged in espionage, as having organized "cells," as having been active in procuring false passports, or as having been prepared to participate in subversive activities.

It was known that one Ottawa firm has been retained to launch the prosecutions.

A meeting will be held today in the Justice Department of all crown counsel connected with espionage prosecutions, who are expected to plan their next moves. Justice Minister St. Laurent, asked to comment on the situation, said merely that "the first announcement as to what we intend to do will not be of future intentions; we shall say 'we are acting.'"

The Russian officials named in the report—said to be leaving for Moscow—were Vtali G. Pavlov, recently promoted First Secretary of the Russian Embassy but named by the Commission as head of the N.K.V.D.'s "powerful (secret police) organization" in Canada, and Ivan Krotov, who holds the title of commercial counsellor at the Embassy.

These were reported to be the last of the Russian officials named in the report still in Canada.

The legal meeting today also will take into account the status of the 14 persons already detained in the spy case.

Of these, one, Dr. David Shugar of the Health Department, has been acquitted in magistrate's court for lack of evidence.

3 PICKETERS ARRESTED

Montreal, July 16 —(CP)— Arrest of three picketers at the East-End Hochelaga Mill of Dominion Textile Company Limited yesterday marked the strike at four of the company's plants here which continues in its seventh week.

Nine-Year-Old Italian Symphony Conductor Demon With "Scooter"

By JOHN P. McKNIGHT

Rome, July 17 (AP)—Italian music critics may be divided over Pierino Gamba's ability as a symphony conductor, but there is no question that the nine-year-old lad is a demon with a "scooter."

Seeing him speeding up and down the sidewalk before his home on Rome's Bellumo Street, no one would imagine that this lad had conducted a symphony concert at the Royal Opera House —leading the 86-man orchestra in the "Sinfonia" from Verdi's opera "Forza Del Destino," Beethoven's first symphony, the overture of Mancinelli's "Cleopatra," the prelude to act 1 of Verdi's "Traviata," the intermezzo from Mascagni's "William Ratcliff," the interlude between acts III and IV of Bizet's "Carmen," and the "Sinfonia" from Rossini's "William Tell."

The slender, blond, greenish-eyed lad who packed the opera house at the season's highest concert prices is a boy first and musical phenomenon second. Put a symphony score and a comic strip before him and he'll probably reach first for the funnies.

Papa Piero Gamba — who fiddles with a fiddle for fun—has a hard task keeping Pierino at his daily practice stint of three hours at the piano.

Pierino's concert performance, which bowled over a majority of the audience, did not deprive the critics of their faculties. None found flaws in the music as it was played, but most hesitated to use the term prodigy in the sense that it was used for Mozart. Pierino's performance, one or two said, smacked too much of a well-rehearsed trick.

Until 1944, when he was eight, Pierino heard little music and showed no liking for it. Then his father, whose pastry shop had been closed by war shortages, scraped enough money together for eight piano lessons. Apparently that was all that Pierino needed, although lately he has resumed study of harmony, theory and conducting.

He quickly showed that he had the plastic sense of music necessary to conductors. He could read a score, and hear the orchestra playing it. He could memorize a symphony score in an hour or so.

For the big public concert, tickets sold up to 500 lire ($2.22) a big price in Rome where music is much cheaper than black market bread, relatively. Pierino got 50,000 lire ($2,220) his father says—likewise a big price.

GUESTS ESCAPE WHEN MUSKOKA RESORT BURNS

Ferndale House Near Port Carling Lost In Early Morning Fire; Loss $60,000

Port Carling, Ont., July 17 — (CP)—Sixty-year-old Ferndale House, centre of the Canadian Keswick Bible Conference, was destroyed by fire early today. Some 50 to 60, guests fled to safety. Damage was estimated at from $60,000 to $100,000.

None was injured in the fire, discovered about 4 a.m. by the night watchman, Gail Williams of Sudbury, who gave the alarm and enabled the guests to escape the blaze.

The fire is expected to bring a temporary halt to the conference, first held since 1939, because of the destruction of food supplies as well as the main building.

The resort, some 80 miles north of Toronto, was built 60 years ago and later was purchased by the Canadian Keswick Conference founded by the late Rev. R. V. Bingham of Toronto as a centre which offered modern tourist accommodation and Christian fellowship, worship and study. It is attended annually by ministers and other church leaders and teachers.

Fire Chief Beverly Cope of Port Carling reported that he was notified of the fire at 4:25 a.m. and within five minutes he, his three firemen and some 30 volunteers were on their way to the blaze reflection of which could be seen for more than 20 miles.

The chief said he thought the fire started in the basement.

Chapel Saved

"The whole building was completely gutted by six o'clock," he said. But we managed to save the chapel which is only 30 feet from what was the main building."

One of the heroes of the blaze was Williams, 25, who has a crippled hand. He found the blaze in a wall behind the tea room and both guests and management praised his work in getting guests to safety.

Another was Rev. R. H. A. Haslam, a Toronto clergyman, who helped many, including elderly persons, down the fire escape and finally dropped from the balcony to the ground himself.

"I was looking after the fires on the second floor when I heard a rumble," said Williams. "I went down to investigate, got the hose out but couldn't find where the fire was. When it did suddenly burst out the whole building was in flames. Fortunately we had time to arouse all the occupants before the major break occurred."

Mrs. Robert Peat of Hamilton, a hostess, rang the alarm bells and ran a mile and a half to summon 23 boys from a nearby camp to help fight the blaze.

NEWEST NIGHT FIGHTER REVEALED

This powerful P-82-Mustang night fighter makes its debut in public in Los Angeles, Calif. The army air forces revealed that the deadly fighter has a top speed of more than 475 miles an hour. The centre section here contains radar equipment which can easily be jettisoned. The new fighter has a top operating efficiency altitude of 45,000 feet. It carries .50-calibre machine guns, 20 rockets or two 1,000-pound bombs. The fighter has a combat range of 2,500 miles under full armament.

Veterans May Oppose Any Move to Reduce Preference For Civil Service Positions

Ottawa, July 17 (CP)—Veterans' sources today were reported to be marshalling their forces to oppose a recommendation of the Royal Commission investigating civil service salaries that the "absolute preference" accorded veterans for the last 30 years be modified.

The report, tabled in the Commons yesterday, urged that the policy concerning veterans in the service was too rigid, and that it should be reviewed "with the object of achieving a system that is designed to be both in the best long-term interests of the whole body of veterans as citizens of the public service."

Canadian war veterans have enjoyed preference in the civil service since 1917, and J. C. G. Herwig Dominion Secretary of the Canadian Legion, said veterans organizations would definitely oppose any reduction of preference for government jobs.

The commission, called primarily to deal with the matter of senior civil servants leaving government posts because of low salaries, recommended upward revision of salaries for deputy ministers and other senior officials.

Salaries of deputy ministers which now range from $7,000 to $10,000 yearly, would be fixed at $15,000, $12,000 and $10,000 depending on categories, with special categories at $17,500. Specifically mentioned for the latter rate were Dr. W. C. Clark, Deputy Finance Minister, and Dr. C. J. Mackenzie, president of the National Research Council.

The commission proposed that salaries for principal officers other than deputies, be put at $12,000, $10,000 and $8,000, and proposed an annual increase of $100 for those in the $1,800 to $2,200 category, $150 increase for $2,400-3,300, and $0,750 to $4,500 and $200 increase for $5,000-6,000 and $6,500-7,500.

The civil service strength of 117,000 — of which 85,000 were classed as temporaries — was almost three times the pre-war strength.

The commission also found "not enough men of high calibre in the senior intermediate grades," suggesting that senior men were not able to delegate work as they should; no clean-cut assignment of responsibility for the overall management and direction of the service; no machinery capable of dealing decisively with changes in organizations, and "very considerable" delays in making appointments and promotions at all levels of the service.

The report recommended that the civil service commission be continued as an independent body, but suggested it concentrate on recruiting personnel. It proposed that an establishment and personnel division be created in the treasury board under a director-general with rank of senior deputy minister, with qualified personnel officers in each government department.

The commission reported that overlapping of duties and responsibilities between the civil service commission and the treasury board constituted the "basic weakness" in the control and management of the civil service.

Churchill's Visit Seen as Turning Point in French Foreign Policy

By HAROLD KING

Paris, July 17 — (Reuters) — Winston Churchill's visit to France for Bastille Day ceremonies Sunday came at what may prove to be a turning point in French foreign policy. French statesmen are still suffering from the shock of Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov's categoric rejection of French ideas about detaching the Ruhr from the rest of Germany.

The Kremlin's uncompromising support for a united Germany may well incline French leaders to seek diplomatic support in the west to a greater extent than in the last two years.

The conversation at Monday night's dinner in Paris between Mr. Churchill and President Georges Bidault has so far remained completely confidential, but it is more than likely M. Bidault stressed two points: the importance of bringing the British and French viewpoints on the Ruhr into the closest possible accord, and the importance of insuring French coal supplies.

French sentiments towards Britain remains one of friendliness and sympathetic admiration, as Mr. Churchill's extraordinary enthusiastic welcome in the fortress town of Metz on Sunday proved. But the French remain puzzled by what appears to them British reticence in regard to French security against her potentially overpowerful and aggressively minded neighbor Germany.

At Metz French Finance Minister Robert Schumann — himself a citizen of the frontier province of Lorraine — told the British opposition leader that French security lies on the Rhine.

The French were touched by Mr. Churchill's desire to see France once more strong, but their logical minds would now like to see this desire for a strong France expressed in Britain's policy towards Germany.

Although it is recognized that Mr. Churchill was here in a purely private capacity, the question is being asked in responsible French quarters whether Britain's wartime Prime Minister is the bearer of unofficial proposals which would help to bridge the gap between the Anglo-American and French viewpoints on Germany's future status and her western frontiers.

GEN. MIHAILOVIC AND EIGHT OTHERS SHOT AT DAWN

Die Before Firing Squad Less Than 36 Hours After They Were Found Guilty

Belgrade, July 17 (AP)—Gen. Draja Mihailovic, once acclaimed by the Allied world as the organizer of the Yugoslav resistance movement, died before a firing squad at dawn today—less than 48 hours after his conviction on charges of treason and collaboration with the Germans.

Eight other men who were convicted with the former Chetnik leader were executed at the same time.

Radoslav-Rade Radic, 56, former Chetnik unit commander.

Milos Glisch, 36, Chetnik leader.

Askar Pavlovic, 54, former Zagreb chief of police.

Dragi Yovanivoc, 44, former chief of police of Belgrade.

Vilibor Yonic, 54, Nedic's Minister of Education.

Djuro Dokic, 72, former Minister of Commerce.

Kosta Musicki, 49, former aide-de-camp to King Peter.

The capital apparently lost all interest once the death sentences were passed. Authorities were diffident about issuing any statement regarding the executions, and the attitude was that news of the executions, carried out in private, was unimportant.

Mihailovic and 23 co-defendants were convicted Monday by a Yugoslav military court. He and 10 others were sentenced to death, and the remaining 13 to prison terms ranging from 20 years to 18 months.

Two of those sentenced to death and eight of those sentenced to prison were convicted in absentia.

The Presidium of the Yugoslav parliament yesterday rejected appeals for mercy.

The trial of the Serbian-born Chetnik leader and his fellow defendants began June 10, and was marked by partial "confessions" on the part of some of the principals. Mihailovic, however, maintained that he was innocent of collaboration and that he had fought to drive the Nazis from Yugoslavia.

The Yugoslav government refused throughout the proceedings to allow United States fliers, who had been forced down in Yugoslavia, to testify that they owed their lives to Mihailovic and his Chetniks.

Charges against Mihailovic included an allegation that his Chetniks attacked partisan forces led by Marshal Tito, now Premier of Yugoslavia.

First Violence Occurs Near Gate Of Hamilton Plant

Statements on Outbreak Issued by Union, Company

By The Canadian Press

The first outbreak of violence came today on the third day of the basic steel strike even as the House of Commons industrial relations committee at Ottawa organized itself for efforts to solve the steel strike in particular and to deal generally with widespread labor unrest across the country.

Five union pickets required hospital treatment of injuries and a number of men remaining at work suffered bruises in a 3 a.m. clash at the Steel Company of Canada plant at Hamilton during efforts by the company to bring into its property two refrigerator cars with food for men inside.

From a production standpoint, this was the picture in the three strike-bound centres:

Hamilton—Partial production continuing at the Steel Company of Canada plant; company claims 2,000 men on the job; union says not more than 1,200 including 400 foremen and supervisors.

Sault Ste. Marie—Algoma Steel Company's steel mills shut down. Coke ovens operating to supply domestic gas services.

Sydney—Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation's steel mill closed down.

The strike of the United Steel Workers of America (C.I.O.) for a $33.80 minimum weekly wage and a work week of 40 hours was in its third day today. It involves some 15,000 basic steel workers.

By TIM DICKSON

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Hamilton, July 17 —(CP)— Five pickets of the United Steelworkers of America (C.I.O.) today received hospital treatment and several workers at the Steel Company of Canada Hamilton Works nursed cuts and bruises as a result of a pre-dawn clash between pickets and workers near the main gates of the plant.

The Hamilton General Hospital reported that five strikers were treated between 3:10 a.m. T.E.M. It said they were: Harold Naylor, 37, lacerations to left eye; Edward Long, 37, 3-4 inch scalp laceration; Frank Kinley, 19, scalp laceration; William Chechum, 22, scalp lacerations and cuts on forehead; Karl Kutz, 48, scalp lacerations. All are from Hamilton.

There were conflicting statements from union and company on the outbreak, first violence in the basic steel strike since it was called at 7 a.m. Monday in the Stelco plant here and the plants of the Algoma Steel Corporation at Sault Ste. Marie, and the Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation at Sydney, N.S.

The union said the trouble was started by 300 company men, armed with pick handles and lengths of new rubber hose, attacking union pickets and throwing open hearth brick, open hearth slag and beer bottles at union pickets. The company said it men were attacked by pickets when attempting to remove ties which had been chained to the railway tracks on a line entering the company property. It said the pickets attacked with billies and rocks.

Union men on the picket line told The Canadian Press the incident arose from attempt to move two refrigeration cars loaded with food into the plant where the company said more than 2,000 of its 4,800-man force are at work despite the strike.

Company Statement.

A company statement was given by Arthur Stretton, chief of the Stelco police. He said his men were removing ties which had been chained to the tracks when they were attacked by pickets with billies and rocks. He said that when Hamilton police arrived they forced the company men farther into the plant property, away from the shelter of a fence, where they were subjected to a further barrage of rocks and bottles. His men suffered minor injuries but none required hospital treatment.

Police said the clash occurred about 3 a.m. and that it was a "real battle."

Mr. Stretton's statement said:

"Shortly before three o'clock this morning we had instructions to open the railway gates on the company's property at Burlington Street to allow a train to enter. When we arrived at the gates we discovered that they were fastened with chains and the tracks were blocked with ties.

"While my men were removing these, we were attacked by a group of strikers who used billies and threw rocks. None of our men went outside the company's property.

"Shortly after the trouble started, city of Hamilton police arrived in four cruiser cars. They made no attempt to stop the attacking strikers but forced our men back further into the company's property, from the protection of a high wire fence and into the open where they were subjected to a barrage of rocks and bottles. Minor injuries were inflicted on our men; none required to be hospitalized."

Union Statement

The union issued a statement saying:

"At three o'clock this morning (July 17) nearly 300 strike-

Heirens Is Expected to Confess Slaying of Degnan Child, Two Women

Chicago, July 17 (AP)— Police officials today were said to be seeking a showdown in their nearly three weeks long investigation of William Heirens' connection with the kidnap-slaying of Suzanne Degnan and the slaying of two Chicago women.

The Chicago Tribune said today that Heirens' counsel "in the next few days expects to take a full and written confession" from the 17-year-old college student "that he was the slayer" of the six-year-old Degnan child and also of Frances Brown, 33, a former woman member of the United States Navy, and Mrs. Josephine Ross, 43.

The Tribune's story today related that a conference last Sunday by State's Attorney William J. Tuohy and his assistants and defence counsel "centred on whether the State would demand a sentence of life and 99 years or on a sentence of "natural' life.

"It is understood that the State has gained its point. The Present understanding, it is reported, calls for a sentence of 'natural' life in the penitentiary, ie., a sentence which would mean that Heirens would die in prison."

In a copyright story yesterday the Tribune said it had learned from "unimpeachable sources" that Heirens "has told" of kidnapping and killing the Degnan child and also of slaying Miss Brown and Mrs. Ross. Today, the Tribune said that both the prosecution and defence attorneys had stated "that Heirens did not tell of the murders while under the influence of sodium pentothal the so-called "truth serum."

The Chicago Sun, however, today said it had learned that Heirens, while under the influence of sodium pentothal, "admitted the Suzanne Degnan kidnap-murder when he was given the drug at the Bridewell Hospital June 29, blaming 'George Murman,' his other self, for the crime."

The Sun added that this was "the first time the drug was used in a major criminal case."

John P. Coghlan, one of Heirens' attorneys, said that use of the drug was "illegal and a violation of the boy's constitutional rights." He said that Heirens had told him that when the psychiatrists saw him at the jail hospital "I was put to sleep."

Kiwanis Club Discusses Final Karnival Plans

Final plans for the Kiwanis Karnival were the chief subjects for discussion at the weekly luncheon of the Kiwanis Club of Belleville at the Hotel Quinte on Tuesday. The Kiwanis Karnival is being held on the Market Square Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of this week and all proceeds will be devoted to the work of the Kiwanis' Fresh Air Camp.

Chairman of the Ways and Means committee, Ted Schwab, asked that every member of the club get behind the Karnival with the same fine spirit that they have displayed in past projects of the club. "If every member does this" said Mr. Schwab, "the Karnival this year will be bigger and better than ever."

Mr. Schwab then turned the meeting over to Taylor Franklin who outlined the final details. "The Kiwanis Club of Belleville has always been noted for giving generously of its time and effort in worthwhile projects" said Mr. Franklin. "Let's keep it that way in this, our biggest project of the year."

The president, Mark Vanner, acted as chairman for the meeting and the sing song was under the direction of Harold Carruthers with Leo B. Riggs at the piano.

Donations To Kiwanis Fund

The latest list of donations to the Kiwanis Fresh Air Camp follows. Potential contributors may leave their donations at a special booth erected for the purpose at the Kiwanis Street Karnival now in progress on the Market Square.

Attended Recent Convocation At Albert College

Rev. Dr. John McDowell Kerr of Toronto who entered Albert College as a student in the year 1878 and was ordained to the ministry of the Methodist Church in 1880, died at Bracebridge Memorial Hospital on Saturday, July 13th, as the result of a fall at his summer home, Crete Island, Muskoka. He was in his ninety-second year. For many years he was a noted evangelist and travelled with his brother on evangelistic campaign to Great Britain and the United States.

Dr. Kerr was present at the convocation ceremonies at Albert College on June 9 and 10 of this year and was hale and hearty then. Throughout his long life he had taken a deep interest in the school. For many years he had annually donated a prize in oratory at the college.

He is survived by Mrs. Kerr, who was formerly Gladys N. Hillis and three sons and one daughter, Paul McDowell Kerr of Vancouver, B.C., A. B. Kerr, Fletcher Kerr and Mrs. H. C. Myers.

The funeral took place on Tuesday afternoon to Mount Pleasant Cemetery, Toronto.

Audience Participation In Music Festival Impresses Local Man

As vice president of the Canadian Bandmasters' Association, Mr. Reginald Hinchey, well-known local composer and band leader, is getting in considerable travelling during recent weeks and over the weekend attended a Quebec provincial musical festival at Montreal at which musicians from all over the province attended. Guest solo artists from New York City featured the festival, with a massed band of over 2,000 musicians also being heard.

Approximately 25,000 persons gathered in the Montreal Royals baseball stadium for the festival, with the entire audience at one time joining in singing French Canadian folk songs. "It was something which a person would be very unlikely to witness in Ontario," stated Mr. Hinchey, as he commented on the enthusiasm with which the large audience joined in the community singing.

Visiting officials of the Canadian Bandmasters' Association were guests of Mayor Houde of Montreal, during their brief stay in the city.

Last week Mr. Hinchey visited Leamington where a musical festival for Western Ontario counties was held.

Many New Improvements Feature Belleville Boys' Camp at Moira L.

The first group of boys, 13 to 15 years of age, completed their term at the Belleville Boys' Camp on Monday. The second group, boys 10 to 12 years of age, moved into camp on Tuesday morning for a period of two weeks.

The camp property at Moira Lake is greatly improved this year — an addition to the dining hall, a new cabin and the extension of two others and the grading of the ball diamond and campus was accomplished with the aid of the Rotary Club of the city. Electric wiring was installed by the Y's Men's Club of the Y.M.C.A.

A new range, replacing those long in service, adds greatly to the efficiency of the camp.

The camp staff for the first period included camp director J. E. Shortt, secretary of the Y.M.C.A.; assistant camp director S. Alec Gordon, who also looked after the music appreciation group and the camp paper; chapel and Bible study, Rev. Oscar Wagar; order officer and Tuck Shop, Don Williams; swimming and boating, Spence Wonnacott.

The cabin leaders were as follows: Langley Evans, athletics; Hugh Cameron, volley ball and baseball; Jim Wright, small games etc., and Tom Buchanan.

Results of the first two weeks' activities were as follows: Honor cabin, leader, Hugh Cameron, members, Ken Allen, Doug Soule, Bill Lazenby, Jim Blake, Doug Boyle, Joel Mazer, Albert Farrar and Bob Smith; honor camper, Doug. Walmsley; best 1st year camper, Joel Mazer; high point winners in athletic field day, Doug. Walmsley, George Locke, Ken Allen; high point winners in aquatics, George Locke, Reg. Blair and Doug Soule, Gerry Desjardines; ping pong, Tom Buchanan, Jim Wright, Joel Mazer; softball, cabins 6 and 7 (tied); volley ball, cabin 1.

Excellent Stage Presentation And Novel Attractions Delight Crowd At Kiwanis Karnival First Night

Bed-Making and Pie Eating Contests Add Touch of Comedy; Special Orchestra and Entertainers Feature Stage Show

Local musical entertainers, both vocal and instrumental, were featured as part of the stage presentation which saw the annual Kiwanis Karnival officially opened on the market square Tuesday evening. An encouraging crowd of happy amusement seekers attended the opening night of the Karnival bringing happy smiles to the faces of club committee members.

The Karnival will continue Wednesday and Thursday evenings with new stage presentations scheduled for each night. Tonight a pie eating contest will be featured, while the audience will also be privileged? to hear a special "rube" band which has been cooked up just for the occasion.

Thursday evening, the final night of the Karnival will see an amateur vocal and instrumental contest with a cash prize of $15 going to the winner.

Popular young vocalists, Ronald Elmy and Arthur Duby last night were both heard in vocal numbers, while the dancing team of Barbara and Ronnie Donovan again "stepped" to the vociferous approval of an appreciative audience.

Police vs Firemen

Of course, no Karnival program would be complete without a touch of humor and a bed making contest between two stalwarts of the local police department and two fire fighters from the Belleville Fire Department adding just the correct necessary touch. Although Firemen Bob Fair and Barney Smith got away to a good start in making up their bed, something went amiss and Police Constables Bill Evans and Alfred Lloyd were adjudged to have done the best job in the shortest time. Appropriate prizes went to all contestants.

An exhibition of Highland dancing by petite and kilted ten-year-old Miss Marie Nash was much enjoyed by the Karnival crowd. Dressed in typical Highland fashion the little girl danced her way into the hearts of her audience, her ability paying tribute to her tutor, "Jamie" Clarke, who played the accompaniment on the bagpipes.

Barney Bateman was adjudged winner of the decorated bicycle contest with Barbara Easterbrook taking second place, and Bobby Noyes, third. A special Karnival orchestra under the baton of Reg Hinchey provided the musical background for all numbers, while Bill Stovin as master of ceremonies worked under a noticeable handicap as the public address system refused to give 100 per cent performance.

Set up on the market square the different games provided a wealth of amusement for those who figured their luck held good and many winners were seen carrying home trophies and prizes indicative of their good fortune.

Proceeds from the Karnival are earmarked for the Fresh Air Kamp at Roblin Lake where this summer many deserving local boys and girls will be having the holiday they have dreamed about.

Inquest Postponed

The adjourned inquest looking into the death of Marilyn Herbertson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Herbertson, Foxboro, who, late in June died instantly following being struck by a car in front of her home, has been further adjourned.

At the preliminary hearing held before Coroner Dr. J. S. Demorest, Foxboro, the inquest was adjourned until July 19th, but injuries sustained at the time of the accident by one of the material witnesses, will prevent the inquest going on as scheduled. No definite date is now set for the inquest.

Cigar Smokers To Pay More For Their Enjoyment

Cigar-smoking John Public will pay more in the immediate future to watch the blue spirals from his weed curl into the air.

The upping of prices affects all smokers from the stogy-puffing gent to those who prefer their weeds wrapped in 25c tobacco leaves.

So stated a wholesale tobacconist this morning, who is not impervious to smoking an occasional cigar himself.

The working man who paid six cents for his after-dinner smoke will now buy his stogies in pairs for fifteen cents—or if the better half can only stand the aroma of one, then he puts down eight cents on the line.

He who got slapped for eleven cents for his favorite brand will now pay a little more for singles or get two for twenty-five cents.

The wholesaler did not comment on the price of future smokes for those who generally paid sixteen cents for their Smokadoras, but is expected the change will affect these as well.

No mention was made of special prices for box-lots for potential fathers and politicians.

breakers, working under company direction and many of them under the influence of alcohol, approached the Burlington Street dock gate of the company from inside the plant. They were armed with new pick handles and new lengths of rubber hose.

"A company locomotive accompanied the strikebreakers, pushing a stone car loaded with open hearth fire brick and open hearth slag. As they approached the pickets at the gate the strikebreakers opened fire with the brick and slag and beer bottles. In all, there were about 70 strikers on night patrol at all gates of the plant.

"It should be quite clear that it was the company forces, operating under company direction, which were totally armed. One woman and her child were driven from her Burlington Street home by the bricks thrown by the scabs.

Five Treated at Hospital

"Five of the union pickets received head and leg injuries which required that they be taken to hospital.

"We are certain that Hamilton city police who brought the incident under control and who were present throughout the incident will confirm the fact that the attack was deliberately provoked by the company-led strikebreakers.

Acting Chief of Police A. J. Chamberlain yesterday stated that 'if the steel company doesn't force our hand, my opinion is that the steel strike will be conducted in an orderly manner.'

"Provocation by the company can't win this strike. The fact is, it clearly indicates that the company is taking a bad licking."

Hamilton, July 17 — (CP) — The possibility of a break in the deadlock in Canada's basic steel strike was looked for today, following a meeting at Ottawa last night of the Industrial Relations Committee of the House of Commons.

Hamilton remained the focal point of the dispute which has stopped production in Sydney, N.S., and Sault Ste Marie steel mills. It is from Hamilton, Canada's third basic steel producing centre, that the National Advisory Committee of the United Steel Workers of America (C.I.O.) is directing union strategy in its fight for a minimum $33.60 wage for a 40-hour week.

The Hamilton Works of the Steel Company of Canada is continuing to operate with a partial working force, although both sides are at odds as to the number of workers carrying on. The union says 1,200; the company says 2,000.

Jitterbugs danced last night inside a circle of marching union pickets at the main gate of the Stelco plant. A gramaphone inside a tent supplied "jive" and the picket line moved at a lively pace. About 70 persons, including a number of women and girls, formed the picket lines.

Complaints by Union

Yesterday the union complained that the company had violated wages and hours regulations, by paying workers on the job 24 hours pay for eight hours of work; by keeping them in the plant more than 48 hours in a week; by keeping girls overnight in the plant; and by having workers sleeping in the plant.

These union complaints were forwarded to the Regional War Labor Board, the Ontario Industry and Labor Board, and the factory inspection branch of the Ontario Labor Department. Prosecution of the company for violation of the regulations was demanded.

The company declined to comment on the union charges.

Hamilton's Board of Police Commissioners at a special meeting was told that the Steel Company of Canada had rejected a police suggestion that office workers be provided by police with special passes identifying them as office workers. The police said the cards would satisfy pickets that the workers were going into the plant to do office work, and not other jobs.

The company comment on such passes was: "Inasmuch as the strike is an illegal one against a government-controlled plant, acceptance of the permit system would be tantamount to a government representative condoning the strike action."

Acting Police Chief A. J. Chamberlain said he felt that unless the company insisted on trying to force the picket line, the strike would continue to be conducted in an orderly manner.

TO FRANCE TO CLAIM THEIR BRIDES

La Vaughn Stone and Robert Waider, LEFT to RIGHT, are shown being bid good-bye by Mrs. Yvonne I. James, of Flint, Mich., formerly of Paris, as they start for New York to board the S. S. Brazil, which will take them to Le Havre to meet their future brides. Stone will wed Jacqueline Caillard, of Paris, and Waider will wed Yvette Trovost, of Lehmans. Both will marry in Paris and will honeymoon on the Riviera.

Obituary

BENJAMIN CHARLES BUNTON

Benjamin Charles Bunton, 41 Pine Street, retired C.N.R. employee, died early Wednesday morning in the Belleville General Hospital. He was in failing health for some time.

Born in Essex County, England, 79 years ago, the late Mr. Bunton was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Bunton. For a time he lived at South River, Ontario, and for about 45 years he resided in this city and was an employee of the old Grand Trunk Railway and later the Canadian National Railways. Over a long period of time he held the position of car foreman in the car department and retired in 1929. He was a parishioner of St. Thomas' Anglican Church and fraternally he was a member of Toronto Lodge No. 372 I.O.O.F. for fifty years, the Sons of England for fifty years and the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen.

Surviving him are three sons, William Thomas Bunton, Montreal; Benjamin Charles Bunton, Jr., Toronto, and Albert Edward Bunton, Belleville. His wife, the former May Ford, died some years ago.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street; the funeral announcement is made in this edition.

MRS. ABIGAIL BURRELL
(Stirling)

Mrs. Abigail Burrell, wife of Mr. Robert Edgar Burrell, died suddenly at her home in Stirling shortly before noon on Tuesday, July 16th.

The late Mrs. Burrell, who was in her 66th. year, was born at Holloway and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Orrie Seeley. For many years she lived on the Ridge Road, near Stirling, and for the past four years she made her home at Stirling. She was a member of the Standard Church.

Surviving her are her husband; two sons, Henry and Gordon, Ridge Road, near Stirling; one daughter, Mrs. James Elliott, West Huntingdon, and three grand children.

Resting at the Grant Funeral Home, 68 North Front Street, until late Wednesday afternoon, then at her late residence, Stirling; the funeral announcement is made in this edition.

Scientists Probe Lightning Riddle

Johannesburg, South Africa — (CP)—When the next "lightning season" opens on the Witwatersrand, research workers of the Geo-Physical Research Institute of the University of the Witwatersrand are going to try to discover what happens in the clouds before a lightning flash occurs.

Extensive preparations now are being made at the institute to carry out these experiments. Attempts will be made to obtain definite data about the formation of electricity in the clouds before lightning discharges occur.

"Although much has already been ascertained about the mechanism of the lightning flash, little is known about the formation of electricity in the clouds," said D. J. Malan, senior officer at the Institute.

The institute's new building and installations at the University will be ready for the next "lightning season," which occurs between November and March.

The Witwatersrand is the best centre in South Africa for the study of lightning owing to the frequency of its storms. Research centres in Europe and America do not enjoy this "advantage."

The lightning will be photographed with a special cino camera, which is capable of recording what happens during about a millionth of a second.

DEATHS

BURRELL — Suddenly at her home in Stirling on Tuesday, July 16th., Mrs. Abigail (Seeley) Burrell, wife of Mr. Robert Edgar Burrell, in her 66th. year.

Resting at the Grant Funeral Home, 68 North Front Street, until late Wednesday afternoon, then at her late residence, whence the funeral will take place on Friday afternoon, July 19th., to the Standard Church at Ivanhoe, for service at three o'clock. Interment White Lake Cemetery.

PICTON

Pea-Canning In County Near End

Picton, July 17—Canning of peas will be completed in Prince Edward County tomorrow. The season for canning has been ten days' shorter than the average but the pack will be larger as factories have operated night and day. The short season is the result of the dry and hot spell which brought all varieties of peas to the ripening stage at one time. Another factor was that the canning factories had contracted for much greater acreage than they could handle if there was a bumper crop. Such was the case this year.

The peas that could net be handled at the factories will be used for seed. Prices being offered by canners are so varied that the canning crop association is looking into the matter. One factory offers $4 per bushel for dry, shells peas while another offers $2.50. Still another is paying $75 an acre, which farmers feel is not enough.

Canning of raspberries is getting under way in a few days and cherries are being handled at the Colliver and Leavens factory at Cherry Valley.

Prospects are for a bumper tomato crop and as there is a very large acreage it is possible that the factories will run into trouble in handling the yield.

L.C.'s IN HARBOR

Picton, July 17—Pictonians got a close-up view of three landing barges of the type that were used by the invasion forces, when they put into Picton harbor this week. They had been purchased from the War Assets Corporation in Toronto and were brought down the lake and through the Murray Canal and the Bay of Quinte. They were destined for Kingston as two of them are to be used as a ferry to Wolfe Island. The other is now privately owned. They got off their course and landed in Picton, having made the wrong turn at Green Point.

The landing craft are powered with 150 h.p. motors and can accommodate about seven cars. While here, one ran aground but was pulled off shore, and another hit the yacht club dock so hard it took out a section. After spending overnight here, the craft and their crews set out for the trip to Kingston.

BATTERY IN TRAINING

Picton, July 17—The 4th Anti-Aircraft Battery training camp is now in full swing. It is located at Point Petre, twelve miles south-west of Picton. More than two hundred men have arrived for a course in firing a variety of equipment, including heavy anti-aircraft guns. The location is ideal since firing can be carried out with safety over the lakes. The tents are located in a shady section near the waters of Lake Ontario and many conveniences have been provided.

During the summer months, men will come here from many parts of Canada to attend the camp which was first established here in 1939.

FIRE DESTROYS BARN

Picton, July 17—Fire destroyed a small barn on the property of Mrs. Louisa Leavitt. Some lumber and small articles were lost. While attempting to board the fire truck on its way to the fire, Roy Turner missed his footing and was dragged a distance before the truck was stopped. He suffered severe bruised arms.

COAST GUARDS CALL

Two boats of the United States Coast Guard Auxiliary were visitors here this week. The members were on a semi-training cruise from Rochester. The members are made up of a group of yachtsmen who have been assisting the regular Coast Guard recently. The visitors spoke in appreciation of the hospitality accorded them by Prince Edward Yacht Club and the lovely trip up the Bay of Quinte. Several other palatial yachts from Toronto and United States ports are visiting Picton this week.

Scout Camp

Picton Boy Scouts left on Monday for a ten days' stay in camp at Waupoos. The outing is made possible by the Rotary Club and Rev. W. G. H. Swayne, chairman of boys' work is in charge of the camp. Later this month, a number of girls will attend a W.C.T.U. camp at Consecon Lake.

BRIEFS.

Dr. G. W. Morden of Napanee is spending a few days at Picton Manor.

W. J. Wilson of Gananoque was in town this week. He was en route to Toronto where he spoke on a radio program, boosting the Rideau Lake district as a holiday spot.

When the Kingston Canadian Legion softball team played here Saturday night, winning by one run, a collection was taken for a players' benefit fund. This amounted to $101. Previously a collection had been taken at another game amounting to $111. Part of this goes to aid Fred Newcombe of Cressy who suffered a broken ankle in a game. Any other players injured will be looked after by this fund.

Mayor Ralph Warren has sold his house here to Mrs. Eldon VanDusen of Far Rockaway, N.Y. Mayor Warren and family will leave in August to reside in Barrie, but he will continue as mayor of the town, being given leave of absence.

Dr. and Mrs. Donald Bews of Kingston were guests of Dr. and Mrs. C. R. Richmond, Bishop and Mrs. John Lyons, Kingston, were also guests of their daughter, Mrs. Richmond.

Patsy Swayne and Jean Thompson are at the Diocesan Camp at Lyndhurst for a week.

Fifty men turned out Monday night to aid members of Prince Edward Yacht Club in repairing a dock to be used at the August 5th regatta.

PUBLICIZE REGATTA.

The A.P.B.A.-sanctioned international speed boat regatta here on August 5th will be well publicized. Results of the races and the early morning trials for a new world record in the 225 cubic inch hydroplane class will be broadcast over CBL network; a direct telegraph line will be run from the local office for the press, while a movie company will be in attendance to take pictures for the screen. The large entry of speed boat owners augurs well for the success of the event.

5,000 Mile Flight Over North Pole Made by B-29

Edmonton, July 17 —(CP)— A 5,000-mile flight across the geographical North Pole from Edmonton and return, the first Polar flight from a Canadian base, has been completed by a special Loran-equipped B-29 Superfortress of the United States Army Air Force, bringing back results of instrument tests and data on Polar flying weather.

Completion of the flight was disclosed today, but no details were given out by the special B-29 unit of USAAF headquarters, which has had three such Superfortresses based here for some time.

It was learned, however, that the big ship, carrying a crew of 12 in her pressurized cabin, refueled at Fairbanks, Alaska, and then flew across the Pole and returned to Fairbanks non-stop without incident, a distance of some 4,500 miles. Later the ship returned to her Edmonton base.

The fact the USAAF was engaged in experimental flights in north polar regions was reported some time ago from Ottawa and from Fort Dix, N.J. It was learned at that time that these planes were equipped with Loran, a development of radar navigational equipment and through which it is claimed navigators can determine their exact latitude and longitude anywhere in the world more quickly and precisely.

Last March it was reported in Edmonton that the three B-29's based here were to make north polar flights, but there had been no reports of any such flights until today. It is understood that all three planes have been on instrument and weather flights in the north, but the flight reported today was the nearest approach to the top of the world.

The polar flight was the first since the British RA Lancaster Aries, specially equipped with instruments for cold weather testing, flew through Edmonton en route north. The Aries crossed the pole and back to Britain.

Reports have been received that Loran stations were being built in Northern Alberta and other northern regions for testing purposes, but this could not be confirmed.

Bastille Day

France, whose revival from the late war is the hope of every free nation, marked the anniversary of the storming of the Bastille, the 157th anniversary of the French Revolution. The French nation received the best wishes from the free nations, Britain, United States and other countries. At Metz, redeemed in the last war from the hands of the Hun, the former British Prime Minister, Winston Churchill, called for the revival of Europe which meant a strong France, he said, no revival of Europe or its culture being possible without France. Europe was his first watchword and his second was France, he told his audience. To show his confidence and interest in France he spoke his entire address on Bastille Day in French and won the hearts of the French people by his thoughtfulness and tribute. As a means of the development of the good relations between the two countries across from one another along the English Channel, he said "you must never allow the slightest recrimination between Great Britain and France."

Mr. Churchill spoke from a thorough acquaintance with France, her people, her history and her ideals.

Another great figure, a former Premier, Edouard Herriot, in a message for that memorable anniversary, referred to an exhibition of masterpieces recovered from Germany, one of the returned pictures being Claude Monnet's "July 14, Rue de Montorgeuil," which showed the enthusiasm of the French people in the first days of the Third Republic. "Certainly the kind of patriotic delirium which seized our people more than half a century ago has somewhat abated but perhaps it is because of the exaggerated number of sub fete days," said Mr. Herriot. "One should not multiply symbolic ceremonies. In Greece the greater Panathenaea which celebrated with games and processions the union of Attica under Theseus preserved this exceptional character. It was celebrated in July every year but only once in five was the full significance of the festival given in suitable display. The Fourteenth of July should preserve its symbolic value in the same way, not only for us but for all people embued with liberty . . ."

The former French Premier said that "the Fourteenth of July remains a date essential not only for all Frenchmen and women but for all those who believe in the necessity of institutions founded upon the sovereignty of the people."

France has come through the ordeal of the war of aggression, brought upon the world by selfishness and inhumanity of German Nazism and she has won back her liberty and is on the way to her former estate among the world of nations, exerting a potent influence for freedom.

Everyone remembers the momentous words of Mr. Churchill in the dark days of 1940 when France was tottering under the Nazi invasion and how these words appealed and prayed for France's recovery to her rightful place among the nations. That vision had not dimmed, all through the war years Mr. Churchill saw the day when France would be free along with other states.

This year the Bastille anniversary had more than usual significance as it showed not only to France but to the rest of the world at what great cost freedom has been won and in what spirit France will move on to the attainment of her goal. The United States has a deep interest in France for historical reasons and she rejoices to see that this land is destined to play a great role in the future peace and harmony of the world.

In the Battle of Normandy Canadians too proved by their victories the warmth of feeling of the people of this country for Normandy and the rest of France with which British and Canadian history deals.

Common Cold Research

"A Common Cold Research Unit" is being established by Britain's Medical Research Council and Ministry of Health, and will start work in July at the Harvard Hospital, near Salisbury, in Hampshire which was built and equipped in 1941 and given to the Ministry of Health by Harvard University and the American Red Cross as a place for research into communcable diseases. The problem of the common cold is a particularly complex one, made more difficult because, apart from chimpanzees, which are unsatisfactory for experimental purposes, it has not yet proved possible to study it in animals. Therefore, the first objective on the present investigations into the comman cold is to find a susceptible animal, or, better still, some other laboratory technique which will permit a scientific approach to the problem. As a check on their laboratory studies, workers at the National Institute of Medical Research will, at least for the time being, require to test on human volunteers the cold-producing activities of materials they are studying.

The Railway Clock

Most people are optimists in the sense that they think they have plenty of time to catch their train. For years railway companies have tried to correct this amiable weakness by keeping the clocks outside the station a minute or two fast. Only when the too casual traveller has reached the platform, or in more technical language the concourse, has he discovered with a mixture of relief and irritation that there was no such desperate hurry after all. He need not have been so cross with the old lady in front of him at the ticket office who took an intolerably long time in counting her change. Two great railway companies have decided to abandon this time-honored practice, and in future, so it is announced, all the clocks of the L.M.S. and L.N.E.R. will show the right time. What has prompted this iconoclastic proceeding we are not told. It may be that old pretence is by now outworn and no longer deceives anybody, or that the real and incurable mischief is done much earlier, when the traveller declines to leave his house at the proper time. Again research may show that this tiresome traveller if given an inch persists in taking an ell; that because the clock is in fact three minutes fast he assumes it to be five minutes fast and dallies more than ever, so that the remedy is worse than the disease. It would be rash to contradict a railway company which has an almost unique opportunity of studying human nature in the mass. And yet surely the sight of that clock showing so painfully few minutes left does give complacency a valuable jolt.

Mental Storage

Bikini will probably prove a case in point. Today the man in the street knows that name, unheard-of twelve months ago. Knows why it has so recently made headlines the world over. Questioned, he would be certain he could never forget it, any more than what took place at that much publicized spot. But a decade or less from now the chances are that if challanged to name off hand, that famous lagoon, he could not do it. Something similar is already true of the famous V-Days — hailed by all who were not there — as the greatest humanity has ever seen. Recent as they were many who hold high their memory could not give the date of either great happening.

Events multiply so rapidly that careful concentration on even half of them is impossible. Minds overflow with facts and something of value is lost in the process. That is to be regretted but cannot be remedied. It may be better to have certain basic knowledge, and know where to supplement it, than to waste precious time and effort forcing oneself to memorize details that can be easily verified, and which half the time are of little importance in making the current of life flow smoothly.

SENSITIVE GARDEN

A garden has sensitive feelings, I'm sure,
Like those of some friends.
The hurt of neglect it can never endure.
On love it depends.

Be ever so little or thoughtless the slight,
Its charms quickly fade.
It will turn melancholy with grief overnight,
As of flesh it were made.

A garden has sensitive feelings! Beware
Of neglecting its needs!
The moment it fancies no longer you care
It runs into weeds.

Among the many beauty spots in the city are the grounds surrounding the residence of Dr. E. Connor at the corner of Pinnacle and Campbell Streets. The grounds are a mass of beautiful shrubbery and seasonable flowers all in bloom. The boulevard, which was a mud hole a few years ago, has been reclaimed by Dr. Connor and it is a mass of continuous blooms from early spring to late fall.

Strawberries are still being sold on the market in considerable quantities at two boxes for 35 cents; cherries are selling at ten cents per box or three boxes for twenty five cents; eggs bring thirty cents per dozen and butter sells at forty cents to forty five cents and chickens bring $1.40 per pair.

London Letter

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 17 (CP Cable)—They call it Britain's "Tin Pan Alley." It's not a conspicuous street but the garishly colorful windows of the song publishers are crammed with swing tunes old and new.

It's name is Charing Cross Road. It winds snakily north from stately Trafalgar Square to traffic-packed Tottenham Court Road and many a needy composer has pounded its pavements in search of fame.

The windows of the street are ablaze with song covers in blue, black, green, yellow and crimson.

Every now and then a song is singled out for special display. "Get it now and watch it grow" advises one publisher in black type. "Be in the swim" says another. Their advertisements do not invite attention—they demand it.

From upper windows tinkling pianos tell of new tunes undergoing the test of commercial quality. One publisher alone tried out more than 300 weekly and of these less than half a dozen find their way into print.

One of the newer publishing concerns was born from the song success "Show Me The Way to Go Home." After the song had been rejected by six or seven established publishers of several composers hired a small room just off Charing Cross Road and published it themselves.

Book collectors also roam Charing Cross Road searching the dusty shelves of second hand stores for classics and works on little-known subjects.

The largest store is Foyles, occupying two large three-storey buildings. Competition is keen among booksellers but they are proud of their trade. As one store owner said glibly: "Every book worth reading comes in here sooner or later."

Only 15 P.C. of Test Animals Succumb

Aboard U. S. S. Mt. McKinley, July 16 —(AP)— The atomic bomb which burst over Bikini Lagoon July 1 has taken the lives so far of only 15.3 per cent of the animals exposed to its blast and radioactivity, Vice Admiral William H. P. Blandy, atom test commander, said today.

Ten per cent of the animals, he said, were killed outright. He added that more deaths from radiation were expected to occur during the next three months and commented that mortality so far was at the "expected rate."

His report said 2,982 of the animals used in the test still are alive.

(Admiral Blandy's statement was in sharp contrast with that of an officer who reported at Kawjalein Monday that the animals were "dying like flies." The officer indicated there soon would be no animals left to take to the United States for further study.)

KINGSTON PLANT IDLE

Kingston, July 16 —(CP)— Local 522 of the United Electrical Workers (C.I.O.) today went on strike at the Monarch Battery Company plant here. Forty employees are affected.

The union said it is seeking a reduction of the work week from 44 hours to 40 hours, a wage increase of 20 cents an hour, two weeks' holidays with pay after five years and compulsory check-off.

MACKENZIE'S COLUMN

Byrnes' Report Throws New Light On Russ Attitude

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

State Secretary Byrnes of the United States in his broadcast on the results of the Big Four Foreign Ministers' Conference in Paris has dealt the cards face up.

The report throws much light on disputes that have been puzzling and worrying the public, and it therefore is worthy of careful study. There are, however, two points of peculiar interest inasmuch as they concern relations with Russia—the paramount question of the day.

The first of these points deals with the fact that, as Mr. Byrnes says, the conference "made no progress at all" on the German question. After calling attention to the United States offer to make a treaty under which there would be guaranteed the "continued demilitarization and disarmament of Germany for at least a quarter of a century," the State Secretary says bluntly:

"I do not believe that the Soviets realize the doubts and suspicions which they have raised in the minds of those in other countries who want to be their friends by the aloofness, coolness and hostility with which they have received America's offer to guarantee jointly the continued disarmament of Germany."

One of the first questions raised in this observer's mind is whether the Soviet Union's refusal to play ball in Germany is based on any desire of Moscow to gain control of Germany and thereby further the expansion of Soviet influence.

The second point to which I draw your attention is Mr. Byrnes' statement that "in the long run we shall have a much better chance to work out our problems if we and our Allies recognize the basic differences in our ideas, standards and methods, instead of trying to make ourselves believe that they do not exist or that they are less important than they really are." Here again the State Secretary doesn't define the basic differences, but they are clear enough if we dare to face them.

In the first place the Soviet totalitarian dictatorship is wholly at variance with our ideas of government. There is no possible way of reconciling the two schools. The same can be said of the Communistic economic views, which call for extreme nationalization and elimination of private enterprise. Then of course there is the vital question of religion, which Communism brands as the dope of the masses.

It is precisely because these differences are wholly irreconcilable that there is growing speculation whether Russia is bent on solving the problem by converting the whole world to Communism.

What is clear is that, while Communism and western democracy can't be reconciled, they can work side by side amicably—provided neither has any unholy ambitions to rule the world. But as Mr. Byrnes says, to build world peace requires tolerance, patience and understanding.

Get After Heads Of Vice Rackets Montrealers Told

Montreal, July 17 (CP)—Lashing out at the alleged vice and gambling racket in Montreal, D. Archie MacDonald, chairman of the Crime Prevention Committee of the City Improvement League, told the Rotary Club here yesterday that the largest legitimate enterprise in the city could not "hold a candle to our local gambling racket."

Mr. MacDonald, a Montreal lawyer, said: "Profits in the millions, overlords, fixers, collectors, a strong-arm squad that takes care of anyone so foolish as to question their right to dictate to police and civic officials, the while they mulct the public of more money per annum than we spend on hospitals and all other public charities combined.

"And where gambling flourishes it is more than a coincidence that dope-running and white slavery also flourish.

"It is not by finding a few madames that these pestilences will be stamped out. We must get at the higher-ups, the big-time operators, the boys who pull the strings and make the cheap little politicos jump like marionettes."

Most police officers wanted to do the right thing, he said, but many had found they could not buck the system.

"What enthusiasm for law enforcement can the honest policeman generate when he knows that before a raid on a brothel his superiors have permitted the plan to leak out so that only two or three women are found when the police arrive?"

From August, 1936, to the same month in 1944, 19,895 persons had been found in gambling houses and let off with costs, with not one sentence of imprisonment, he said. In the same period 4,456 raids had been made on houses of prostitution, with 7,963 found-ins and 4,000 keepers. The found-ins had been sentenced to $15 until 1943, when the fine had been raised to $20 — 'doubtless the beginning of inflation.'

"We fine the poor little disease-ridden, gum-chewing prostitutes and jail the hop-head, but the vice lords go free."

THE CHICKENS, THE LAMBS, THE CARROTS AND THE KIDS

Mairsey doats and liddle lamsie divie may be gibberish to some people but it reminds me that wool growers in Michigan used to get a poor crop until somebody discovered that the soil, drinking water and everything grown on the soil in that region was deficient in iodine. When they corrected this deficiency — by feeding iodized salt or adding minute quantities of iodides to the water or the soil, the sheep began to grow wool.

Iodine deficiency in soil, water, feed, in Montana, formerly caused the loss of a million young pigs a year. When the animals get insufficient iodine pigs are born hairless, have thick pulpy skins, large necks, little vitality. Numerous such cases occurred also among sheep, cattle and horses, until the ranchers and breeders learned to provide stock with a suitable iodine or iodide and to feed iodine or iodide regularly to the soil.

In Nebraska (writes a reader) I always kept some chickens and fed them what we raised, with cottage cheese and milk, and they were so healthy. Yes, some cod liver oil, too. Then I moved to northwest Oregon five years ago, continued raising chickens but noticed they had no pep and many died off after I had raised them to maturity and I had to kill many sick ones. They had little enthusiasm for feed and wouldn't come when called. Never saw such hens. From your column (not from the poultry columns) I got the idea that if iodin ration is good for humans why not for chickens — I began feeding it to my hens (4 drops twice a week to 40) in their cheese. In a few weeks my hens were the happiest, healthiest I ever saw. . . .

—(A. N.)

Chemical analyses of vegetables grown in Oregon, California and South Carolina gave these significant figures:

Parts per billion of iodine in the dried vegetable:

	Oregon	Calif.	S. Car.
Carrots	2.3	8.5	135
Spinach	19.5	26.0	434

A dozen other vegetables showed similar differences in iodine content. People living in Oregon, drinking the water and eating vegetables, fruit, cereals, eggs, meat, milk grown in the state are generally pretty much in need of the Iodin Ration. People living in California on locally grown food may not need supplementary iodine so much as Oregonians do, but I tell the world that it can never do any harm, in California, in Oregon, or anywhere else, to supplement the regular diet with the minimum daily requirement of iodine which nutrition authorities now believe is essential to maintain vite, and that is the amount of iodine I suggest for everybody, school child, youth, adult, in the pamphlet "The Iodin Ration"—which is available on written request (a clipping will not suffice) if you inclose a stamped envelope bearing your address.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Shingles and Chicken-pox

Can a person get chicken-pox from another person who has shingles?

—(D. C. F.)

Answer — Some scientific investigators believe herpes zoster (shingles) and chicken-pox (varicella) are caused by variations of the same virus.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

The capybara (also called carpincho of tropical South America is the largest known rodent or gnawing mammal now extant.

This animal looks somewhat like a giant guinea-pig, to which it is closely related, and attains a length of four feet, a height of two, a girth of three and a weight of 150 pounds.

It has a heavy flat head, blunt nose, small ears, a stoutly built body, stumpy tail, dark brown but coarse and rough fur and is partly web-footed.

Being largely aquatic in habits, it lives along the banks of rivers and the margins of lakes, where it divides its time between swimming and feeding on roots, shoots and other vegetable matter on land.

As a rule capybaras congregate in droves and continually emit low, abrupt grunting sounds.

The flesh is palatable, being widely eaten by the natives, and the tanned hide corresponds to pigskin of good quality.

"Capybara" is a Portuguese rendering of the native Brazilian name of the animal and is pronounced "kapp-i-BAY-ra" or "kapp-BAH-ra."

Skeletal remains indicate that much larger animals of this type once inhabited South America.

It is estimated that a giant beaver-like aquatic rodent that lived in North America up until the last ice age attained a height of four feet and a weight of 500 pounds.

The beaver is the largest extant rodent in North America and sometimes attains a weight of 50 or 60 pounds.

The Canada porcupine or "quill pig," which occasionally attains a weight of 40 or 50 pounds, ranks next in size among North American rodents.

Gloves That Go Places

By ALICE ALDEN

Spanking white accessories to light up a dark suit or dress are always a good formula for the traveller. And since no travelling costume is really complete without gloves, the choice of the right glove is of importance. Aris comes to the rescue with a grand little glove, a shortie fashioned of hand-crocheted nylon that is strong, cool, easy to wash, and quick to dry. A glove of this type is nice for town wear with informal cottons or spun rayon clothes.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Your Vacation Manners Reveal The Real You

Vacation time is relaxation time. And when you relax you will ,consciously or unconsciously reveal your real manners. If you are by inclination and training, a mannerly person, your intuitions will be so sure that everything you do or say will be a manifestation of your good manners. This is an ideal "conditioning" of your manners, to tolerate no difference between the manners you show when you are on vacation and your manners at any other time.

But how very, very often we observe people yielding to the easy temptation of "letting down" their manners when they "let down' the tempo of their non-vacation activities. Instead of regarding these precious two weeks or whatever-time as a glorious opportunity to bolster or supplement their manners by constructive contact with new surroundings and with new people, they thoughtlessly throw away this priceless chance for growth and self-development.

In the concentrated atmosphere of most vacation places, your attractive qualities are appreciated and given full scope. But watch out, for your less attractive qualities are also revealed in bold relief. So let your attractive qualities come out in the sun and have a fine time being attractive. And, on the other hand, keep yourself sensitized to the effect any less fortunate qualities have on other people. You may deplore the fact that people, and especially "summer people", are critical, but critical they are and will be if they are considering including you in their group of friends. Don't give them an opportunity to classify you as "ill-bred", unmannerly", "selfish", "loud", "catty", or worst of all, "common" or "cheap."

I am always interested in observing, in a group of people, young or older, the ones who have a tendency to lower the general tone of the group, and those few choice others who, by the highly-sensitized quality of their spirit, elevate the tone. It is not that the people in this latter group are highbrows, not that they are humorless, not that they are not fun-loving. On the contrary, they usually add to the humor, the fun, the general enjoyment of the group.

When a person of this type joins the group, there comes to the group the simulating feeling of "Here is a pleasant and charming Somebody." Try to be that kind of person.

Fashion Flashes

Frequently encountered, when viewing the autumn fashion trend, is the use of gray with brown. It is used for a charming little hat, posed at one side of the head to reveal the hair-do. Of gray felt, it is trimmed with large brown quills placed against the narrow, cuffed brim, and is veiled in brown with chenille dots in rust color.

Yes, we know that it's warm, just the same, fur coats will soon be on their way to the stores. Honey-beiged-dyed Indian lamb is used for a handsome coat, a 32-inch model. Wide ranch mink borders the wide, bracelet-length sleeves.

Long neglected is the small girl in her very early teens. She likes smart clothes, but she has had to wear anything she can get. Many houses are now catering to her and giving her smart youthful clothes nicely scaled down to her size. Made for a small 10-14 bracket is a belted suit is soft, misty blue, brown and gray plaid woolen. It has a raglan yoke that has pockets for small change — a beguiling touch.

Ideal for dress-up summer night is the feather-trimmed, airy hat Crotcheted horsehair is used for a little black hat worn way back on the head. Made with a tiny cuffed brim, it is trimmed at the side with big pompoms of clipped ostrich.

The rustle of taffeta is heard wherever evening clothes are worn. A handsome summer evening frock is of green and white plaid taffeta with an accent stripe of black. Skirt drapery is twisted to a bustle bow at the side of the smooth hipline. Boat-shaped neckline. Short sleeves have a stiff cuff made of heavily massed sequins.

Beautiful coats are being readied for the cold season. A fitted three-quarter coat in warm brown woolen has a wide hem border of natural blue fox.

You will admire the fur coats that will make their debut at August fur sales. A black Persian lamb coat, 32-inches long, with a flared tunic shirt, has full, push-up sleeves of wild mink. A sash of border of wild mink. A sash of the fur ties in front with mink pom-poms.

School days come along eventually, and the shops are getting ready for them. A charming suit, in sizes 10-16, is of black cross-barred off-white woolen, the cardigan neckline and jacket front piped in red braid. Sleeves are full ner the wrist, where they are caught with a red button. Soft front gathers of skirt blend with deep below-waist of jacket.

It is good that beautiful but oft-neglected color schemes are receiving more attention. A charming soft little suit of light-weight woolen has a pleated navy skirt and a soft yellow woolen jacket with navy wool bands around the armholes, the cuffs, the pockets and up the shoulder seams for a few inches. Worn with a navy chiffon blouse.

GIRL, 9, SWIMS OUT RESCUES WOMAN, 30

Joan Quinlivan

Campbellford, July 17 — The life of a 30-year-old U. S. visitor was saved on July 4 by a nine-year-old Hastings girl, it was revealed here Tuesday.

Joan Quinlivan, pupil at the Hastings Separate School, was swimming in the Trent River when she noticed Miss Nellie Colucci, of Ashtabula, Ohio, in difficulty in the water. Joan, who learned to swim only last year, swam out to the woman, and grasping her hand, pulled her to the bank, where she soon recovered.

Miss Colucci later visited the child's mother and told her of the occurrence. The story only became public Tuesday, however, when Mrs. Quinlivan mentioned it to Chief of Police Potton in casual conversation.

Beauty Enemy Number One—Fear! Don't Let it Get You

Lucyanne Polk, vocalist with Kay Kyser, always strives to be plea sant

By HELEN FOLLETT

If you would preserve the good looks that were given you, you must fight Fear which is beauty enemy No.1. Worry is fear, fear of something that may or may not happen. Jealousy is the fear of losing a loved one.

Selfishness is fear, of not getting the best and the most of everything. Fear is a dragon, whose fiery breath burns up the forces of life.

Fight With Courage

The weapon that fighte fear is courage. The more you use the old head, the braver you will become. It is possible for the intellect to guide the emotions, if one will just be clever enough to think deeply on the subject. Some women seem to enjoy fretting; it has become a habit.

They can't visualize themselves as gay and happy. They pour their woes into the ears of other members of the family, make them miserable. It isn't fair play.

Unpleasant emotions have a devasting effect upon the health and appearance. Get all worked up about some fancied grief and your heart will pound, the skin go cold. You can't eat or sleep. The commotion may all be about nothing. Something you think is going to happen just doesn't.

Philosophical Woman

The philosophical woman won't let herself go over the edge. She says "Hold your horses. Keep your shirt on. You've been through moments like this before. You know what it does to you. It makes you look like an old witch."

You've heard the expression "Seeing red." It's true. Anger can nearly blind you for the moment. The palms of the hands go moist. The mouth is dry.

No woman can afford to indulge in emotional tantrums. They do more damage than cosmetics can ever mend. The quarrelsome woman get a hard face, the complaining one wrinkles. And what pests they are in the family circle, keeping the atmosphere stormy and cold!

When ugly or unhappy thoughts pop into your mind, put on your seven league boots, go out for a long walk.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

No other small investment gives a woman more satisfaction and pleasure than the money she flings into the cash register of a well-ordered beauty shop. It is her haven. She hurries there to celebrate when she is happy. She trails there to get her feathers preened when they and her spirits are droopin. It is her rest cure her consolation, her retreat, where she can put herself altogether and walk out feeling refreshed and radiant.

It is about the only place where she can find complete relaxation in these days of delirious activities. When Ethel wraps her in a big flowered apron, runs her strong fingers through her hair, she closes her eyes, sighs from the soles of her shoes, sinks back in the shampoo chair, and decides to think very hard about nothing at all.

She enjoys the feel of the warm water on her weary mind, the rousing massage when the suds is distributed through her hair. She has a sense of luxury, as well as a feeling of release. What does she care if there is ironing to be done, stockings to mend? All that is neither here nor there. For the moment the home chores are forgotten.

Tense muscles become limber. Nerves untie their nots. She is far away from the half-mad world.

The Sweet Young Thing is there, prettying up for the big date with the Grand Guy who has just come home from overseas. Each curly tendril must be just so. Before she leaves she meditates upon her choice of lipstick. Very important. Her mind is filled with tremendous trifles. She goes close to the mirror, regards her eyebrows to see if there is one single fuzzer outside the fold.

The bride-to-be comes to be beautified for her wedding day. She gets the whole works. She has a facial, a hand and arm massage, shampoo, finger wave. Her fingernails are polished to a rose-leaf glow. She buys cosmetics to take with her on her wedding trip, being partial about the perfumed contents. When she is there, the whole shop is in a flutter. It's wonderful to be in love, thinks the weary matron whose honeymoon is almost a fading memory.

Here is grandma. She knows that the appearance of youth cannot be regained through beauty treatments, but she does know that last year's hair-do dates one, and she won't have it. With her silver crown finger waved and ringleted she displays her own love, thinks the weary matron

The beauty shop has become an institution. It's clientele includes the young and the old, the betwixt-and-between. Because of it, the spectacle that is woman is more pleasing to the eye.

Advice to the Lovelorn

A Mother Thinks Her Daughter Should Have More Freedom

Letters from teen-agers complaining that their parents—and most often it's their mothers—won't allow them a normal amount of freedom are an everyday occurrence. I can't keep up with them all.

But a letter from a mother who wants more freedom for her daughter than the father is willing to permit is not so usual.

Here is what one such mother writes:

Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I have a daughter 15 year of age, and her daddy doesn't allow her any freedom at all.

"She doesn't go with her girl friend any place, or have any enjoyment. He won't allow her to go to the movies, to parties or cafes with her school friends. She is in the 10th grade.

"Her daddy says such places as I have just mentioned aren't places for a girl her age. I think a girl of 15 should be sociable with her girl friends, but if I'm wrong, I want to know it. She gets troubled sometimes, but doesn't say anything.

"Her daddy goes to those places, and why shouldn't he let his daughter go once in awhile? I think if something is no place for the daughter, it's no place for the father either.

"A Troubled Mother"

You are perfectly right in feeling that a girl should go out with her friends to such places as parties and the movies. I don't know exactly what you have in mind when you speak of "cafes," but I don't believe you mean beer parlors, for I'm sure you don't want your daughter there. No doubt youre talkinb about ice cream stores and the like, which of course are quite usual places for girls and boys to go with each other. She should go to the school events, too, such as ball games, basketball games and similar athletic activities. Dances, too, when they're held under proper auspices.

I wonder what reason your husband gives for feeling as he does about his daughter taking part in these things with her friends. She has been brought up to know how to behave herself in public places, hasn't she? And to have good sound ideas about what is right and what is wrong? If you, as parents, have done your part toward giving her a reliable set of standards for conduct, and always set her a good example in your own lives, surely her father should have faith enough in the results of his own teaching to have confidence that she will not let you down.

You say that your daughter gets troubled over this situation sometimes but doesn't complain. That would seem to indicate that she is tractable, obedient girl who wants to believe that her father means to do what is best for. But if he wants to keep her respects for his opinions, if he wants her to feel that he really understands her and that she can rely on his judgment, then I think he will have to be more elastic in his ideas and show her that he is "hep" to what is going on in the world.

Couldn't you persuade your husband to try out the idea of say, a couple of times a week, with friends and to places which you both know all about? Set a definite time for the girl to be home, if it is an evening affair and let her show that she is a responsible, trustworthy person who is entitled to her normal share of good times with her friends because she will do nothing of which she knows you will not approve. Surely he will be fair and reasonable enough to be willing to give her this chance.

COUPLE SHOT TO DEATH

Norristown, Pa., July 17 (AP)—Helen Saylor Hanley, 22, and her escort, John R. Hoffman, 25, were shot to death yesterday as they sat in a parked car less than 380 feet from the home of the girl's parents. The girl was killed outright.

Police said Hoffman related before dying that a car pulled up in front and a man got out and started shooting. He was shot as he attempted to run for help.

Police said the girl had been estranged from her husband, Kenneth W. Hanley, 25, of Norristown.

Lacy Summer Picture Hat

By PRUNELLA WOOD

Not for everbody, the huge, stark shad-casting picture nat (especially the pint-sized girls).. but when the brim is lacy and fragile-seeming.. anyone can wear it.

This large, brimmed hat of open-work horsehair braid takes a bonnet curve for itself, and is trimmed about its open crown with taffeta loops. It's young, not over-whelming.

Salad plus Sandwich—Doubly Good with Real Mayonnaise!

• Salad sandwiches can be so varied and practical for home lunches—so delicious, made with Blue Ribbon Real Mayonnaise! Use 3 bread slices for each, with meat, fish, eggs or cheese as one layer of filling—cole slaw, cucumbers or tomatoes for the other. Blue Ribbon for the salad of course—to spread the bread, too.

Mild and spreadable, Blue Ribbon is made from selected vinegars, choice eggs, a secret spice formula, "Fresh Press" salad oil. Contains no starchy filler—never soaks into bread, never goes watery.

Flavor Inspiration for Soups: Use Blue Ribbon Real Mayonnaise instead of butter for a thin white sauce, and use the sauce as base for cream soups. A butter-saver that's a flavor-hit! H4-46

WEDDINGS

CASSIDY—SAGER

Queensboro (Special)—A very pretty wedding took place in the United Church, Queensboro, Ont., on Wednesday, July 10th at 12:30 when Annie Bernice, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Sager, became the bride of William Kenneth, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Cassidy, of Queensboro, Ont. Rev. Geo. Patten officiated; the church was beautifully decorated with ferns, delphiniums, roses and hydrangeas.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage, to the strains of the wedding march played by Mrs. Fred Bailey of Cooper, cousin of the bride. She looked lovely in a floor length gown of ivory satin with lace trimmed front panel lace yoke and leg of mutton sleeves ending in points over her hands, her embroidered veil with small train was held in place by white carnations, she wore the groom's gift a wristwatch also a string of pearls belonging to her mother, she carried a bouquet of deep red roses and maiden hair fern, with long white ribbon streamers.

Her sister, Mrs. Wilfred Fitzgibbon, of Belleville as matron of honor wore a floor length gown of turquoise made with fitted bodice of lace and double net skirt. Mrs. Harold Tokley sister of the groom and Miss Aileen Sager, sister of bride were bridesmaids, Mrs. Tokley wearing a floor length dress of pink lace and sheer and Miss Sager a floor length gown of Aqua blue lace and net, both made on same lines as matron of honor. All wore matching shoulder length veils with corresponding flower head dress. Claire Holmes, cousin of bride, made a very pretty flower girl dressed in pale green net and matching poke bonnet, lace and ribbon, all attendants carried nosegays of mixed summer flowers to match their costumes.

Mr. Jackie Alexander, cousin of the groom acted as groomsman and Mr. Harold Tokley and Mr. Gordon Sager acted as ushers.

During the signing of the register Miss Vivian Wyatt of Belleville, cousin of the bride sang "I Love You Truly." She also sang "Oh Perfect Love" before the ceremony.

The groom's gift to the groomsman was a billfold, to ushers, fountain pens. The bride presented the matron of honor and bridesmaids with necklaces, flower girl with bracelet, and soloist and pianist, china cup and saucers.

A wedding dinner followed in the Sunday School room which was prettily decorated with pink and white streamers and wedding bell. Tables were decorated with white tapers and bouquets of sweetpeas and sweet William. The bride's table held the three tiered wedding cake.

The bride's mother received the guests numbering about fifty wearing a dress of dusky pink floral mesh with white accessories. The groom's mother assisted wearing pale blue crepe with white accessories, both wore corsages of sweetpeas. The tables were served by Misses Kathleen DeClair, Dorothy Leslie, Frances Alexander, Louise Brown and Diana Holmes, all cousins of the bride and groom assisted by Mrs. Ernest Groves.

The happy couple motored to Toronto, Niagara Falls and other western points, the bride wearing an English wool suit in pastel yellow with brown accessories and corsage of sweetpeas.

On their return they will live on groom's farm at Queensboro.

Prior to her marriage the bride was honored at a number of showers, among which was one held on July 5th in the Queensboro United Church Sunday School rooms.

A number of friends gathered early and together compiled a bride's book. When Bernice arrived she was met at the door by a miniature bride and groom (Misses Claire Holmes and Jean Moore) and led to her chair. A number of old songs were sung by everyone and Mrs. Calvin Tanner gave a solo. The bride and groom re-entered the room pulling a double wagon, nicely decorated in pink and white paper, full of gifts. Miss Kathleen DeClair read the note of best wishes to Bernice and then presented her with the bride's book. After looking through it she passed it around and asked that it be autographed by everyone there. As she unwrapped the gifts, she read the name of the giver and any note attached. When the last gift was unwrapped, Bernice thanked everyone for their gifts and for the lovely surprise party. Refreshments were served by a number of close friends. Mrs. Charles Thompson, a former resident of Queensboro, and Mrs. George Glover, poured tea.

ELLIOTT—HOWES

Roslin United Church was the setting for a pretty summer wedding on Saturday afternoon, July 13th, at two o'clock when Jean Frances, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Howes, of Roslin, became the bride of Robert Lorne Elliott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Elliott of West Huntingdon.

Cut flowers, ferns and potted plants formed an attractive setting for the occasion. The Rev. B. Heywood assisted by Mr. K. Stewart officiated at the ceremony. Mrs. James Vanderwater of Moira, played the wedding music and accompanied the soloist, Miss Helen Cook of Belleville, who sang "Because" during the signing of the register.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage. Her exquisite gown of white silk lace net, was fashioned with a sweetheart neckline and short sleeves with long white gloves to match, while her full skirt fell into graceful folds from a tight fitted bodice. Her finger length veil of silk net was caught to her hair with gardenias and she carried a shower bouquet of Bettertime roses. Miss Dorothy Howes, sister of the bride as maid of honor was wearing a dress of blue silk lace, fashioned similar to that of the bride. The bridesmaid, Miss Mina Dobson of Port Perry, wore a floor length gown of peach net and taffeta. Both attendants wore headdresses of gardenias caught in their hair and carried nosegays of pink rosebuds, fern, white and pink baby carnations and bouvardia. Little Helen Acker, niece of the groom, was a pretty little flower girl in her dainty dress of pink net over taffeta, with a shoulder length veil caught to her hair with baby carnations. She carried a nosegay similar to that of the bride's attendants.

Mr. Don McInroy, of Moira, acted as groomsman. The ushers were Mr. Harold Howes of Corbyville and Mr. Harold Elliott of West Huntingdon.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The bride's mother received the guests in a gold printed silk dress with matching accessories and a corsage of Talisman roses. She was assisted by the groom's mother, who wore a flowered silk jersey dress with matching accessories and a corsage of Briarcliffe roses.

A buffet luncheon was served to about sixty guests. The wedding cake adorned the centre of the dining room table, decorations being carried out in pink and white. The lunch was served by Misses Hilda Howes, Dorothy Leslie, Margaret Harrison and Grace McInroy. Tea was poured by Miss Noriene Frederick and Mrs. Don McAllister.

Guests were present from Dunnville, Consecon, Queensboro, Port Perry, Frankford. The bride's gifts to her maid of honor, bridesmaid, organist and soloist were novelty bracelets, the flower girl a silver locket. The groom's gift to his bride was a string of pearls, to the groomsman a gold pen knife, and the ushers gold tie pins.

After the reception Mr. and Mrs. Elliott left on a wedding trip to Ottawa and points in the United States. For travelling the bride chose a turquoise blue dress with navy accessories. On their return they will live in Carrying Place.

SHEPHERD—PALMER

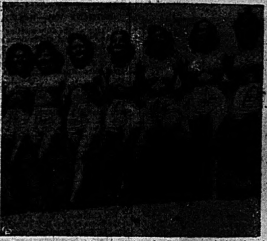
Marguerite Patricia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Palmer, Cannifton, became the bride of Robert Stuart, son of Mr. James Shepherd and the late Mrs. Shepherd, in St. Michael's Church, on Monday, July 15, at 10 a.m. Monsignor J. F. Nicholson officiated and wedding music was played by Miss Dandeno. The church was decorated with summer flowers.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white floor length gown with full skirt falling from the fitted bodice, and long sleeves ending in points over her wrists. She wore a fingertip veil and carried a bouquet of red roses. Miss Mary Farara was the maid of honor, wearing a mauve gown with matching veil and headdress and carrying a bouquet of pink roses.

The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. George Shepherd, Toronto. Ushers were Messrs. James Sisler and Stanley Morton.

Following the ceremony, a wedding breakfast was held at the home of the bride where the bride's mother received wearing a blue ensemble with a corsage of roses. Assisting her was the groom's older sister, Miss Molly Shepherd, who wore a beige ensemble with a corsage of roses. The wedding table was decorated with streamers, centred by the wedding cake. Out-of-town guests present were from Toronto and London.

POSTER GIRLS ARE LUCKY SEVEN



Florida poster girls, the so called Lucky Seven, pose in true beauty fashion before their departure by plane for Hollywood, Calif., and screen tests on July 21. Fame and fortune may be in the cards for them. Janet Ruth Crockett, on the extreme LEFT, has already had her screen test and hopes to stay in filmland.

For the wedding trip to Niagara Falls, the bride donned a blue and white ensemble with rose corsage. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Shepherd will take up residence in Belleville.

BRIDGE—RICHARDSON

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the Tabernacle United Church on Monday at 4.30 p.m. by the Rev. J. W. Houston when Helen Bernice, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Richardson became the bride of Ralph Bridge, son of the late Mrs. D. M. Bridge.

The bride looked charming in a white jersey dress and white flowered hat with shoulder length veil and carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses. Mrs. James B. Mosson, Toronto, sister of the bride was her attendant. She wore a lime green dress with white flowered hat and carried Talisman roses.

Mr. Arthur Bridge attended the groom.

A reception was held at the home of the bride where the bride's mother received in a turquoise blue dress, with a corsage of pink roses.

The bride's table was centred with a three tier wedding cake and the table decorated with pink and white streamers.

Following the reception the happy couple left on a trip to Toronto and points in the United States, the bride travelling in a tan and white ensemble with brown accessories. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Bridge will take up residence in Belleville.

British N. Borneo Becomes Part Of British Empire

Jesselton, North Borneo, July 17 (Reuters)—Union Jacks and Chinese flags flew over Jesselton's bullet-ridden wooden Survey Hall Monday when British North Borneo formally became a part of the British Empire, ending 64 years of administration by the British North Borneo Company.

Representatives of the colony's 350,000 population presented Malcolm MacDonald, Governor-General of the Malayan Union, with an address expressing confidence in progress under British colonial rule. Mr. MacDonald, former British High Commissioner to Canada, flew from Singapore for the ceremony.

May Be Repercussions

Manila (AP)—British incorporation of North Borneo as a crown colony may have international repercussions.

Nine Philippine citizens, heirs of the late fabled Sultan of Sulu, declared through council today that Britain has no right to the 31,000 square miles of oil, mineral and timber domain they claim is rightfully theirs.

The newly-sovereign Philippine Republic, not officially in the picture, also is making quiet inquiries about the validity of the claims.

The nine heirs produced copies of a lease executed Jan. 22, 1878. It gives the British North Borneo Chartered Company perpetual rights to the territory plus 14 islands in the channel between Borneo and the southernmost Philippines for an annual payment of 5,300 Borneo dollars (about $2,500).

The heirs claim the lease was abrogated by the company's failure to pay the annual grant since 1936.

In 1939 Borneo Justice C. F. C. Macaskie ruled that the heirs were legally entitled to payment and that "it is abundantly plain that the successors in sovereignty are the government of the Philippine Islands."

Economic experts here say the original lease was one of the greatest bargains in history. Profits of the North Borneo Chartered Company averaged $9,000,000 annually in return for a $2,580 lease payment.

They say also that resources of North Borneo would complement those of the Philippines, which lack coal and oil.

The Philippines became a republic last week.

London (CP Cable)—The Philippines—or at least nine residents of the new republic —may want Borneo but the British Foreign Office knows nothing about it.

"We haven't heard of it yet and must suspend any observation on such a thing until we do," a foreign office spokesman said. "I say, "they've only had their independence since July 4 —pretty quick work isn't it?"

No Foreseeable Defence in Science Against A-Bomb

Washington, July 17 AP)— Declaring there is "no foreseeable defence in science against the atomic bomb," chairman W. A. Higinbotham of the Federation of American Scientists today called for an international development and control authority.

"America must quite kidding itself about defences," he said. "It must choose between a world co-operative security or drastic efforts to minimize the consequences of an atomic war."

Dr. Higinbotham, in a speech prepared for a meeting of the Institute on World Control of Atomic Energy, said that in four more years other countries will be able to produce atomic bombs, and added:

"There is no foreseeable defence to stop atomic bombs and certain other weapons of mass destruction—weapons which in future wars could in a single night do as much damage to Europe's capitals as was done in six years of the last war.

"As a scientist, I know... that the bomb is powerful enough and cheap enough to destroy the cities of the world. Our security must be found outside the field of invention and gadgets. To me there seem to be only two courses offering even partial hopes of security for America in the atomic age:

"1. We shall ardently seek and secure a system of world co-operation under law, or

"2. We must retreat as a nation into a policy of defence and decentralization...

"....If our international course continues along the path of an atomic arms race, we shall see a war of nerves such as history does not record. Unless we succeed in establishing world control, government officials must plan defence and decentralization measures beyond description."

Would Have Editor Of Paper Appear For Questioning

Ottawa, July 17 (CP)—A leading editorial on the War Assets Corporation, published in the July 13 issue of Saturday Night, touched off a discussion at Tuesday's meeting of the Commons' war expenditures committee.

Joseph Bradette (L-Cochrane) read the editorial which suggested surplus war materials had been destroyed in order to protect producers from competition.

"If any of us know of wanton destruction it should be probed and those responsible punished," Mr. Bradette said.

Evidence before the committee by War Assets Corporation officials and the services showed there had been no destruction by the Corporation as suggested in the editorial.

Mr. Bradette said the writer and the publisher of Saturday Night should appear before the committee to give evidence for their claims.

Argument was heard on a brief by Charles E. Phillips of Toronto, secretary-treasurer of the Canada and Newfoundland Education Association. The brief called for indefinite loan of War Assets equipment to schools and substantial price concessions.

W. H. Golding (L-Huron-Perth) said the committee was wasting its time since it was not part of its work to make recommendations on how War Assets Corporation disposed of education equipment.

The committee was to suggest economies, and he did not think it was the greatest economy possible to give equipment away or sell it at 40 per cent discount.

Mr. Phillips said the indefinite loan policy was just as cheap as storing equipment.

Britain's No. 1 Mother to Receive Largest Allowance

Saffron Walden, Essex, England, July 17 — (Reuters)—Britain's No. 1 mother — the woman who will receive the largest family allowance under the government scheme to alleviate family hardships — will be Mrs. A. M. Gooch, of Tynant, Beddau, near Pontypridd, South Wales, James Griffiths, national insurance minister, told a meeting of 1,000 agricultural workers here.

Since 12 of Mrs. Gooch's 15 children are eligible for a five shilling ($1.00) allowance, she will receive £3 (12) a week, Mr. Griffiths said.

Mrs. Gooch, wife of a miner, is "only about 35 and her youngest baby was born recently," a local resident told a reported at Newtown Llantwit post office near Tynant, Beddau.

Heirens Tied Closer to Degnan Murder Case

Chicago, July 17 (AP)—State's Attorney William J. Tuohy said that George Subrowski, a soldier, had identified William Heirens as a man he saw carrying a paper bag a block from the Degnon home shortly after Suzanne Degnan was kidnapped from her bed and her body cut to pieces.

Tuohy said the soldier told him he saw Heirens about 1 a.m. Police said the girl was taken from her bed around midnight.

The prosecutor said the soldier identified Heirens in the courtroom when the 17-year-old University of Chicago student was granted a 30-day continuance for arraignment on 29 charges of robbery, burglary and assault.

Earlier the prosecutor said that Frank Van Aelst, a janitor in a building two doors north of the Degnan home, had identified Heirens as the youth he had "seen around" his building on three occasions at Christmas time.

Tuohy said he would ask the grand jury to return murder indictments against Heirens in the Degnan and Brown cases "but not immediately." He told reporters he "needed more information."

Man is Held In Latest Murder In Britain

London, July 17 (CP)—Discovery in Edinburgh of the body of Agnes Campbell gave a fresh spur to investigation as police counted the ninth female victim within little more than a month of Britain's worst murder wave of the century.

Details of the latest murder were not available. Police said merely that 35-year-old John Rutherford had been arrested and charged with the murder.,

In London, authorities announced that Walter Clayton was sentenced to death today for the murder of a 23-year-old former member of the Women's Auxiliary Air Force, Joyce Jacques. Miss Jacques was found strangled by a silk scarf on a beach at Morecambe, Lancashire.

Another convicted slayer, Thomas Hendren, ship's baker, will be hanged Wednesday at Liverpool for the slaying of Mrs. Ella Saunton, red-haired Liverpool manicurist.

Mrs. Saunton was stabbed and strangled with an electric light cord in her salon while police, investigating the establishment, peered into the room from a ceiling peep-hole.

There was no word on the progress of investigation in the other murders, which some officers have compared to the Jack the Ripper crimes of the late 19th century.

If You Are a No.1 Citizen You will look after No. 1...

THIS is not selfishness, but the realization that a community is no better, no sounder than its citizens.

The welfare of our community—Canada—depends not alone on those charged with the government of the country, but on each of its citizens—12,000,000 strong.

Today, that welfare is menaced by the danger of inflation. Already, millions in lands devastated by war suffer misery because of it.

Inflation, to the citizen, means simply less and less value for his dollar... his living costs soar as free and careless spending drives up the price of goods still in short supply.

War always brings the threat of inflation in its wake ...only the prudence of the people can keep it in check.

• • •

How? Mainly, by conservation... by buying only those goods which are in fair supply; and by saving money for the day when goods now in short supply will be readily available.

This helps to keep prices steady—to keep your dollar at its real worth.

This means that, if you are a No. 1 citizen, you will rigidly avoid black market purchases and you will save money by

- building up your savings account;
- keeping up your insurance;
- buying Government bonds and War Savings Certificates;
- holding whatever of these securities you have bought.

This is conservation—the first requisite for personal security—the first attribute of good citizenship.

Hal (Lefty) Newhouser, King Of American League Pitchers, Likely to Retain Royal Lid

Level - Headed Youngster Well Ahead of Pace Set Last Two Seasons When He Topped Circuit; Won Last Five Starts and Appears to be a 30-Game Winner

Detroit, July 17 — (AP) —Day by day, it appears as if Harold (the lefty) Newhouser again will be crowned king of American League pitchers.

The elongated, level-headed master of the mound is chucking the baseball for Detroit at a pace well ahead of the last two seasons when he topped the circuit performers.

Hal had won 17 games and lost only three as of July 15, for the best 1946 mark in the league. That figure puts him far in front of his curve-balling record in '44 and '45.

The 25-year-old mound ace had his best year in the majors in 1944 when he hurled 29 victories and suffered nine defeats. That year, through July 15, his record showed only 13 wins and five losses. In 1945, Newhouser amassed a season record of 25 victories and nine setbacks.

With this season not half completed, he has what appears an excellent opportunity of crashing into the 30-game winner class.

Hal's victories have been supported by 148 strikeouts. That mid-season mark also seems to place him in good position to crack his best previous figure of 212 strikeouts that topped the league in 1945.

Newhouser, voted the league's most valuable player for the last two years, has had more trouble with the league leading Boston Red Sox than any team this season but even that club doesn't hold an edge on the six-foot, 3-inch southpaw. Boston beat him twice; he beat the Sox twice.

New York Yankees possess the third victory gained against the Lefty's offerings. He holds four wins over St. Louis, three each over Washington, Chicago and New York and two over Cleveland. He hasn't faced Philadelphia.

Hal has won his last five starts since June 26. On that day he loafed to a 16-2 win over Boston.

BASEBALL RULES

INTERPRETED by BILL GRAY

ILLEGALLY BATTED BALL

The penalty for an illegally batted ball is "out".

This infringement is called against the batter if he attempts to play a pitched ball when one or both feet are on the ground outside the batter's box.

If, however, after the contact has been made, the batter steps outside the box in the follow through, the hit will be declared legal providing the batter connected for the hit while both his feet were inside the batter's box.

More often than not when a batter has completed his follow through one of his feet lands outside the box.

The ruling of the umpire, therefore, will always be considered final in this instance.

BISONS SCALP LEAFS 6-4 IN 11-INNING GAME

Gentry Wins 7th for Buffalo, Fanning 10; Rochester Blanks Loop-Leading Royals 5-0

(By The Associated Press)

The world champion Detroit Tigers of the American League are watching with interest the performances of a number of youthful hurling prospects they have sent to their Buffalo International League farm club. They also are keeping a close eye on the work of Rufe Gentry, 28-year-old righthander.

The tall moundsman, who won 20 games including an 11-inning no-hitter for a seventh-place Bison team in 1943, turned in his seventh win of the year last night as Buffalo defeated Toronto, 6-4 in 11 innings.

Gentry fanned 10 and blanked the Leafs after the fourth inning. Johnny Antonelli homered in the eighth to send the game into extra innings and Vic Wertz blasted a two-run round-tripper in the 11th to win the game.

Rochester moved to within three percentage points of the sixth-place Leafs by defeating the league-leading Montreal Royals 5-0, behind the two hit tossing of southpaw Johnny Mikan. The Wings ripped Jack Banta for all of their markers in the first inning.

The runner-up Syracuse Chiefs remained 10 games back of the Royals by dropping a 7-4 decision to Baltimore Orioles. Ed Robinson led the Orioles' attack on Millard Howell by batting in four runs on a double and two singles.

Newark Bears split a twin bill with Jersey City Giants, winning the nightcap 9-8 in 10 innings after Bill Emmerich had beaten them 3-2 in the opener.

BATA LOSES TO LATTA 6-2 IN LEAGUE GAME

Joe Marsh Pitches Fine Game to Tack Defeat on Fast-Stepping Shoemen; "Smoky" Smith in Relief Role

Bata war clubs failed to solve the slants of chunky Joe Marsh, Latta righthander in the latter innings of a scheduled Belleville Baseball League game in the Shoetown last night, and the "Smoky" Smith clan went down to defeat 6-2 before a large crowd of fans.

The Doc Empson-led crew pounced on the offerings of Harry, starting Bata hurler and nicked him for nine hits and six runs in four and one half innings. After that, Smith was rushed into the breach and pitched runless, hitless ball for the remainder of the game.

But the Bata hitters could not solve Marsh's slants and the husky little hurler had them hogtied to go on and win a neat victory.

Marsh let the homesters down with seven scattered blows and never was in what might be called serious difficulty. He was in minor trouble in the 4th when two hits and an error shoved over one of the Bata runs but got himself out of the hole with no further damage done. He struck out six and walked none.

Three singles by Marsh, Empson, and Rogers plus a Bata error in the second paved the way for the Latta win, three runners scampering across the plate. Tim Williams lashed out a two-bagger in the third and Vern Goyer's solid single combined with a base on balls accounted for two more Latta tallies. Two hits in the next innings scored another and the Latta batters were going to work on Harry in the fifth when the distress signal went up and Smith was rushed into the breach.

Bata scored their first run in the second on Smith's single and a brace of errors.

Solmes was again the hitter for Bata with a double and a single. Empson, Vern Goyer and Joe Marsh, accounted for six of the winners' safe clouts.

Mort Cooper, Braves: Scattered seven safeties as Boston trounced Pittsburgh 10-0.

Bill Voiselle and Bill Rigney, Giants: Voiselle whitewashed Chicago 1-0 and Rigney batted in winning run in ninth inning pinch-hit home run to enable Cards to defeat Brooklyn 5-4.

Vern Stephens and Al Zarilla, Browns: Rapped out four hits apiece to lead St. Louis to a 7-1 triumph over Washington.

WARREN BOCKWINKLE

BUNNY DUNLOP

Things are expected to cut loose on a rather large scale in the Arena ring on Friday night when Lee Henning and Warren Bockwinkle hook up again, this time under the hour-and-a-half time limit. Henning has let it be known far and wide that he could have beaten Bockwinkle the other night if he had "just a few more minutes time." This Friday he'll have the full ninety minutes and will have to either put up or shut up.

As for Bockwinkle, the St. Louis ace is confident that now he has tested the wild man from Iowa, he can count on pinning him for sure. Warren came very close to finishing Henning off completely when he got that vicious hook-slide toe-hold near the end of their hour-long bout. But to give Henning credit he took all the wonder-boy from St. Louis could throw at him and was still looking for a fight after the time-limit was called.

Bunny Dunlop gets a very special chance to prove up his oft-repeated claim that "I can lick any of them if they'd just give me a chance at those top-notchers to prove it." On Friday in the semi-final Dunlop goes against Tear Morgan, a vastly improved wrestler after his year of barn-storming through the Southern States. Now it's strictly up to Dunlop.

In the opener Jim "Toon" Henry meets Joe Mazzatti who replaces Mike Sharpe, unavailable on that date.

Chips Off The Sports Block

Ontario Amateur Softball Association bulletin arriving via mail today reminds those interested that all players' certificates must be signed by July 15 and in the hands of the O.A.S.A. secretary no later than July 20. Local associations must declare winners on the following dates: Senior "A", Sept. 1st; Senior "B" August 29th; all other series on August 15th.

• • •

The bulletin also states that all umpires for playoff games must be registered by the O.A.S.A. secretary. These registered umpires will carry a card as a means of identification. Umpire registration will be made only upon recommendation of the local associations.

• • •

According to Secretary F. R. Feaver, this year will record the largest number of affiliations in the history of the O.A.S.A. Affiliated associations will represent all parts of the province. Which means that a number of teams will do plenty of travelling before they place the various crowns on their softball heads.

• • •

Bill Moore one of the "hottest" sports fans, especially softball, in this district goes to bat with the Belleville Softball Association re the non-posting of scores on the new scoreboard at the Fair Grounds. Bill is of the opinion that the donors should be thanked and the executive roundly spanked for its "indifference or lack of consideration for its paying guests."

• • •

In our opinion the fans have a legitimate complaint in a matter of this kind. In view of the fact that the games, both softball and baseball start in the vicinity of 6.30 p.m. and a number of fans have to hurry to get there and are in the majority of cases late for the first couple of innings, there is no way in which they can ascertain the score, unless by yelling their heads off at the players or scorers.

• • •

There are some youngsters who would gladly chalk up the scores for the price of a free admission. And it is a service that should be given the fans. What about it?

• • •

Goodman Juniors face the surprising Mountain View squad in a scheduled game at the Fair Grounds tonight, and the air force blokes are in no mood to be trifled with. After their sparkling win over the loop-leading SACOS Tuesday night, the boys in blue feel they are on their way to a first slot playoff berth, and mebbe the championship. They have showed a startling reversal of form in their past few games and right now are approaching their peak.

But the youngsters too feel that they have a tough grind ahead of them in the forthcoming playdowns, and are getting in a lot of work preparatory to the championship quest. They are not alarmed by the late-season showing of the air force crew and will be out there doing their best. At least, so Manager Don Barrett maintains, the Mountain View squad will know they've been in a ball game.

• • •

Big Ernie Smith returned to the form that characterized his hurling years ago has been one of the features of the Belleville Baseball League during the past few weeks. The big fellow threw a no-hitter against Batawa recently and came back last night to record a two-hitter to shut out the Kiwanis Juniors 8-0. Besides that, Smitty is wielding a potent war bludgeon and last night pounded out a couple of safe knocks just to keep his hand in.

• • •

Bobby Bunton after a somewhat shaky start and some bobbles by his mates settled down after a disastrous four-run innings until the latter part of the game when SWACOS notched three runs to dunk the pastime.

• • •

The acquisition of Nicky Sero by SWACOS has been a Vitamin D for the plant lads. With Nicky, whom we still think is the starriest shortstop in the league cavorting about the infield and Walt Gerow back at first, the SWACO defence has taken on a new lease of life. Indications point to a few upsets in the baseball playoffs as well as those of softball.

• • •

And Doc Empson's Latta gang, refusing to be daunted by the record of "Smoky" Smith and his Batawa crew rose up on their hind legs last night in Shoetown and set the home prides back with a 6-2 defeat. Chunky Joe Marsh, hurled a neat piece of flinging, and had the Bata sluggers helpless after the second chukker. "Smoky" went into the breach after the damage was done, and hurled hitless ball, but his mates were impotent against the Marshian slants, and you can't score runs without hits. Many, that is.

FELLER WHIFFS SEVEN IN RED SOX 2ND DEFEAT

Dusak Clouts 3-Base Pinch-Hit to Win for Cards; Keltner Slams 2 Homers for Tribe

Ervin Dusak, virtually unknown rookie outfielder of St. Louis Cardinals is the fairhaired boy to thousands of fans in St. Louis today.

Known as "Four Sack Dusak" or "The Bohemian Blaster" during his tour of the Cardinal farm system, Dusak hammered what perhaps may become one of the most important blows of the National League pennant race at Sportsman's Park last night.

The 26-year-old slugger clouted a three-run pinch-hit ninth-inning home run to give the Cardinals a 5-4 victory over the league leading Brooklyn Dodgers and move the Redbirds to within half a game of the Brooks.

Dusak, who made his major league debut with the Cardinals in 1941, batted for pitcher Howie Pollet in the last frame after southpaw Joe Hatten had nicked Marty Marion with a pitched ball and Clyde Klutz singled. After fouling off a pitch and taking a called second strike, Dusak crashed Hatten's next offering into the left field stands to enable the Cards to sweep their four-game series from the Brooks.

Chicago's third-place Cubs missed an opportunity to gain on the Dodgers as Bill Voiselle of New York Giants blanked the Cubs, 1-0 on six hits. Bill Rigney singled in the winning run in the ninth frame to keep the Bruins 4 1-2 games off the pace.

Boston's front-running American League Red Sox dropped their second home game of the season to a western club as Bobby Feller of Cleveland Indians scattered nine Red Sox's hits to post his 16th victory of the year.

Feller fanned seven to run his strikeout total to 202 for the season. Ken Keltner slammed two home runs and Pat Seerey one to aid the fireball king to victory.

Boston Braves took over undisputed possession of fourth place in the National League by trouncing Pittsburgh Pirates, 10-9 behind big Mort Cooper while Cincinnati Reds were shutout 2-0 by Schoolboy Rowe of Philadelphia Phillies.

St. Louis Browns retained their fifth-place deadlock with Cleveland by trimming Washington Senators 7-1 behind Jack Kramer. Al Zarillo and Vern Stephens led the Browns' attack on three Washington hurlers with four hits apiece.

In the only other contest of the day, Portsider Edgar Smith of Chicago White Sox limited Philadelphia Athletcs to five safeties in elbowing the Pale Hose to a 6-2 victory.

What's Doing in Sport

By The Canadian Press

After being released Sunday by Buffalo Bisons in the International League and early in the year by Washington Senators, outfielder Bruce Campbell has proceeded to Washington to claim $9,000 for this year's salary under the Selective Service Act. Campbell served three years in the U.S. army and had been given a $9,000 contract by the Senators similar to the one he had in 1942. He was released, however, before the season opened.

The case is a parallel to the claim for a year's salary which Al Niemec recently won against the Seattle club of the Pacific Coast Baseball League.

Rain came as a break for the Yorkshire County Cricket team yesterday when the weather forced a draw for the match with the Indian tourists after the latter had run up 490 runs for five wickets declared in the first innings to 300 by Yorkshire.

Buffalo Bisons, American Hockey League champions, signed up two ex-servicemen yesterday in Hubert Macey, former centre of New York Rangers, and right-winger Stan Warecki, formerly with Buffalo before joining the Canadian army.

Three American track stars monopolized the international field day at Basel, Switzerland, yesterday when Barney Ewell of Lancaster, Pa., won the dashes, Jim Rafferty of New York took the 3,000-metre run and Johnny Fulton of San Francisco won the 800-metre.

The government of Ecuador yesterday bestowed the decoration of merit on Francisco (Pancho) Segura for his tennis accomplishments in the U.S., England and France. He is the national indoor champion of the United States.

After losing the opening singles matches in the Davis Cup European zone finals, Torsten Johannson and Lennart Bergelin of Sweden turned on the Yugoslavians to win the doubles match yesterday in five sets at Varberg, Sweden.

The Brookneal, Va., semi-pro baseball team is a Wade family monopoly. Nine Wade boys are the team, the 10th is the batboy. Papa Joe Wade is manager while Maw Wade and her four daughters sit in as spectators.

Fifty-one U.S. army golfers played the opening round yesterday in a driving rain for the European theatre championship on the St. Cloud course in France. leaders, with 78s, turned up in former club pros, Mathew Cisowski of Glenwood, Ill., and Joseph Noviello of the Westchester Club, New York.

Cecilia Colledg, 26, holder of the British women's skating championship since 1935, turned professional yesterday and is scheduled to appear in an ice revue at London in September.

The Macken tennis brothers of Montreal came through with first-round victories yesterday in the U.S. western hard courts championships at Neenah, Wis. Jim Macken defeated Dick Flom of Wisconsin while Brendan Macken downed Frank Chase also of Wisconsin, both by two-set verdicts.

Robert Murphy of Boston, organizer of the American Baseball Guild held a closed meeting at Pittsburgh yesterday with 18 members of the Boston Braves team in a move to unionize the club roster. No announcement was forthcoming after the session.

Winnipeg, July 17 — (CP) — Tommy Lockhart, business manager of Madison Square Gardens and president of the United States Hockey League, has stepped into the ranks of those who bemoan the passing of pattern hockey and the birth of the "scrambly" type played today.

In Winnipeg to arrange for New York Rangers training camp here next fall, he wasn't loath to voice his nostalgia.

"When the Colvilles and Shibicky (The Ranger forward line of Neil and Mac Colville and Alex Shibicky) first came to New York they used to map out plays on a piece of paper and then work at them on the ice until they had them perfected.

"The fans got to know what to expect when a certain play started and they liked it. Basketball and football teams have certain plays and formations and that's what makes those games popular. Hockey needs more of them."

But Lockhart has a far more radical idea — for a front office man — than a return to pattern hockey. He visions professional stars drawing up to $20,000 in a few years. For that matter he does not stop there. He also foresees a professional hockey league embracing teams from Canada, the United States, Mexico, the British Isles and continental Europe. It will be done with airplanes.

Manitoba tennis probably isn't what it was before the war but the championship tournament produced at least one match that was close to an endurance record. A women's singles duel, it was called on account of darkness at 11-11.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

A bridge rule is a general guide for the majority of hands. Each general rule may have branches. Each branch may have deviations. Each deviation may have subdivisions.

General rule says to return the suit your partner has led. One branch of it says: Lead back your highest if you started with less than four. There are deviations from this.

Another branch of the general rule says: Return the fourth best of your original holding in partner's led suit. This applies only, of course, when you started with at least four cards in it.

Even then, you do not always lead the fourth best. Times are when you deviate. For instance, when you must unblock. That is, when you must get out of your partner's way in that suit.

South is declarer at three no-trump when spades are like this.

NORTH

WEST
♠8 7 4 3 2

EAST
♠K 10 9 5

SOUTH
♠Q 6

Your partner in the west steps out with an opening lead of the spade trey. When dummy in the north plays the jack, you hop onto it in the east with your king. Return a spade. But which?

You had an original holding of four cards in partner's led suit. Rule says to return its fourth best. Originally, therefore, you would return the five of spades from what you had left.

But west promised at least four spades by his lead. If he also has the undisclosed deuce, he had more than you. The most tricks can be taken by your side if west finally gets the lead.

To help accomplish this, you must unblock. That is, you must first get rid of your highest spades. In this case, you must lead back your highest spade instead of your fourth best.

Return spade ten. On the third round of spades, use your nine. Your partner can then overtake your five and cash a fifth spade.

Get out of the way and let a man run who can.

Hollywood Column

Hollywood, July 17 (AP) — Jane Russell would rather chase males than have them pursue her.

This information came forth while we were discussing her two pictures, "The Outlaw" and "Young Widow." She agreed with most of the critics that neither was particularly suited for her talents, although "Widow" marks a great advancement over the primitive "Outlaw."

"I don't want men to chase me in pictures. I'm not like that. I can't stand the fawning type of man who comes around on his knees begging for a touch of the hand. I'm the man-chasing kind myself."

Unabashed, Jane will tell you that she pursued football star Bob Waterfield for seven years before he married her.

As for her future, Jane would like to steer clear of heavy dramatic roles. 'I'm no Bette Davis and I know it," she said. "But I think I could play light roles, the kind that Jean Arthur used to do."

Jane, who has appeared in two pictures in six years under contract to Howard Hughes, will probably be seeing more action in the future. Her contract with the fabulous Texan ends next year and she is going to arrange it so she will be in more films.

Brooklyn has been fooled by M.G.M. The studio said it wouldn't film parts of "It Happened in Brooklyn" there as planned, because it was feared the citizens would swarm Frank Sinatra.

Tourists are swarming to Hollywood, all wanting to visit the studio. It can't be done—unless you have an uncle who's a producer....James Craig is more interested in the grain market than his press notices. He's trying to fatten his 6,000 turkeys for Thanksgiving delivery.

Hole-in-One Gets You a $5,000 Private Airplane

Spokane, July 17 — (AP) — The Spokane Athletic Round Table billed its $15,000 hole-in-one golf tournament as the "nation's richest" and today its directors claimed they had removed any possible dispute on the question.

Curt Bolton, 27-year-old Spokane war veteran, yesterday won the first prize, a $5,000 airplane, on the third day of the two-week contest.

The Round Table board of directors, sponsors of many costly gags, promptly put up $5,000 more for another airplane despite the fact that the contest still had on the prize list a $3,000 automobile and a group of large cash prizes.

Board members explained that they felt the airplane was the big incentive to boost proceeds. They pointed out that 50 per cent of the gross income would go to families of nine Spokane ball players killed in a bus accident June 24. The remaining 50 per cent will be divided between infantile paralysis and cancer research.

Bolton worked three days to win the first airplane, expending $38 for 114 shots at the rate of $1 for each three. A No. 7 iron shot on the 125-yard hole won him the prize.

The Round Table board of directors today put a limit on the number of airplanes they will give away. If more than one ace is on the record books when the contest ends July 29, the dead-eyes will have to shoot off their tie for the top prize.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON JR.

New York, July 17 (AP)—Historical note: You've heard of Cap Anson as a great baseball player, but did you know he was a first-class bowler, too?...Back in 1904 he had a team called the Ansons which won the American Bowling Congress title and Cap contributed 537 toward the winning score of 2,787...Another celebrated baseball bowler was Kip Selbach, who helped win the A.B.C. doubles in 1903 and the team title five years later.

Shorts and Shells

Red Hogan, who'll quarterback the University of Kansas football team next fall, hit .400 for the baseball team last spring and recently fired a 79 and 77 on his first two trips around the Lawrence (Kas.) golf course....That distinguishes him from ordinary quarterbacks, who likely would hit 400 in golf and .079 in baseball....Larry MacPhail is in one of his old Brooklyn "Berling" moods about the story that he said there'll be a wholesale shakeup in the New York Yankees of the American League... The new professional basketball association will need a $2,000,000 take to show a profit next winter and some club owners already are wondering if they can make it...When Manager Greg Mulleavy of the Orlean, N.Y., Pony League club couldn't find a winning combination in his lineup, he asked league President Spencer Harris to make a try... Harris wrote out a batting order and the Oilers used it to win 10 straight...No, Mulleavy wasn't fired.

Dots All, Brothers

Frank Murray, Marquette University coach who is quite a pianist, is spending his vacation at Green Bay, Wis., in a house formerly occupied by Frederick Stock, Chicago symphony orchestra director...Howie Johnson, former Yale swimming captain, is expected to sign a movie contract as Esther Williams' leading man...Shows where a college education can get you.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The House I Live In"
"Tars And Spars"

"The House I Live In," a motion picture short starring Frank Sinatra, and designed to advance Americanism through better social understanding, starts next at the Capitol theatre

The picture is the outgrowth of Sinatra's interest in young America for whatever time permits he makes impromptu addresses on Americanism to groups of youths in schools and clubs throughout the nation Frank Ross, the producer, inspired by his work in the cause of interracial and religious harmony, suggested to Sinatra, and director Mervyn LeRoy, that a film based on the theme be produced. All three volunteered their services, as did Albert Maltz, author of the novel "The Cross and the Arrow" while RKO Radio provided its studio and its distributing facilities. In his inimitable style, Sinatra sings two song in the featurette. "The House I Live In" and "If You Are But A Dream."

"On the same program the musical "Tars and Spars" which is jam-packed with entertainment! Chuck-full of talent! Smash songs! Sensational dances! Tender romance and hilarious comedy. The stars are Alfred Drake, Janet Blair and Marc Platt. Also will be shown a western "Stage Coach Outlaws" Starring Buster Crabbe and Al "Fuzzy St. John.

ERNIE SMITH HURLS SWACOS TO 8-0 VICTORY

Shuts Out Kiwanis Juniors With 2-Hit Mound Job Before Fine Fielding Display of Mates

Big Ernie Smith, who is pitching the best baseball of his lengthy career, rolled up his sleeves at the Fair Grounds last night, stepped on the mound and hurled his SWACO team to a neat 8-0 shutout over the Kiwanis Juniors.

And the tall right hander not only allowed but two measly hits but rapped out a pair of safeties himself to aid the winning cause. He struck out eight and walked two.

Bobby Bunton, on the mound for Kiwanis was touched for nine hits over the seven innings route with the blonde kids losing the game in the first heat. Two hits and a brace of errors accounted for four of the winner's runs in this frame and after that it was all Smith and a brilliant fielding display by the rest of the SWACO tribe.

Bunton settled down after the disastrous first, and allowed one run in the second. He held SWACO scoreless until the sixth when they again broke out in a scoring rash and sent three runs across the plate to ice the pastime. Incidentally the youngster got the only two hits registered off Smith, one of them a rousing two-bagger.

SWACO fielding was outstanding. In the first, shortstop Nicky Sero stabbed B. Green's hard line drive and doubled Bush off second. In the last heat, Rowbotham, SWACO third sacker speared Wright's bid for a hit as it was travelling on a lone and doubled St. Louis off first to end the pastime.

Gerow and Smith led the winners' hit parade with two each. Fitzpatrick and Rowbotham got doubles, as did Sero. Whitman, the league-leading hitter went hitless.

Bill "Tiger" Orr Makes Fight Debut Here Tonight

Bill "Tiger" Orr, Belleville's latest heavyweight "find", will get his first taste of ring experience when he climbs into the ring against Oshawa's "Al" Knapp in the four-round semi-final at Hume Arena tonight, (Wednesday). Orr has been in strict training for the last few months under the watchful eye of "Eddie" Lee and Lee has every confidence that his boy is ready to tangle with the best of them.

Reputedly a powerhouse puncher, Orr has been "dropping" his sparring partners right and left in recent workouts. He was slated to appear in the local ring a month ago against Kingston's "Darkie" Brookes but, at the last minute, Brookes didn't show up. Much interest has been centred around Orr since it was announced that he was going to make his ring debut and a large number of the local fistic fraternity should be on hand to watch him in his first start.

His manager-trainer, Eddie Lee, is so certain that he will make good that he has already booked a battle for him in Toronto next month. If he does come up to all predictions, a "go" between him and "Tony" Acerra would be a "natural" as far as local fans are concerned.

The main "go" between Belleville's George Polmanter and Grant Howard of Peterborough, should be a dandy. Howard is also an army fighter and Murray Schwartz of Oshawa is so certain that he will make things tough for Polmanter that he is paying the Peterborough's lads expenses. Polmanter is doing the best fighting of his life right now but this fact apparently doesn't worry Schwartz a bit. He is the one who suggested the bout so he must feel pretty confident about Howard's chances with the local fighter-promoter.

The preliminaries all look good. Ron Mansfield, the most improved local fighter who made such a good impression on last week's card, will tangle with Dan Ferguson of Trenton. Trenton's Lorne Vieau will trade punches with Oshawa's "Bud" Henry; Cecil Anderson will meet "Pete" Babcock of Oshawa and Bill Anderson 'goes" with Wilf Duby. Two other bouts will complete the card.

In all, there will be eight good bouts and from here, the card looks like a dandy. In order to allow sport fans to see their favorite ball game, the first bout will be underway at 9 o'clock.

Canada Will Play National Baseball Congress Winner

Wichita, Kas., July 17 (AP) — Gags and gadgets are out for the opening night ceremonies of the 12th annual United States semi-pro baseball tournament here Aug. 16, says Ray Dumont, president of the National Baseball Congress. Canada will play the tournament winner.

Instead the ceremonies will be dignified, as befits a tournament of state champions playing hosts to A. B. (Happy) Chandler, professional baseball's Commissioner.

Past national tournaments have had some peculiar crowd-drawing features devised by Dumont.

There have been fireworks — of course—and women umpires, and even a game in 1944 with the players running bases both ways so that a home run with bases loaded would have meant seven tallies.

But plans for a genuine "cow-pasture" contest, with bovines roaming all over the field, and for the premiere of "Hurling Herbert," the gadget to flip spare baseballs to the pitcher from a box beneath the mound —to save throw-in time—went out the window when Dumont received word from Chandler he'd be on hand for the opening game this year.

"It'll be strictly baseball in the 1946 national," Dumont decided.

Out of the game since June 1 with a sprained ankle, Andy Pafko, regular centre fielder, is ready to rejoin the Cubs, it was announced yesterday by the Chicago National League champions.

FEEDING HUNGER-STRIKING PYTHON BY FORCE

A large "gallery" of spectators look on as keepers at the St. Louis zoo give the monthly meal to the "Maharani of Wang Poo," a 21-foot, 250-pound python, which is on hunger strike. The big snake is fed once a month, forcibly, with a rubber hose and a ramrod. Here an attendant is using the tools to cram 12 pounds of hash, made of rabbit and horse meat, down the python's throat. Maharani has been in the zoo since 1928, but didn't begin her hunger strike until seven years ago.

FAITHFUL

BY MARGARET GORMAN NICHOLS

CHAPTER 9

"There's no time for this if you're going away. If you think I've thrown away my opportunity, you mustn't let Eve throw away hers." She turned away and said quietly, "There's some money in my dressing table drawer. You might need it."

An hour later she left in a cab with her mother. As she walked toward the elevator in the Medical Arts Buildings she knew her knees were trembling. Everything was so confused, so tangled! Reproachfully she thought, "Eve, how could you? How could you? The opportunity you've dreamed of, and you're throwing it away for people who want only your money. Have I the right to reproach you really? In Mark is everything I've dreamed of an I'm throwing that away too."

At five Joel, tall and blond, in new clothes, waited for her in the outer office.

"The sky is the limit tonight, Iris. I'm glad your mother knows you've been seeing me. She won't be so shocked when we are married."

They went to the same supper club where Mark had taken her. Iris, her hands folded on the table while Joel drank several cocktails, despised herself for comparing the two men. Joel, in a festive mood, talking continually of himself. He returned a drink because it was made with "cheap liquor" and reproached the waiter. Iris was filled with loathing for his superficial grand manners and vulgar display of money.

"Order what you want," he told her. "You can get service when you pay for it."

Like a child, she thought wearily, who was a bigger toy than the other child. Mark wasn't like this. He was too fine to boast and command.

Two hours in a dark cinema relieved some of her tenseness. When they came out of the theatre, they took a cab to the swanky bar of a popular hotel.

"I nearly forgot," said Joel. "Imagine—forgetting this! Iris." he leaned closer, "I—I've got your ring, your engagement ring."

He did not notice, reaching for the small velvet box, how suddenly desolate were her eyes. Iris thought, "Why don't you ask me if I still love you as much as I loved you two years ago? Two years ago. I was a child then—in love with love—not in love with you. Now I feel a century old. Oh but can I hurt you and be cruel? Can I spoil the only extravagant gesture you've ever had? Joel, I pity you for your blindness and conceit."

He said "Your hand is so cold" when she slipped the ring on her finger. Iris lifted her hand as if it bore a tremendous weight and looked at the glittering solitaire. This bound her promise more tightly. What a fool she was, and what a liar!

"It's lovely, Joel. Beautiful. But your sudden prosperity takes my breath away."

"I've only started. Aren't you going to kiss me?" And Iris lifted lips that were cool and tight with contempt for herself that loyalty to Joel, now ragged and tarnished, had to be put above the splendor and ecstasy of loving Mark Christian.

The bar was crowded with the after-theatre crowd. Iris followed the waiter to a table near the bar and then told Joel about Eve.

"So it went to her head," he said, and her mouth curved with the irony of it. "Is your mother going to bring her home?"

"I don't know," Iris answered gravely, "and I shudder to think of the scene taking place in New York now."

"You'll be out of that soon in a place of your own."

She looked down at the solitaire, frowning. Why did he keep saying it? Why must he remind her of what she must give up for him?

Lifting her eyes she drew back a little, seeing Mark standing at the bar with a beautiful woman with straight black hair and an exquisitely patrician face dead white against the red of her mouth and the darkness of her eyes. They were gaily talking over their drinks.

Iris felt a sudden twist of pain and shame, wanting to take her eyes from his tall figure but unable to draw them away. Joel was a blur to her. Other people, talking, laughing, humming to the faint music, were also distorted blurs. Through the smoke and haze Iris saw only him and her eyes were guilty with the thought of him that never left her, and bleak with envy for the woman smiling intimately in his eyes.

How could he love her, torn between a thousand unsolved problems, when he could love a woman like this woman—cool and gracious and untroubled? What could he see in her when he could love women who wore soft velvet such as this woman wore, with diamond bracelets glittering on her arm.

Joel pricked the awkward silence, saying, "Now I've been making plans...." and Iris shifted her eyes to his to shut out the figure of Mark.

Camilla Winters said, "Why are you looking so strangely, Mark? Is it something pleasant you see?"

"Someone I know," he said crisply. Someone he knew? What a lie! Some one he loved, some one who was never out of his thoughts, some one so dear and gallant he felt himself unworthy. How shocked Camilla would be—so sure of him—were he to say, "Over there, my dear, is Iris Wade and since I've known her everything has stopped for me except to see her. The man you think so stern would humbly go on his knees if she'd marry him."

Camilla laughed brittly. "Oh, I can guess. She is beautiful, Mark. But—shall we say—a little too much of the secretary? She is a secretary, isn't she? I'm never wrong." She put her arm through his. "You don't have to tell me who she is and you don't have to look like a fighting lieutenant. I've finished my drink. Let's get out of this smoky place."

Sunlight streamed through a spacious drawing-room where at least fifty women dressed smartly in afternoon clothes played bridge—some with boredom, others with high intensity. At the same table were Annette Tracy and Camilla Winters, partners in a slam bid and smiling smugly at each other that the bid was as good as made.

They were quite different — Annette and Camilla. Annette with her too pale hair on a sharp-featured face, Annette married to one man and in love with another. And Camilla, the elegant aristocrat, who had come back from Paris because not even the ocean she had put between Mark and herself had dimmed his tall figure and lean face and dark eyes from her memory.

Had Iris known that Annette and Camilla were sitting opposite each other she would probably have said in her young wisdom that it was not bridge they were playing but a game of destiny, her destiny, being shaped by two spoiled mercenary women.

"Well done," said Annette when the hand had been successfully played.

"I can't stay for refreshments," said Camilla, wearing a severe black Parisian frock edged with white. "My car is being repaired and I borrowed Mark's. I told him I'd pick him up at his office."

"His office?" Annette asked. "I thought perhaps you meant Louis' office since he spends so much of his time there."

Camilla's smile was puzzled. When the two other women at the table went for cocktails, she leaned forward and said, "I don't think I understand."

"Louis has a beautiful secretary, Iris Wade. And beautiful secretaries just seem to be a part of every bachelor's life."

Camilla lighted a cigaret before she spoke.

"Oh, I see. Then that must have been Iris Wade I saw at the Gregorian bar the other night."

They looked at each other with perfect understanding. When men are concerned women can have few secrets from each other. Annette thought, "She loves Mark. That's why she came back. And she's his kind." Camilla smoked thoughtfully, thinking, "Annette is jealous of Iris Wade. That's why she's telling me this."

"Iris," Annette went on, "is the sister of the girl who won the voice contest the papers made so much of. Do you remember? From what I can learn it is quite an ambitious family. The mother wants to capitalize on Iris's good looks and Iris herself will stop at nothing." She paused a moment, "Even to breaking up another woman's home."

"You don't mean—your home?"

"I mean precisely that," Annette continued with obvious pleasure. "Cruel, isn't it, when two people have worked together as Louis and I have worked to see an uncultured nobody tearing our security to pieces."

Camilla said, "Wait. Let me understand this clearly. Iris is the sister of the girl who won ten thousand dollars. Yes, I read it in the papers. It didn't sound legitimate to me then." A satisfied smile parted her lips. "How stupid I've been! How stupid everybody's been! It wasn't legitimate." She met Annette's eyes. "Mark paid that money. I know him well enough to know the way he does things." She laughed dryly. "Every one was talking about it and I heard a reporter say that there was something to it that would shock people if it ever came out."

"But why did he do it? Why should he?"

With a crimson tipped finger Camilla crushed the life from her cigaret. "For sweet charity, for one thing, and probably to clear the way for himself with Iris. Don't misunderstand. I know Mark's generosity and modesty. Iris Wade and her family don't know that he's the benefactor. It's perfectly simple when you put the puzzle together."

"It's a nice story for the newspapers."

"Newspapers?" Camilla laughed huskily. "No, you're wrong. I wouldn't humiliate him by telling the world about his fling with a girl so inferior to him." She picked up her small velvet purse from the bridge table. "You see, Iris Wade won't understand his good motive when she knows."

Prices of Beef To Rise 2 to 6 Cents Monday

Ottawa, July 17 (CP)—The Prices Board announced last night its revised schedule of beef pricing and grading, designed to provide a more workable system of meat distribution, will become effective across Canada July 22.

The new system was announced July 3 when the board disclosed that wholesale ceilings on top grades of beef would be raised two cents a pound effective July 20, with some isolated increases in retail ceilings.

The new system will replace the former pricing schedule, partially suspended from May 27 to July 20, when the wholesale ceiling prices were temporarily removed on red and blue brand beef to encourage marketings of top-quality cattle.

Forecast 2-6 Cent Increase

The board said the new wholesale schedules, while involving some "slight" increases to the consumer on the three top grades, should mean "substantially higher" returns to the producer of good quality cattle than was obtainable under the previous order.

Board officials said the new pricing schedule will involve price changes to the consumer vagrying from two cents a pound below, to a maximum of six cents a pound above previous price levels.

Price Zones Unchanged

Under the new schedule, Montreal and Toronto will be placed on the same retail and wholesale price level for red, blue and commercial grades. The boundaries of all pricing zones will remain as at present with the exception of the Ottawa-Hull area, transferred from Zone 5 to Zone 4.

Following are the major changes in the new pricing and grading schedule:

1. Wholesale ceilings of red brand beef carcasses, basis Toronto, will be reimposed at a level two cents a pound higher than that in effect when the ceiling on this grade was suspended May 27. In other zones, the increase in the wholesale ceiling will vary from one cent to two cents a pound, so it will allow for the difference in freight costs between the various zones, and will provide more equitable distribution during periods of light slaughterings.

2. Blue brand beef is being removed from commercial quality and will constitute a separate grade, with the wholesale carcass ceiling one cent a pound below that for the red brand.

3. The commercial quality will have a carcass ceiling one cent a pound lower than blue brand.

4. The grades previously designated "cow and bull beef" will be changed to "utility" beef.

5. On red and blue brand beef the retail markup is being reduced by approximately one cent a pound from the previously authorized markup. The rest of the increase, in the wholesale price in the 10 zones, where it is in excess of one cent a pound, is passed to the consumer.

6. As retail ceiling prices will be the same at all times in all parts of each zone, the new charts will not require retailers to use the price strips which have previously been attached to the pricing charts to cover price variations.

7. Wholesalers and slaughterers are required to invoice at not more than ceiling prices on deliveries made on and after July 22 and retailers are bound by the new retail ceiling on and after that date.

Frequent Rains Needed in Most Of Eastern Ontario

Toronto, July 17 (CP)—Mere than 10,000 acres of Kent county's crops were destroyed by flooding during June and only about 50 per cent of this area was reseeded, the Ontario Department of Agriculture said today in its monthly crop report.

Adjacent Essex county also suffered from excessive moisture in mid-June and crops most affected were tomatoes, onions, corn, beans and tobacco.

For the balance of the province June weather conditions were fairly satisfactory for the growth of field crops. Fall wheat and rye developed well and cutting will be general in the southern countries of southwestern Ontario the week of July 15 and in most other counties a week to 10 days later.

Reports indicate, the bulletin said, that above normal yields will be obtained on most fields of southwestern Ontario with normal to below normal yields in the balance of the Province. Spring grain crops also flourished in June, most harvesting taking place from July 15 to 25.

Winter killing and a cool dry spring cut down average yields of hay crops 15 to 20 per cent below normal. Frequent rains were needed to maintain growth of pastures for the balance of the summer, particularly in eastern Ontario.

The report noted that in spite of a heavier acreage planted in the three types of tobacco, supplies are still short and market prospects are good. Sugar beet crops suffered heavy damage in the Essex-Kent flooding and many of the fields will be lost to any kind of crop for the rest of the year.

Digging of early potatoes now is general and yields are regarded as satisfactory. Other vegetables and fruit crops also appear to be progressing satisfactorily with heavy crops seen in peaches and strawberries.

Heat and lack of rain in the latter part of June continued into July and the weekly crop report noted pastures are beginning to suffer in some counties.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE

Toronto, July 17 — (CP)—The industrial stocks had a minor index gain at noon today on the exchange and the other groups were down, the golds leading with a drop of .94. Volume was small at 486,000 shares.

The utility, paper and building issues weakened narrowly and the steels and foods were a bit stronger. Fleet Aircraft was a leader, gaining 2 points to 7 3/4.

Soft spots in the gold list included Teck Hughes, Giant MacDonald, Armistice, Central Patricis, Malartic Gold Fields, O'Brien and Colomac. McIntyre and Aunor were up narrowly.

Western oils were in dull trade.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

New York, July 17 (AP) — Stocks generally drifted aimlessly in today's market with scattered favorites making a little progress and many leaders shifting to lower levels.

Mild irregularity persisted from the start but the ticker tape loafed after a fairly active opening. The direction remained obscure near the fourth hour.

Canadians were mixed on the big board at noon. Canadian Pacific at 18 3-4 was unchanged, Distillers Seagrams was up 5-8 at 28 3-8, Dome Mines down 3-8 at 21 7-8, International Nickel down 1-2 at 36 7-8.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, July 17 —(CP)— Trading was fairly active in cattle, with the exception of weighty steers and stockers, with prices steady, up to mid-session on the livestock market here today. Calves, lambs and sheep were steady. Yesterday's hog receipts settled 50 cents cwt. lower at, dressed, Grade A $21, Grade B1 $20.60, sows $18, and prospects were that today's prices would be established at the same amounts.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: Cattle 250, calves 175, hogs 225, sheep and lambs 325. Unsold from yesterday were 950 head of cattle.

Prices in the trade included:

Cattle: A few weighty steers medium to good $13-$15, good butcher steers $13.50-$14, common downward to $10, butcher heifers $10 for common up to $13 for good, butcher cows $8 for common up to $11 for good, canners $5-$7.50, butcher bulls $10-$11, light bolognas downward to $8, a few food fed yearlings $13-$15, stockers light common to medium $10-$11.

Calves: $14-$15 choice, common vealers downward to $10.

Lambs: Good ewes and wethers $17.50 off-car, $17 off-truck, bucks $1 cwt. discount, culls mostly $13.

Sheep: Good light ewes $8.50, heavies and bucks $5-$7, culls downward to $3.

MONTREAL LIVESTOCK

Montreal, July 17 (CP)—Prices held steady today on the Montreal livestock markets.

Receipts: Cattle 17, calves, 74, hogs 29 and sheep and lambs 90.

HARD WORK A FACTOR

Harrogate, England (CP) — Hard work and total abstinence make for long life and happiness, said Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lister as they celebrated their 72nd wedding anniversary.

U. S. Meat Buyers Strike Projected By Labor Union

Detroit, July 17 (AP) — The C.I.O. United Auto Workers projected a meat buyers strike today to which the invited the participation of all United States consumers.

Fighting the climb in living costs, the big Labor Union, calling for co-operation from its own 800,000 members and all other organized labor and consumer groups, ordered its buyers strike to start today. It is to last seven days.

U.A.W. President Walter P. Reuther, addressing a police-estimated crowd of 40,000 to 50,000 in Detroit's Cadillac Square, charged that "reactionary elements" were "hell-bent for the good old days," and said meat was the union's first target. He said rents and other items would follow unless prices were brought down by act of Congress or otherwise reduced.

U.A.W.-sponsored rally took place in Cleveland, Chicago and other cities in the union's "save the O.P.A." drive. Congress was urged to restore price control and consumers to restrict their buying to "most urgent necessities."

In Detroit an estimated 20,000 to 30,000 Chrysler workers left their jobs temporarily, cutting production. There were no reports to indicate widespread disruption of work, however.

The U.A.W.-C.I.O. says members has lost much of their wage gains of the postwar period to rising prices.

In that connection Richard T. Leonard, U.A.W. vice president, said wage contracts "must be open for destruction if price control is open for destruction." He addressed the rally in Detroit, the union's stronghold.

Man Confesses After Body of Child Found

Michigan City, Ind., July 17 (AP)—The nude body of seven-year-old Dayda Lisak, lured from a game with playmates on a Lake Michigan beach yesterday by a man on a motor scooter, was found early today under a wooden box on the outskirts of Michigan City.

Police said a 27-year-old Michigan City man led them to the spot, five miles from the beach and related he had strangled the child and hidden her body after taking her on the scooter.

The victim's father, Ben Lisak, is a shipping clerk.

Police said Dayda and other children were playing around and dunes when Dayda ran up the side of a dune, over the top, and disappeared.

The man was quoted as saying, "I don't know why I did it."

COLUMBUS' GIFT TO NEW WORLD

On Aug. 4 Ciudad Trujillo, Dominican Republic, oldest city in the western hemisphere, will celebrate the 450th anniversary of its founding. Here priceless church treasures, which will be on public display during the celebration, are explained to a visitor. Among the $5,000,000 collection are the original cross planted on the island by Columbus; an altar bell designed by the famous Italian artist, Benvenuto Cellini, and other priceless items. The commemoration will be marked by a re-enactment of the landing by Columbus. Originally called Santo Domingo, the people of the city re-named it after President Trujillo.

Here and There in P. E. County

THE TREE RE-PLANTED

It grew beside the meadow stream,
A sapling slim and fair,
Its beauty touched the hearts of those
Who daily lingered there;
So fair and fast it yearly grew,
A phantom till it seemed,
A magic tree that sprang to view
As something we had dreamed.

Now it has left its meadow home
And planted by the door,
Hears not the music of the stream
Nor morning birds that soar;
I wonder if it longs to hear
Again the wind's soft sigh,
The singing of the meadow stream
As softly it slips away,
Methinks it would be back again
Beside the meadow stream,
Would hear again the bob-o-link
And catch the dawn's first gleam;
For like the man whose lot is cast
Upon a foreign shore,
Deep in his heart the dreams hold fact
Of a home he'll see no more.

In the Wellington district the harvesting of hay and peas is at hand. At the Lipson canning factory large loads of green peas are being threshed daily and also at night. The refuse makes a mountainous stack which in the winter will be used as feed for cattle.

The village of Wellington, "the coolest spot when the weather is hot" continues to attract the tourist. "Grasmere Lodge" the fine tourist centre has a number of guests Recent summer arrivals in the village include Mr. and Mrs. Fred MacDonald and Aletha of Saskatoon; Mrs. George Garratt, Rochester; Mr. and Mrs. Don Haight, California and Mrs. J. E. Benson and Miss Gena, Windsor, Ont.

The electric storm that visited this locality Thursday evening cooled the air for the celebration of the "Glorious Twelfth." A large tree in Wellington was broken and dislodged in the storm, a large portion crashing into the roof of Mr. Archard's home.

In spite of the storm a large number attended the ice cream social at the Allisonville hall that evening. Following refreshments the lights were put out by the storm and the program was presented with the aid of flash lights and other hastily improvised lighting. After all expenses about $30 was realized.

Mrs. W. H. Anderson who is holidaying in Gilead, spent Friday afternoon in Wellington and called on Mrs. Henry Benson and Mrs. George Garratt.

DEATH SENTENCE COMMUTED

London, July 16 —(CP Cable) —The death sentence passed last May on Pte. John Merkley of Gravenhurst, Ont., for the murder last January of Sgt. Louis Stork of The Netherlands air force has been commuted to life imprisonment, it was learned here today.

Merkley, held in Amsterdam since his court martial, now is in England but will return to Amsterdam shortly as a witness in the new trial of Pte. Stefan Kolesar who was rearrested on a charge of armed robbery with violence immediately after acquittal of the Stork murder.

Negotiations between Canadian and Dutch authorities for Kolesar to be tried by a Netherlands civilian court have fallen through and an announcement is expected by next week that the Amsterdam inquiry section, closed three weeks ago, will be re-established to try him by a Canadian army court.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was doing the bridge problem and pop was reading a magazine, saying, It's amazing what gyrations these writers go through to discribe a kiss.

Why William, I didn't know you were intristed in that kind of reeding, ma said, and pop said, I just happened to run across it, and believe me it's a lilly. Russians Reject Protest On Seizure of Austrian Property For Reparations

London, July 18 (CP) — Russia has rejected British and United States representations on seizure of Austrian property for reparations, a high authority said today.

In a lengthy note handed the Austrian government the Soviet occupation authorities in Austria were said to have made it plain there is no change in their recent position in regard to seizure of $22,000,000 worth of Austrian industrial plants and other property confiscated by the Germans following the Anschluss in 1938.

The text of the note was not available in London but its essential points were known to authoritative sources, which said it disagreed with almost every point set forth in British and American representations.

The controversy arose July 6 when the Soviet command in Austria announced the property in Eastern Austria had passed into Soviet ownership along with all other "German external assets" in the Russian zone.

The United States disputed this interpretation in the Allied council, asserting that property forcibly confiscated by the Germans after 1938 could not be classified as German under the Potsdam Agreement.

The Americans also set forth that they considered industrial plants and other assets, built under German orders by Austrian labor and with inflated Austrian funds, belong rightfully to Austrian economy.

Britain subsequently backed the American contention and both countries made representations to the Soviet command. The Russians previously had rejected the Austrian protests. The Vienna government said the proposed seizures would "lead to the complete alienation of Austrian economy."

Weathermen's Batting Average Keeps High

Toronto, July 18 —(CP)— Canadian weathermen generally improved their batting average on public weather forecasts in June, the Dominion Meteorological service said today, reporting an over-all average of 88 per cent days-correct compared with 83 per cent in May.

Victoria, Vancouver, Ottawa and Toronto forecasts were 90 per cent correct. All of the service's offices had a perfect score on the forecasts issued June 30 for the Dominion Day holiday, July 1.

Officials said improvement in forecasting may normally be expected in the summer months.

There was considerable thunderstorm activity over the Dakotas during the night.

PROPOSES GORDON BE APPOINTED CABINET MEMBER

P. C. Member Suggests That Chairman Be Answerable to House For Prices Board

By GEORGE KITCHEN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 17 — (CP)—The Commons today was expected to conclude the lengthening budget debate, featured by sharp opposition criticism of the delayed tax changes and the proposal to tax co-operatives, and then turn to other business before taking up the budget resolutions themselves in committee stage.

When the House rose yesterday, Veterans Minister Mackenzie House leader, appealed amid a clutter of desk thumping to all parties to end the debate today and disclosed that a motion for morning sittings of the House will go on the order paper immediately the eight-day discussion is concluded.

Mr. Mackenzie spoke after a quiet debate featured by a suggestion by Lawrence Skey (PC — Toronto Trinity) that chairman Donald Gordon of the Prices Board be appointed to the cabinet and thus made answerable to parliament for the Board's actions and policies.

Other speakers in the brief Wednesday afternoon sitting included Dr. M. E. McGerry (L — Inverness — Richmond), Mrs. Gladys Strum (CCF — Qu'Appelle) and Norman Jaques (SC — Wetaskiwin).

Motion Defeated

In the opening stages, the House defeated by a 95-36 vote a Progressive Conservative motion for the production of reports submitted to the reconstruction department by its regional reconstruction councils. Moved by Howard Green (PC — Vancouver South) the motion was opposed by Reconstruction Minister Howe on the grounds the reports were privileged documents.

Weather Station on Melville Island, Requested by U. S., Seen too Costly

By R. K. CARNEGIE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 18 (CP) — The Canadian government has turned down as "too expensive a request by the United States that Canada establish a meteorological station on Melville Island, on the western side of the Arctic Archipelago, it was learned today, and also declined to give the U.S. permission to erect it because of sovereignty rights involved.

Reconstruction Minister Howe, who is in charge of the weather reports service declined to comment, saying it was a matter for external affairs and a spokesman for external affairs also declined to comment.

According to unofficial reports the Americans on the United States-Canadian joint defence board took the view that a weather station on Melville Island would be a great help in its plans to develop the defences of the Arctic. Officials here however, stressed the great difficulty of building a weather station in so isolated a location.

Melville is one of the Parry Islands on the 75th. Meridian north of the Viscount Melville Straits and departmental officials here say that some summers a supply boat would have trouble reaching it. Weather stations have become extensive and expensive operations, they say, and Canada is not prepared to embark on this one.

According to the reports, the Americans had equipment ready to ship on the flotilla which left Boston for the north early in July but the Dominion government has been extremely cautious of its sovereign rights in the north, and the equipment had to be left behind.

During the war Ottawa insisted on buying from the United States any airports or other installations built by American defence forces on Canadian territory so there would be no complications as to sovereign rights and it is believed she takes the same attitude now.

Canada is ready to build such installations as the Joint Defence Board recommends and are financially within Canada's capacity, but Ottawa is not prepared to embark on a plan to build a weather bureau on Melville Island—at least not just yet.

British Govt. to Proceed With Bread Rationing Despite Bakers' Threats

London, July 18 (CP) — The government was reported today to have decided to follow through with plans to ration bread despite a threatened revolt of bakers.

The decision was reported to have been made at a special cabinet meeting attended by Food Minister Strachey.

While the food minister talked with other government leaders, a delegation waited to present him with a resolution announcing the Master Bakers' Association's refusal to collect bread tickets in the rationing scheme which becomes effective Sunday.

Conservative members of parliament were ready to back the bakers.

Representatives of nearly half of Britain's bakers refused point blank at a meeting yesterday to accept rationing, slated to begin next Sunday and thus handed the government the greatest challenge to its authority in 12 months of office.

Shouting and red faced, the bakers declared they would go to jail rather than do the extra work entailed in rationing. Approximately 1,500 delegates to a meeting of the National Association of Master Bakers turned down all suggestions that they modify their stand.

After 50 minutes at the cabinet session, Mr. Strachey met the bakers' delegation for a scheduled half-hour conference which lasted more than two hours. A spokesman for the bakers emerged tight-lipped.

London streets and billboards were plastered with placards promising to publish the names of "public enemies and dictators" who vote in parliament to support the government's decision.

CFRB Pleads For Continuation Of Station on Present Wavelength

The station has been served with notice that effective June 1, 1947, the wavelength would be required for a CBC station and CFRB would have to switch to a new dial position.

Harry Sedgwick of Toronto, president of the company, in a submission to the committee said occupation of CFRB's present wavelength of 860 kilocycles by a CBC station was unnecessary and would be of no advantage to listeners. CFRB would be faced with an expense of some $300,000 in making the change and would be forced to accept a wavelength which would reduce its coverage.

The station had been in operation since 1926 when licences were "going begging." The government was glad to have private interests take the risks of a new venture and did not enter the radio field itself until private radio at its own expense had explored the possibilities.

". . . When we started in this business, many people thought us fools to invest time and money in so visionary an enterprise, and it is easy now for those who never lifted a finger or invested a dollar to help create this modern miracle, to indulge in cheap sniping at those who did work and risk and who made it succeed."

The station's submission included a comparison with the listening audiences of CFRB and CBC's CJBC which the corporation proposes to put on CFRB's present wavelength. During the day CFRB had 19 per cent of the sets in operation in Toronto to CJBC's seven per cent. At night CFRB had 27 per cent to CJBC's seven per cent. At the time of the survey CJBC's signal strength was more than double that of CFRB, thus, Mr. Sedgwick said, CJBC's lack of audience appeared to be due to program policies.

Operation of CJBC on 860 kilocycles at 50,000 watts would not reach a single listener not already covered by the other CBC Toronto station, CBL.

"It would be difficult," Mr. Sedgwick said, "for us to complain if the CBC said they needed the wavelength of 860 kilocycles in order to provide a service to listeners in some of the more distant parts of Canada where there is very little radio service. But it is hard to figure out just why the CBC, already occupying one of the most desirable wave lengths on the spectrum, that of 740 (CBL) with a power of 50,000 watts should require another 50,000 watt station to duplicate their service when they are apparently unable out of their present resources to even fill a substantial portion of the National network headed by CBL with other than programs of gramphone records.'

Mr. Sedgwick reviewed the public service record of his station co-operating with civic, Provincial and Dominion projects and assisting in welfare, charity and educational campaigns. From a standpoint of public service to the community CFRB was doing more than either of the two CBC stations with which it competed.

Extent of Damage On Sunken Ships Inspected by Diver

By ELTON C. FAY

Aboard the U.S.S. Mount McKinley, July 18 (AP)—A diver up from the bottom of Bikini lagoon told today how the might of atomic bomb was stamped on the wrecks of five ships sunk July 1.

Lt. Cmdr. J. T. Simpson of Lynchburg, Va., one of a handful of men who have seen the maximum effect of the bomb on shipping, gave reporters a description of the damage he and his nine divers inspected.

The transport Gilliam has its entire superstructure gone "and wreckage is strewn about like all the steel from Pittsburgh was thrown on the bottom."

The destroyer Lamson, which capsized and sank a few hours later in 65 feet of water, had "her fantail bent sharply up for 50 feet forward and a large wrinkle in the hull as if squashed down like a sandwich,' Simpson said.

Comdr. Simpson reported that he found no fusing defect from the heat of the bomb.

VIRTUALLY RULES OUT LOAN TO RUSSIA THIS YEAR.

Washington, July 18 (AP) — President Truman today virtually ruled out a $1,000,000,000 loan to Russia before next year, saying he had no intention of asking Congress at this session for more funds for foreign financing.

U.S. Provides Huge Relief Aid To Other Countries

Washington, July 18 — (AP)— The United States provided $536,000,000 in relief aid to other countries during the first three months of this year. The Commerce Department reported today that $454,000,000 was in the form of civilian relief supplies $2,000,000, in relief services, and $80,000,000 in cash.

Europe got more than three-fourths of the total.

Italy drew the greatest amount of relief aid, getting since July 1, 1940, supplies valued at $570,000,000.

The Balkans got $430,000,000, France $225,000,000, Belgium and The Netherlands $140,000,000 each Czechoslovakia $85,000,000, Russia $80,000,000, and Germany and Austria together got $100,000,000 the department estimated.

The Pacific and Oriental areas received $149,000,000 in relief supplies.

12 SERVICE WOMEN AMONG INJURED AT ALEXANDRIA

Five Hand Grenades Thrown at British Club for Warrant Officers, Sergeants

Alexandria, July 18 — (Reuters) — Twelve service-women were among more than 25 persons injured, including servicemen and two Egyptian waiters, when five hand grenades were thrown at the British Warrant Officers' and Sergeants' Club here last night.

Four of the casualties are stated to be serious.

An open air dance was being held in the garden of the club when the grenades were thrown.

A closed black car standing outside the club which drove off after the explosion is reported to have been hit by a shot fired by a British military policeman.

Many British servicemen and Egyptians have been killed and injured in bomb incidents since March 10 when a bomb was exploded in a Cairo theatre, injuring seven British soldiers and servicewomen.

JET FIGHTER PASSES TESTS

London, July 18 — (CP)—Air sources here said today that the new British jet-propelled fighter, a plane with swept-back wings, has passed its mock-dog-fight tests with a Mosquito impressively.

Named by the De Havilland Company, its manufacturers, as the D.H. 108, "The Swallow" has neither tail plane nor elevators. Company officials said the ailerons at the wing tip performed the functions of elevators and were known as elevons. Its wings are swept back like those of a swallow.

A-Blow at Submarine Mountain Will be Most Crushing in History

By HOWARD BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Writer

Aboard the U.S.S. Appalachian, July 18 — (AP) — The world's first underwater atomic bomb at Bikini July 25 will strike the coral atoll the most crushing blow in the earth's history, excepting only a few volcanic explosions.

The mechanism on which this gigantic blow is based is the speed of sound. In the air that speed is a mile in five seconds; in water a mile in little over one second, but in coral it is more than two miles a second.

The shock, or blast, travels in water and in coral at these same terrific speeds. This means that the crushing effect of shock goes nearly five times farther in water than in air. In coal the crushing goes 10 times farther.

This might mean catastrophe for Bikini atoll if the entire energy of the bomb exploded under water goes into the water the same as the entire energy goes into the air from an air burst.

Official estimates are that the shock may tear a hole in the coral 50 feet deep directly below the underwater bomb.

Coral, because it is full of holes, will rob this shock of some of its crushing force. Nevertheless, the shock is expected to hit the rock top of the submarine mountain on which the atoll stands.

The mountain top is estimated to be very sturdy and the atomic bomb shock may well die without further damage.

However, the outer sides of the coral atoll may be wrecked, at least in a space a few miles from the centre of the explosion.

Tension Lessens As Ottawa Studies Labor Strife

Partial Production Kept Up At Hamilton Steel Plant

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Hamilton, July 18 (CP)—A. J. Chamberlain, acting chief of the Hamilton police force, today warned against acts of intimidation in the strike at the Steel Company of Canada works and announced he has received complaints that the word "scab" has been painted on four Hamilton homes.

The word also appeared on the outside of a downtown welfare office set up by Stelco to enable wives and mothers of workers to obtain information about their kinfolk who have remained inside the plant where the company says more than 2,000 are maintaining partial production.

The acting chief said that a woman told him a man, a stranger to her, came to her house and asked whether her husband was working at the plant. She refused to reply and the man said: "If it's true I'll burn your house down."

(By The Canadian Press)

The steel strike was in its fourth day today at Hamilton, Sault Ste. Marie and Sydney, N.S., and hopes of achieving some formula for a settlement which might extend to other Canadian industrial disputes were centred on hearings of the Parliamentary Industrial Relations Committee at Ottawa.

Leaders of the steel strike were expected to appear before the Ottawa committee late today, as were leaders of several unions involved in strikes, which are linked in the Canadian Congress of Labor.

Toronto C.C.L. meetings yesterday indicated new union strategy of urging settlement of the whole industrial unrest on the basis of any formula that can be worked out for settlement of the steel strike. Union leaders were said to believe that once a pattern for steel settlement is achieved the other strikes could be settled on the same formula.

The Ottawa committee invited representatives of management to attend the hearings, at the same time invitations were sent to union heads.

C. H. Millard, Canadian director of the United Steel Workers of America, was expected in Ottawa this afternoon. Representatives of the C.C.L., which includes the striking steel, auto, rubber, electrical and metallurgical unions, are expected to go to Ottawa later.

Workers on Job at Hamilton.

Meantime tension had slackened at Hamilton, where a number of workers remain on the job which union pickets are on duty at the plant gates. In an early morning clash yesterday five picketers and a number of company workers were injured.

At Sault Ste Marie the Algoma Steel Corporation, whose plant has been virtually dormant since the strike started Monday morning, yesterday conferred with the union over an appeal from the Federal Steel Controller that coal shipments be unloaded to assure production of coke for domestic use next winter.

The Sault union local replied that it could not permit unloading of coal until the union's strike demands have been met. A shipload of coal was due today at the Sault Company's docks from the United States.

At Sydney, where the Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation's big mills are the third Canadian basic steel producer, reinforced picket lines continued around the Dosco plant and guard against entrance of members of the United Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen and United Brotherhood of Firemen and Engineers.

Between 40 and 50 railway workers had been refused admission to the Sydney plant Tuesday and again Wednesday despite their claims of a lock-out. The steel union said that it alone would be responsible for maintenance of railway equipment inside the plant. A meeting will be held today in an effort to iron out the minor dispute, the only ruffle in the strike a'. Sydney so far.

Man of 116 Credits Long Life to Honey, Corn and Fresh Air

Germiston, Transvaal, South Africa, July 18 — (Reuters) — Peter Chaneler Pringle, who came here from Cap Colony in 1850, celebrated his 116th birthday yesterday and recommended honey, corn and plenty of fresh air as promoters of longevity.

Appeals Ruling On Deportation Of Jap Canadians

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, July 18 (C.P. Cable) —With white-haired Viscount Simon intimating that he is "most anxious" to hear from the Attorney-General of Canada on several points, F. A. Brewin of Toronto, today ended a 15-hour argument on the question of the deportation of Japanese Canadians before the Privy Council of the House of Lords.

Mr. Brewin argued on behalf of the Saskatchewan government and the Co-operative Committee on Japanese Canadians, which appealed a Supreme Court of Canada ruling that the Canadian government has authority to deport undesirable Japanese Nationals as well as "male adult persons of Japanese origin" who want to go to Japan.

H. E. O'Donnell, representing the Dominion government, and Gordon Wismer of Vancouver, Attorney-General of British Columbia, are to appear in support of the ruling.

Since the hearing opened Tuesday, the youthful Mr. Brewin in the traditional wig and gown, almost surrounded by massive law books, has had a grave, co-operative audience in Lord Simon, a former Lord Chancellor, and four other law lords, but all five have been quick to challenge the Toronto lawyer on the smallest points of law.

Today Mr. Brewin pursued his claim that the War Measures Act did not delegate to the governor-in-council power to deport British subjects from Canada whatever their racial origin might be.

BACK YARD RUBBISH PILE SET AFIRE

An unattended rubbish pile in the back yard at the rear of a local Front Street department store proved too much of a temptation for mischievous lads on Wednesday afternoon with result that the local firemen were called upon to extinguish a burning rubbish pile. Store officials disclaimed any knowledge of the origin of the blaze and mischievous lads are believed responsible. No damage resulted.

A broken steam pipe at the Albion Street plant of the Canadian Canners turned on an automatic fire alarm and caused firemen a brief run this morning.

PAVING WORK BEGINS ON OSHAWA HIGHWAY

Belleville and district motorists driving through to Toronto frequently will welcome the news that paving contracts have been let for the paving of the divided stretch of provincial highway west of Oshawa.

Paving contracts are for the entire 19-mile stretch of highway and engineers predict that workmen will begin laying concrete within the next ten days. Brennan Paving Company are the contractors in charge of the section between Oshawa and Ajax, while contracts for the remaining portion of the road have been let to Curran and Briggs, Ltd., of Toronto, and McHaffie-Birde Construction Company of Hamilton.

PRICES FOR BERRIES KEEP AT HIGH LEVEL

Both red and blue raspberries were available on the local produce market Thursday morning with vendors asking 50 cents per quart box. The red variety of berries were quickly picked up by city housewives, while the blue raspberries also saw good demand.

Huckleberries at 60 cents the quart were also offered by several vendors, while English black currants sold at the same price with the red and white currants bringing 20 to 25 cents the box. Shelled peas held at 50 cents the quart, while new potatoes were available at 65 cents the peck.

Small Boy Hit By Truck When He Runs onto Road

Darting away from the side of a young girl who had been engaged by the mother to take the children to a nearby playground, four-year-old John Feury, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Fleury, 29 Highland Ave., was struck by a passing truck shortly before noon on Wednesday and is in Belleville General Hospital suffering from possible skull fracture.

Driver of the truck which struck the small child did not stop and local police are conducting a search for the vehicle which may have been involved in the accident.

According to the mother there is no yard at 29 Highland Avenue in which the children might play and each day it was customary for the children to be taken to a nearby public playground. While en route to the playground the young lad darted away and is believed to have run onto the street where he was struck down. According to one eye-witness the driver of the truck may not have seen the child and in any event would have had no opportunity of avoiding the accident.

Dr. J. B. Collip Is Honored By Oxford University

Dr. James Bertram Collip, director of the Research Institute of Endocrinology at McGill University, and director of the division of medical research, National Research Council of Canada, was one of the four members of the Empire Scientific Congres, who received honorary Congress who received honorary Oxford University on July 1st.

Dr. Collip, active in war medical research, first became internationally famous as a co-discoverer of insulin, and later for his pioneer research on hormones. He served as head of the department of biochemistry at McGill, until the establishment of a Research Institute of Endocrinology at McGill, of which he was made director. He came to McGill in 1927.

The famous research worker has been honored by several universities and research organizations. He is a past president of the Royal Society of Canada. A native of Belleville, Ont., he graduated from the University of Toronto in 1912, with special honors in physiology and biochemistry, gained a Ph.D. degree in 1914 and later lectured at University of Alberta. He obtained his doctorate of science at that institution and was later appointed to a professorship. He also obtained an M.D. and is a Fellow of the Royal Society of London.

Grain Harvesting Well Underway In the District

Harvest of spring grain is already well underway in the immediate Belleville district with at least one farmer in the Foxboro area having all his spring grain cut and stooked. In the Oak Hills area oats are also ready for the binder.

Winter wheat is being cut and according to reports, it appears to be well filled.

Despite the storm of one week ago there appears to be very little lodging of grain, it is stated by Agricultural Representative H. Lynn Fair of Stirling.

Pastures have shown some improvement since the rain and have helped check the downward trend in the milk flow.

About 75 per cent of the hay crop was reported harvested in Hastings at the first of the week. Due to absence of rain hay was harvested in splendid condition.

New Belleville Golf Club House Now on Site

Members of the Belleville Golf Club are seeing their new club house gradually nearing completion. Under the direction of Mr. J. B. White, who is managing the job, a construction company has moved the house from the former Universal Moulded Product plant to its present site.

The prefabricated building, constructed by Mr. John Walker, is in three sections. The first two sections were built originally to be a three roomed house and the third section is a garage. The interior will be completely remodelled to contain either one or two large rooms. The floor space is approximately 475 square feet and the house is set on a cement block base. Under the house there will be a shower room.

The house was originally designed to have a radiant heating system throughout, but it is indefinite as to what the present plans are for heating.

PICTON

Two Picton Boys Rescue Girl From Drowning

Picton, July 18 — A drowning tragedy was narrowly averted in West Lake at Wellington yesterday when 12-year-old Anne Brinklowe of Trenton got into difficulties while swimming. The girl was swimming from the beach to the dock when she was seen to sink. Her feet became entangled in some weeds and she was exhausted. Her predicament was noted by Bill Thompson and George Tait, Jr., two boys who were on the dock. They quickly went to her assistance and their combined efforts were sufficient to pull her to safety. Residents credit the two young boys with saving the girl's life as there were no adults in the immediate vicinity at the time.

Cards, asking that citizens sign them, are being circulated in Picton. They are in protest to the application of two new local hotels for beer and wine permits. The hostelries concerned are Rickarton Castle, reconverted at a cost of $100,000, and Castle Inn Hotel both on the eastern outskirts of the town.

The cards give three reasons for opposing the granting of the permits. They are: enough outlets, a moral threat, unnecessary for accommodation, poorly located as hotels.

Castle Inn has previously been refused a permit but Rickarton has not previously applied for one.

The applications are among those to be heard at a meeting of the Liquor Control Board at Belleville next Monday afternoon.

While tomato plants were flown this spring from the South to be planted in Essex, so that there would be an earlier yield, two local men have proved that the plants can be not only grown and planted locally but so as to bear fruit very early. J. P. Williams and E. S. Theaker have an acre of land on the Fred Webster farm and for two years past they have been experimenting with different varieties and fertilizers.

They are now picking ripe tomatoes off their patch, though the first were picked one day later than previously. They are of the Bounty variety. Had there not been cooler weather this year, the growers would have picked ripe tomatoes a week earlier.

American Couple on Flying Trip From Far North Spend Night Here

That civilian air travel is already a reality and not something to be looked for at some future date, was demonstrated early this week at the Acres Tourist Camp, two miles east of the city, when a trim little cabin type plane glided in over the bay to land at the dock. The pilot and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. T. Moore of Cambridge, Mass., then took a cabin for the night before flying on to Boston the next day.

The vacationing Americans apparently had enjoyed a lengthy trip through the Canadian northland and told a very interesting story of their trip to Byron Lott, well known Sidney township resident, who was a guest at the camp.

The pilot and his wife had been as far north as Yellowknife and on their return south had experienced motor trouble at Great Bear Lake. Leaving there one week ago, the couple made several stops for fuel and sight seeing before landing at Belleville Tuesday evening.

Wednesday morning after getting their clearance papers at Belleville, the couple left for Boston expecting to arrive at their destination about ten o'clock. The pilot and his wife were loud in their praise of Canada and of the hospitality of the people they had met on their extended trip.

24 Contestants in Pie Eating Contest End Up With Cream Filling In Eyes, Ears, Noses and Hair

Boys Develop Special Techniques to Devour Pies in Shortest Time at Karnival

Resembling something like Japanese war victims about to be executed, 24 hungry, excited boys knelt before long benches, hands behind their backs at the Kiwanis Stage Show last night and awaited the signal "Go."

Master of Ceremonies Kiwanian Bill Stovin fired the verbal gun and noses plunged downwards into 24 large pieces of luscious cream pie. The pie-eating contest, feature of the evening's entertainment, was on.

Came gurgling, choking noises. Hissing sounds were heard as the kids took time out for breath. They came up for air intermittently, looking like advertisements for a well-known shaving cream.

One little red-headed chap developed a robin technique. He studied his pie from various angles then suddenly "pecked" downwards, coming up with gobs of cream and pieces of crust.

Another attempted to hold his plate with his forehead. He found the larger part of his pie nestling on his shirt front. Others rolled their faces in the sweet mass. They came up with cream in their hair, their eyes, their noses and in their ears.

Heaves Sigh of Relief.

Finally the winner stood up; heaved a long-drawn sigh of relief and waved his hands aloft. Then he who finished second rose, wiping cream from his eyes in an effort to locate himself. Then the third.

But the remainder, although out of the prize money, valiantly stayed by the gustatory job and finished their handicapped meal to the accompaniment of loud cream puffs.

The winners were George Cummer, Bobby Wonnacott, Ron. O'Sullivan.

The rest of the stage show was up to the fine calibre of that of the night previous. Reg. Hinchey and his Kiwanis Band were on hand with Arthur Duby vocalizing. Little Marie Nash with her guitar delighted the crowd as did the Dancing Donovans.

Another gala stage show will be held tonight, the closing performance of the Karnival. The draw for the hope chest will also be made and the "Street of Chance" on the Market Square will again be going at full blast.

The stage show starts at 7.45 outside the Pinnacle Street entrance to the Armouries.

IN MEMORIAM

ELLIOTT — In loving memory of our mother, Mary C. Elliott, who passed away July 18th, 1945.
—Fondly remembered by daughters and son.

WAY — In loving memory of a dear brother, Pte. Sam Way, who was killed in Sicily July 18, 1943.
He has gone across the river,
To the shores of ever green,
And we long to see his dear face,
But the river flows between.
—Ever remembered by sister, Mrs. Roy Reid and family.

WAY — In loving memory of a dear son, Samuel Way, who was killed in Sicily, July 18, 1943.
A soldier's grave in an unknown land holds one we love so dear.
A smiling face that won't come home
when they sounded the last all clear
He has gone across the river to the field of evergreen.
How we long to see his dear face,
but the river flows between.
Some day, some time, our eyes shall see the face we love so well:
Some day we'll clasp his loving hand and never say farewell.
—Sadly missed by Dad, Mother and Grandmother, Sisters and Brothers.

Trenton—On Sunday last, July 14th, the final match of the Club championship was played off, with S/L R. A. Skuce of 6 R. D. emerging as winner over A. (Gus) Wemyss of Trenton.

The match was close all the way and ended at the 35th hole when Skuce put his iron shot 10 feet from the hole on the 200 yard eighth, winning the 36 hole match by 2 holes up and 1 to play.

The wind was very high and both players got into some difficulty but the game brought out some very "canny" golf. This is about the fourth time that Gus Wemyss has reached the finals of the club championship.

Police Court

21 cases were heard in Trenton Police Court on Tuesday last before Magistrate T. Y. Wills and Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C.

George Webb of Water Street appeared on two charges of assault. He received suspended sentence for one year after signing a bond and paying costs of court on both cases ($7.00).

Joseph C. Hogan and Joseph G. McDonnell were each fined $103.00 for having liquor not purchased legally on their permits.

Alfred L. Stringer, for driving without an operator's license, was fined $12.50.

James O'Brien was sentenced to three months in the County Jail after pleading guilty to consuming "after shave lotion."

Felix Genereaux charged with leaving the scene of an accident was fined $27.50.

Mona Kerkhoven was charged $7.50 for speeding.

David H. Bernhardt, Russell Reid and Frank Haggerty were all charged under the Liquor Control Act and each fined $13.00.

The fire department received a call on Tuesday last to Markers' junk yard on Front Street where a pile of rubbish had caught fire. Firemen had no trouble in extinguishing the blaze.

LAWYER BREAKS HAND BONE POUNDING DESK

Decatur, Ill., July 18—(AP)—James T. Whitley, Jr., defence lawyer in a criminal trial, hammered home a point to the jury by slamming his fist on a courtroom table. He suffered a broken bone in his hand. Not only that, but he lost the case.

Construction Begins For $10,000,000 Power Project on the Madawaska

Men at work are tiny figures in huge excavation for new Stewartville power plant on the Madawaska river of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario which will cost $10,000,000. While there doesn't seem to be much water flowing (lower left), engineers estimate that the 15-mile lake which will be created by dam will take less than two weeks to form once the water is stopped.

A-Board Experts Consider Veto, Treaty Questions

By CHARLES A. GRUMICH

New York, July 18 — (AP) — The United Nations Atomic Commission's legal experts waded into long-range consideration of the controversial veto and treaty questions today while the Commission prepared for a public session this afternoon to hear the inaugural address of its new chairman.

Captain Alvaro Alberto, Brazilian navy scientist and explosives expert, takes over the chairmanship for a month under a rotation plan, succeeding Australia Foreign Minister Dr. Herbert V. Evatt, who has postponed his departure for the Paris peace conference.

Meanwhile, the drafting of a summary of all atomic control proposals put forward to date was told in abeyance at the request of the United States and Russia, which have presented plan and counter-plan for atomics.

Soviet delegate Andrei A. Gromyko first blocked a proposal to call on the secretaria to compile a situation report on the commission's progress.

He told yesterday's session of atomic committee No. 2 that he had some observations to make on a recent United States memorandum proposing an agreement by treaty not to use the veto on atomic matters but would reserve his comment until the committee meets again next Wednesday.

John Hancock of the American delegation also opposed such an informational roundup at this time, declaring the United States had further explanatory memoranda yet to be given out and that he was not sure the other 11 delegations fully understood the American position.

Tourist Pays Fine For 'Best Guide'

North Bay, July 18 (CP) — The "Best Guide in Canada" left a North Bay court room arm-in-arm with the United States tourist whose car he was accused of stealing—after the American had paid more than $60 in fines and costs to obtain his release.

The tourist, Ivan G. Thompson, pleaded with Magistrate Vould that the charge of car theft, which carries an automatic penalty of one year's imprisonment, be reduced to joy-riding, when the guide, Peter Simard, of nearby Mattawa, appeared in court.

Thompson told the magistrate that Simard, who has been his guide for several years in a tourist camp in the Huntsville area, is the "Best Guide in Canada." The magistrate assented to reduction of the charge and ordered the fine.

Thompson said Simard had used his automobile on a number of occasions with his consent. Then one night he took it without his friend's permission. During a trip he feel asleep while another friend took over the wheel. When he awoke he found the car had left the road and crashed into a rock pile, reducing it to wreckage. Provincial Police arrested him.

Thompson said he did not think of the paying of the fine as a courtesy. He merely wanted the future services of the best guide in Canada.

BROCKINGTON APPOINTED TO DISPUTES INQUIRY

Toronto, July 18 —(CP)— Leonard W. Brockington of Ottawa has been appointed an industrial disputes inquiry commissioner to deal with the two months old Aanaconda American Brass Limited strike at suburban New Toronto, Ben T. Doherty, international union representative said.

Mr. Doherty, who represents the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (C.I.O.), said he hoped "a settlement will be affected soon."

National Seamen Seek Affiliation With Labor Federation

Montreal, July 18 CP)— The National Seamen's Association has made application to authorities in Ottawa for bargaining rights with four inland steamship companies and for affiliation with Canadian Federation of Labor, Capt. H. M. McMaster, President of the N.S.A. said in an interview here last night. He charged that only Canadian Seamen's Union members are being rehired on inland vessels in aftermath of last month's shipping strike, thus depriving hundreds of N.S.A. men of their right to work.

He said that Monday three N.S.A. members had been discharged from SS. Keyport, in port here, and replaced by C. S. U. men under a directive from the federal government controller, Capt. E. S. Brand.

Catches 200-year-old Turtle

B of M Superintendent For Ontario Branches

PERCY H. HOWARTH, assistant superintendent of the Bank of Montreal's Ontario division for the past year, who has been named superintendent of that division, with headquarters in Toronto.

Mr. Howarth, who is an Englishman by birth has gained his banking experience entirely in Ontario, except for a brief period as assistant manager of the bank's main Quebec City office and as assistant superintendent of the Manitoba and Saskatchewan district. Before he was appointed assistant superintendent of the Ontario district he held the post of assistant to the general manager of the bank for two years.

The post of assistant superintendent, which Mr. Howarth is vacating, will be taken over by W. C. Morley, assistant manager of the bank's King and Yonge streets office.

Validity of Order On Repatriation Is Questioned

London, July 18 — (CP Cable) —Validity of an order by Gen. MacArthur that Japanese deported from Canada should be received as repatriates of Japan was questioned Wednesday by Viscount Simon as an appeal by the Saskatchewan government and the co-operative committee on Japanese Canadians entered its second day before the judicial committee at the privy council.

The appeal is against a Supreme Court of Canada ruling that the Canadian government has authority to deport undesirable Japanese Nationals as well as "male adult persons of Japanese origin" who want to go to Japan.

F. A. Brewin, Toronto lawyer and counsel for the appellants, said "it would be against the principles of international law for British subjects to be sent to Japan without the consent of the receiving country."

Mr. Brewin contended that "the old sentence of outlawry" now has been abolished in criminal cases. He said deportation was not just in the case of citizens who had committed no offence and against whom there was no charge, no trial and no conviction.

He questioned whether Canada had the power to authorize deportation of any British subject and whether such power could be delegated to the Governor-in-Council in time of peace.

When Mr. Brewin concludes his case the council will hear from H. E. O'Donnell, representing the Dominion government in support of the Supreme Court ruling.

Crops Good News to World

Reports of crop conditions in Canada and other lands are favorable and the world, those nations that are great producers of food and can spare some of what they have to feed the others who have so little as a consequence of the upset of conditions which war created, and those people who are not large producers of food can feel happier for this realization that all signs point to an improvement over conditions which have recently been up to this time.

This year the world has been nearest to a great world famine than it has ever been. Herculean efforts have been made to speed food that can be spared to the peoples that depend upon the food that the rest of the world can send. This relief has given the needy something more than they might have had and kept them from starvation.

Nature which for some years was apparently a little indifferent as conditions militated against plenty in many food areas has this year been acting graciously and benignly and bringing the rain in season where it is most needed or nearly so.

The production of food for the world's many nations is still the great task of man for the growing of food is the primal and chief industry. No great civilization has been possible without a high development of agriculture.

Grain, fruits, livestock and poultry have through long-past eras served their day and generation of races in man's upward climb in civilization and culture. And so even in this atomic age, which has at last harnessed a gigantic force, which may be directed to add to the amenities of life and lighten the burdens of humanity, wheat and other grains and stock raising are still king. As fast as man's knowledge expands he applies the newly found facts to agriculture, the oldest of the occupations and professions. Mechanization has come and has expanded the output of the soil, knowledge of chemistry and botany has greatly developed the grains by the creation of new varieties. It is a unique fact that the lands which today have been able to serve the needs of the hungry have been largely the newer lands, the Americas with their large scale operations and also the Pacific areas. In other parts of the world which made history many centuries ago, nature is more austere and not so bounteous as the still austere fields of the Americas. So North America, so modern and new, yet follows the ancient calling of agriculture as one of the basic industries of every phase of civilization. It has become in a very real sense the granary of the world.

In this age of synthetics, the facts of wheat, oats, barley, corn, the raising of cattle, sheep and swine and poultry, the great facts on which much of the strength of these modern nations depend still are basic realities. They are among the facts which make wealth by providing food for ourselves and others in great quantities. They join with the development of mining, manufacturing, fishing and shipping to make these peoples leaders in the world.

This is a fortunate fact. It has made it possible that nations less fortunate are now receiving food that will see them through a time of a scarcity of food and will help to lift the morale and revive the spirit of war-ridden peoples. The land that played so vital a part in nourishing the peoples in time of war and in bringing victory, is now serving to lift up the displaced peoples and others who need food.

The grain fields of America, in fact the fields in every clime that produce any kind of food must seem to the needy in hungry lands really to "laugh and sing" with the joy of production. The ancient Hebrew writers saw this benign quality in nature that gives the warmth and the rain when man needs it and causes growth and feeds the cattle on a thousand hills. Man in the western world has given a great lift to the production of food by the application of science to farming.

Housing in Britain

The fifth of the monthly housing progress reports published in Britain shows that the position regarding housing in the United Kingdom at May 31st was as follows — houses completed (local authority and private enterprise) permanent 11,381, temporary 30,637; houses under construction (permanent) 102,661, temporary 24,234; in addition 81,413 permanent houses are projected but not yet begun. During May, families housed increased by 15,727. The total labor force employed on construction or repair of houses in the United Kingdom rose during May to 515,200.

Return of "The Bowler"

According to the latest information, the bowler or derby hat is once more becoming fashionable wear in Britain. It is not altogether surprising, because the bowler has always been regarded by the English with affection; and, as a symbol of civilian life, it has achieved a status far above the "trilby" or the cap. Although it went into retirement during the war, it was not forgotten, and its influence, one fancies, was asserted strongly in the shape of the tin hat, or "battle bowler."

Its charm is not easy to analyze. Its dignity demands delicate handling — it will not be discarded with careless abandon, and is hurt beyond all remedy if it be sat on. Should an ill wind remove it from the head, it is prone to live up to its name, and to bowl away at a speed that will defeat the most athletic of owners. Allow it, in the performance of its duty, to deviate in the smallest degree from the upright, and it becomes at once the most undignified of all hats. In comfort, it is not the equal of its softer brethren — but, then, it is a British tradition, and perhaps its appeal is more to the heart than to the head.

For England—and the World

Throughout the recent war leaders of thought in America sought to impress upon the national mind the fact that the destinies of England and America were bound together and that the fall of one would seriously weaken the other. The agitation for more extensive teaching of American history in the schools was a part of this, the belief being that an understanding of the origins of our institutions and principles would guide us wisely through present and future crises.

Now comes a plea by a British professor that the study of American history be introduced generally into English schools. That this would bring about better understanding among Englishmen and Americans and strengthen the national bonds of friendship there can be little doubt.

Here also is the basis for carrying Anglo-American ideologies to the rest of the world. The study of American history, which can not be separated from British history of the 17th and 18th centuries, is the study of the rise and triumph of the rights of the individual as against the special privileges of the favored few. The establishment of individual dignity and liberty coincides also with the development of prosperity for everybody on a scale never before attained.

DESTINY

By some strange circumstance or fate,
Man comes at last to his estate.
Long years ago
There was a boy, and he was I,
Whom three men noted passing by
And smiled to know.

One was a banker of renown,
One was a merchant of the town,
One served the press.
By which of them, all long since dead,
Where that boy's footsteps would be led,
How say or guess?

Three men of fame and fortune fair!
A boy's fate being settled there
Because they'd met.
What if the banker, moved by whim,
Had offered banking unto him?
Joy or regret?

What if the merchant to his store
Had taken him forevermore
To buy and sell?
But 'twas the third! With him he went,
And through the years, now past and spent,
All has gone well!

Why write this now? Well, just to show
Grown man and boy they cannot know
Life's tale complete
Or guess that youngster's destiny then,
Or what, to both, is happening when
They chance to meet.

Typhoon Batters Hong Kong And China Coast

Hong Kong, July 18 — (CP)— Winds which reached a maximum velocity of 102 miles an hour battered Hong Kong today as a typhoon swept the China coast, endangering shipping and damaging communications.

The Royal Naval Observatory reported at 5 p.m. (4 a.m. E.D.T.) that the brunt of the storm apparently had struck the coast west of Hong Kong but that the typhoon had curved back toward this Crown colony.

The Observatory estimated the average wind here at 63 miles an hour, but said gusts at times exceeded 100 miles an hour.

American and British Naval vessels departed for the open sea before the storm hit. A dozen or more passenger and cargo vessels risked staying inside, however, along with hundreds of sampans and junks.

Several vessels were torn from their moorings and smaller craft were damaged when they were swept against the piers.

One hundred and fifty miles up the coast, the 2,143-ton British steamship Taiposhan which ran aground near Swatow Tuesday was reported being battered to pieces, with the typhoon preventing rescue attempts.

"A STRONG CASE"

Los Angeles, July 18 (AP) — Judge Walter Gates found on his calendar a case in which a man was charged with stealing 27,800 pounds of garlic. "People might say that this case smells," observed the judge. "At least the prosecution has a strong case," rejoined Deputy District Attorney Harry Johnstone. The trial was set for Sept. 4.

Crippled Veteran Again Ready For Normal Life

Kitchener, July 18 — (CP) — Edward J. Wilkie of Kitchener, who lost both legs, one above the knee, and his right hand when two German mines exploded while he was on an army patrol in Holland, today has his handicap all but beaten — he is even thinking about ice skating next winter.

With long months of hospital treatment now a fading memory Wilkie is fitted with artificial limbs and has already resumed a normal life.

He has planted a garden beside his new home near here, and can walk and drive an automobile almost as well as before his injury. He hopes to return soon to the factory where he was employed before enlisting.

U. S. Army Jeep Ambushed in Trieste

Trieste, July 18 — (AP)—Unknown machine-gunners ambushed a United States Army jeep Tuesday night, killing a soldier and wounding two others, headquarters of the United States 88th Division announced.

The Americans were attacked four days after a United States patrol killed two Yugoslav soldiers in a brief skirmish near the Morgan demarcation line, which divides the occupation troops of Yugoslavia to the east from American and British forces in the west.

Yugoslavia, with strong Russian backing, has been claiming Trieste and the Venezia Giulia district of Italy, a claim opposed by the United States and the United Kingdom.

PROPOSED GORDON

Prime Minister Mackenzie King disclosed that 11 of the 17 Soviet Embassy employees mentioned in the final report of the Royal Commission on espionage had left Canada before the other six would be leaving immediately at the insistence of the Russian government.

Trade Minister MacKinnon said he had no official information about reports a conference will be held this autumn to discuss Empire trade preferences but said he would make inquiries.

The House gave first reading to five government bills dealing with payment of workmen's compensation to merchant seamen, changes regarding juries in Saskatchewan and Alberta, provision for continuance of three defence departments instead of one, and steps to prevent "double taxation" on the incomes and estates of persons with interests in both Canada and Britain.

In making his suggestion in the budget debate, Mr. Skey said the proposal would give Mr. Gordon a share of government responsibility and take a "measure of load" from the shoulders of Finance Minister Ilsley. Mr. Gordon would be able to answer directly to members with complaints.

Touching on the Dominion-Provincial conference, he suggested appointment of a committee to promote inter-provincial trade and said it was time the central provinces started buying goods from the Maritimes and western provinces instead of from outside Canada.

Dr. McGarry defended the government's proposal to tax co-operatives and said the average Canadian family lived as well or better than families in any other country in the world. He added that credit for this was due to Mr. Ilsley and the government.

Criticizes Budget

Mrs. Strum expressed criticism of the budget for failure to include an increase for old-age pensions who faced hardships due to the rising cost of living and called for "honorable superannuation" for the people who had been the pioneers in Canada's frontier days.

She compared the Dominion's social legislation with that provided in New Zealand and said the Pacific Dominion was far ahead of Canada in that field. Official figures showed that cost of living was higher in Canada than in New Zealand.

Dying Trapper Penned Note As Life Ebbed Away

Kenora, July 18 (CP)— As his life ebbed away at a lonely cabin in the Red Lake district, 50-year old John Galloway wrote on a weather calendar: "If I can only get rid of this terrible weakness I think I can survive...."

The sentence is the only clue Provincial Police have in the death of the trapper whose mother and sister live at Waverly, some 15 miles from Midland in Southern Ontario.

The diary entry was written April 21, 1945, more than a year before Corporal Frank Richardson of the Ontario Provincial Police flew to the Red Lake area and then made his way through 40 miles of bush to the tiny cabin where he found the trapper's remains.

The death was first discovered by Indians a year ago. The report of their finding of his body didn't reach Provincial Police until October and it was this year before Corporal Richardson was able to make the trip.

Canterbury Enthroned As Prelate of Order

London (CP)—With ancient ceremony the Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. G. F. Fisher, was enthroned as prelate of the Order of St. John at the annual festival of the Order held in the ruins of the old Priory Church, Clerkenwell, destroyed by incendiary bombs in 1941.

The enthronement took place in the Norman crypt under the ivy-colored remains of the Priory Church. It was consecrated in 1185 by Heraclius, patriarch of Jerusalem.

Girls and men in overalls employed in surrounding factories leaned over walls and out of windows to watch the medieval scene.

Advises Policy Of Pooling Radar To Help Mankind

Buffalo, N. Y., July 18—(AP)—Sir Robert Watson-Watt, British pioneer in the development of radar, says the United States and Great Britain "must pool their knowledge" of radar "to develop a system to benefit all mankind."

"It is too expensive and impractical to maintain separate radar systems between two countries," he said in an interview recently.

He was in Buffalo to witness a demonstration of marine radar equipment aboard a Great Lakes vessel.

TONSIL SURGERY IS RARELY NECESSARY

Recently I cited what I consider the highest authority (Children's Tonsils In and Out, by Dr. Albert D. Kaiser of Rochester, N.Y.) to support my contention that the great majority of tonsil and/or adenoid operations are unnecessary and without benefit if not actually injurious.

Some years ago, I said X-ray treatment had been found satisfactory in many cases of enlarged and infected tonsils and/or adenoids. I added "I don't know whether I should choose X-ray treatment or surgical excision if my own tonsils were concerned; but I think I should give the X-ray preference if a child's tonsils were concerned, although children....derive nothing but benefit from the surgical removal of the tonsils." I quote my own opinion of long ago just to show that I have changed my mind since then. Since then I have been compelled to recognize that children do not always derive benefit from surgical removal of tonsils.

Here is my present view of the question—and don't forget I am not a specialist nor an authority.

1. I believe malignancy (cancer and one or two other diseases that may rarely develop in the tonsil) is the only condition that warrants tonsillectomy.

2. If any surgery at all were necessary for a child of mine, it would be tonsillotomy—"clipping" the tonsils—slicing off the portion that obstructs breathing.

3. Any one who talks about "getting every bit of tonsil tissue" makes me tired—there is no scientific ground for the half-baked notion that tonsil tissue in the throat is harmful.

4. The child with adenoids and ear trouble of any kind, either repeated earache (middle ear inflammation) or impairment of hearing, should have the benefit of X-ray treatments before operation is even considered.

5. The method of choice for infected tonsils or for eradicating a presumptive (it is nearly always presumptive) septic focus in the tonsils is electro-coagulation — diathermy treatment.

6. The method of choice for nasal obstruction by adenoids and/or tonsils, causing mouth breathing, is adenoidotomy and/or tonsillotomy—slicing or clipping off the portion of tonsil or adenoid that obstructs breathing.

Arch Supports

Do you believe that arch supports should be worn if the feet are obviously flat yet cause no discomfort. (E.C.B.)

Answer. — My advice is never wear arch supports or other braces, splints or artificial supporter unless your physician prescribes it and instructs you concerning proper corrective measures. Send ten cents and stamped self addressed envelope for booklet "Care of the Feet." Do not use a clipping.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

How does pimento differ from pimiento?

"Pimento" and "pimiento" are so often confused that they are hard to differentiate. Many writers use the two terms interchangeably or use "pimento" in the sense of both to the exclusion of "pimiento."

Originally they were applied to entirely different spices, although they were derived ultimately from the same source. In Latin "pigmentum" meant "pigment" or "paint," in Middle Latin the term came to signify anything spicy and aromatic in allusion to various plant juices.

The word for pepper in Spanish is "pimienta" and in Portuguese "pimenta." In English these words became "pimento" and "pimiento."

Most of the voyages of discovery by Europeans in the 15th century were the result of efforts to reach the Orient without making the long overland trip across Asia through lands inhabited by hostile peoples. The first voyage of Columbus was inspired partly by a desire to obtain spices from India and China. Referring to the first visit of Columbus to Hispaniola, Washington Irving wrote: "In the pimento or red pepper which abounded in the island, he fancied he found a trace of oriental spices, and he thought he had met with specimens of rhubarb."

This pimento is a mildly pungent and aromatic spice prepared from the dried, unripe berries of the pimento tree, Pimenta officinalis, an evergreen of the myrtle family and native to the West Indies and Central America. It was called allspice because its flavor is supposed to combine the qualities of cinnamon, nutmeg and cloves. Later it was called Jamaica pepper because the tree was cultivated commercially on that island.

Allspice is used as a seasoning in cookery and as an ingredient of medicine, but generally not in cheese.

"Pimiento" (pronounced "pee-MYEN-toe") was originally applied to Capiscum tetragonum, a mild, bright red, sweet pepper, which is also called Spanish paprika, which is derived through Hungarian from "peperi," Greek for "pepper."

Pimiento is the fleshy fruit of the Spanish paprika and is used as a vegetable, a relish, a garnish, a stuffing for olives and as a seasoning in cheese. What is ordinarily called "pimento" cheese should really be called "pimiento" cheese. Generally pimiento or pimento cheese is processed cheese made by adding Spanish sweet peppers to Neufchatel curd, although it may also consist of cottage cheese or even hard Cheddar cheese to which pimiento or paprika has been added. In the United States "pimento" is sometimes applied to a sweet-scented shrub, Calycanthus floridus, the wood and bark of which have a spicy flavor.

Sharon and Douglas Findlay, of this city, are visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Wallace McInroy, Moira.

Mr. L. Kelleher and his father, of this city, left for Kingston Wednesday on business. While there they will visit Mr. Ken Colling.

Mr. and Mrs. John Grindrod, of this city, have been holidaying with Mrs. Grindrod's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Branscombe, Picton.

Miss Michaeline Downes, Charles Street, is spending July and part of August in the Thousand Islands.

Dr. Grant Fraser and Mrs. Fraser, Madoc, left Tuesday for San Francisco, as guests of the Imperial Council of the Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine of North America, Dr. Fraser being a member of the Divan of Rameses Shrine Temple Toronto.

An enjoyable evening was spent at the home of Mrs. W. Collyer, Herchimer Ave., Tuesday, when she entertained 21 members of St. George's Guild at a delightful 6 o'clock supper.

Later a euchre game was enjoyed and prizes were won by Miss E. Orne and Mrs. Welch, with Mrs. Orne receiving the consolation prize.

At the close of the evening, a vote of thanks was extended to the hostess by Mrs. Parry for opening her home for such a happy gathering.

Miss Winona Denyes, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. George Denyes who has been a student at the Ontario Ladies' College, Whitby, for the last four years, has obtained the degree of A.T.C.M., in voice and piano.

A competition was held by the Canadian Federation of Music Teachers, at which Winona won a scholarship worth $250.00.

At the musical Festival conducted in Toronto last winter she won the Lady Eaton Scholarship of $150.00. She will be soloist in a Toronto church this summer.

On Monday evening the Kingston Road United Church and community honored Miss Freda Donaldson and Mr. Martin LaRue, who are to be married on Saturday, at a miscellaneous shower, held at the home of Mrs. Walkom. A number of beautiful gifts were presented to the guests of honor following the reading of an address by Mrs. Ryan. A sing song was enjoyed during the evening, and the Rev. Mr. Farnsworth made a brief address.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Downes entertained on Wednesday evening in honor of their son Gerald and his bride. During the evening games were played with euchre prizes being won by the following: Ladies', Mrs. Peggy Mintz; Men's, Mr. Garnet Spencer; Consolation, Mrs. Millie Ford. Margaret and Theresa Downes, Gerald's two small sisters, wheeled in a very pretty bassinette filled with lovely presents. Morton Downes read the address and Mrs. Gladys Ritch proposed a toast to the bride and groom. Refreshments were served and later the guests departed wishing Gerald and Kay every success and happiness.

Women's Activities

MT. PLEASANT W.M.S.

Rawdon — Mount Pleasant Woman's Missionary Society entertained the Baby Band and their mothers also their leader Mrs. Sidmer Demorest. The Mission Band members and their leader Mrs. Wilbert Jeffs with over fifty in attendance at the July meeting.

The service was held at the church hall and was in charge of the vice president Mrs. Percy MacMullen.

Mrs. Ross Hoard played quiet music and Mrs. MacMullen opened the worship service. Sixteen members answered Roll Call. The August meeting will be in charge of the stewardship secretary. Mrs. Cyrus Summers read the minutes and Mrs. Kenneth Weaver reported almost ninety dollars for the half year.

Mrs. Sidmer Demorest took charge of the graduation service when Rae David, Garry Rose and David McAdam graduated out of the Baby Band. Miss Betty McConnell accompanied the hymns and the leader read all the names of the babies on the roll and gave a special story.

The Mission Band at this junction took over the program and the vice president Miss Ruth Linn presided. The worship period was conducted by Mrs. S. Demorest who read a poem "This is My Father's World" and gave a story based on "The Good Seed." Miss Marie Montgomery read a poem and Miss Eleanor Johnston read the Bible lesson.

Miss Ruth Dunham read the minutes and the roll was called from a special chart. This chart has gold stars for payment of fees and blue stars for attendance and it was hoped the mothers would see that the children attended the meetings and paid their ten cent fee.

Mrs. Bert Jeffs leader of the Mission Band outlined the Temperance story entitled "The Magic Stethoscope" and a chapter of the Study Book about "Nyanga."

Miss Ruth Rose read "Heavenly Music" and Miss Betty McConnell contributed a piano solo entitled "Yellow Sands." Miss Shirley McKeown read a story. The offering was gathered and dedicated and the W.M.S. was over six dollars in envelopes with the loose collection going to the two junior organizations. Mrs. John Holmes closed the meeting with prayer. The W.M.S. members served refreshments to the guests, sandwiches, cookies and lemonade and the children in attendance enjoyed a happy afternoon.

West Huntingdon

Variety of Talent Presented by Class

West Huntingdon — A most profitable and inspiring program was presented in the United Church on Tuesday evening when the members of the Victory Sunday School class of Moira United Church visited the Endeavors class. The Moira group is to be congratulated for having such a variety of good talent. Mr. Elmer Post gave the welcome address, and Mr. Ross Ketcheson president of the Victory class presided over the program. Mr. Wesley Farrell offered prayer, and Mr. Kenneth Stewart conducted the scripture reading. The young men's quartet consisting of Messrs. Gordon and Beverly Foster, Don McInroy and Milton Vanderwater contributed an excellent number. Mrs. Milton Vanderwater gave a reading. Mr. and Mrs. Burton Foster sang a duet. Mrs. Nelson Welsh gave the special address on the topic "Rest". A girls' trio gave a song.

Following the service in the church refreshments were served in the dining hall of the Orange hall. The special feature of this was a large birthday cake decorated with candles in honor of Mr. Stewart's birthday.

This fine program was prepared by Mrs. Frank Herity and Mrs. Wesley Farrell. Those assisting with the music were Miss Evelyn Emerson, Mrs. James Vanderwater and Miss Grace McInroy.

WEDDINGS

CASSELMAN—BRUTON

This wedding of interest to Belleville readers appeared in Wednesday's issue of the Kingston Whig-Standard:

Kingston—Tall standards of pink gladioli and blue delphinium arranged at the sides of the altar of Queen Street United Church provided the setting for the marriage of Kathleen Georgina, daughter of Mr. Harry S. Bruton and the late Mrs. Eva Bruton, Bagot Street, and Albert Karl Casselman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon H. Casselman, Frontenac Street, which took place at 3 p.m. Saturday July 13. Rev. Basil Thompson officiated, assisted by Rev. H. M. Servage.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a lovely gown of white frosted marquisette, fashioned with sweetheart neckline, fitted bodice and long sleeves ending in point over her hands. The full skirt of the gown was made with a princess panel down the front. A Mary Stuart headdress held her long veil of silk net, and she carried a cascade of Talisman roses and bouvardia. She wore the gift of the groom, a strand of pearls. Mrs. Gordon D. Walker, matron of honor, wore daffodil yellow sheer, and Miss Helen Geraldi, bridesmaid was in periwinkle blue sheer. Both attendants wore braided coronets which matched their gowns from which fell elbow-length veils in the same shades. They wore long white gloves and carried all-white cascades of gladioli, sweet peas and bouvardia. Mr. Clayton P. Casselman was his brother's best man, and Mrs. R. Keith Bruton, brother of the bride, and Mr. Gordon D. Walker were the ushers.

Miss Pearl Nesbit played the nuptial music, and Miss Helen McWilliam sang "At Dawning" before the ceremony and "The Sweetest Story Ever Told" during the signing of the register.

The reception was held in the hall in the church, decorated with summer flowers. Mrs. Harry S. Bruton received, wearing a street-length gown of white silk jersey. The groom's mother was attired in a blue silk jersey afternoon dress. Both had corsages of variegated sweet peas. The bride's table was adorned with the wedding cake, placed in a cloud of white tulle dotted with pink rosebuds, and also white tapers and silver baskets filled with pink and white sweet peas.

The bride chose an eyelet embroidered frock of pink silk, white accessories and a corsage of white carnations for travelling. After their wedding trip to Montreal and the Laurentians the couple will reside on Frontenac Street.

Miss D. Hammett Feted at Showers

On Tuesday evening Mrs. C. Greatrix and Mrs. Frank Foley entertained at a delightful miscellaneous shower when about thirty-five guests were present to honor Miss Dorothy Hammett, bride elect of this month. During the evening games were played and a number of lovely gifts, on a decorated tea wagon, were presented to Miss Hammett. Later delicious refreshments were served with the hostesses being assisted in serving by Miss Shirley Bunnett, Mrs. McKnight, Mrs. A. Hall, Miss Canning and Mrs. Diamond.

On Wednesday night Miss Hammett was entertained by Misses Muriel Jobson, Marjorie Tummon, Betty Marvin and Mildred Hall, at the former's home. After the many beautiful gifts had been presented to the guest of honor, refreshments were served, and Miss Edna Jobson and Mrs. Roy Hinchey told the girls' fortunes by reading their cups.

Trousseau Tea Held For Miss Donaldson

Mrs. E. Donaldson entertained at a beautifully arranged trousseau tea in honor of her daughter, Freda Donaldson, on Wednesday afternoon. The rooms were decorated with multi-colored snapdragons, gladioli, and other summer flowers, with the tea table being centred by a bowl of crimson-hued snapdragons. The guests were invited upstairs to see the gifts and trousseau by Shirley Ann Donaldson. Gifts were shown by Mrs. Ranson, Miss Jackson and Mrs. Graham, and the trousseau was displayed by Miss Marjorie Donaldson and Miss Jean Gazley.

Presiding at the tea table were Mrs. LaRue and Mrs. Walkom, while the Misses Irma and Joyce Donaldson served. Mrs. Charles Lane and Mrs. Charles Donaldson replenished.

BEAUTY

Footloose and Fancy Free

One is foot-conscious in the summer

Heels are getting higher and lower. It is the truth. Spring heels are back again. Some smart play shoes have no heels at all. Some new evening numbers have heels four inches high. You pays your money and you takes your choice. Those stilts are a deplorable indulgence, but it seems that nothing can be done about the matter.

The foot is pliable, is easily molded to a shape that is not normal. If the heel is upped beyond a reasonable degree, toes will become deformed, corns and ingrowing nails will start up their tormenting occupation, muscles will weaken, the arches will become deformed. But, evidently, some of the sisters don't care.

Along with the new high in heels come some primitive offerings for play time. They have a tropical twist, are known among the manufacturers as "flats." A piece of strong sole leather is selected — about one quarter of an inch thick. It is moulded to foot shape, then slots are cut in it. Through the slots are drawn thongs of this sole leather, finely tooled and with ornamental banding. There are straps around the ankle and over the instep. In some models thongs run between the big toe and the second one.

Spring heels, formerly, have shoes, now they are employed in adult sizes.

The spring heel is a prolongation of the sole. Made of resilient sole leather, it runs under the foot to form the heel. This type of shoe has a leather insole for cushioning and to give springy support. It is a comfortable design and should replace some of the sloppy horrors that our boby-soxers seem to love with all their little hearts.

This is the season of the year when one is foot-conscious. Hot pavements send feet into a fever. Modern science has shown that the muscles and bones of the feet constantly create heat. When the sun is high in the heavens, we could go along without having heating plants in our trotters.

The skin exudes a certain amount of moisture. If the chemicals deposited by the sweat glands remain on the flesh for any length of time there is bound to the irritation. Hence the need of frequent bathing and the free use of a foot powder to absorb the moisture.

Never wear the same pair of shoes two days in succession if you would have pedal comfort. A frequent change of lasts will ward off calloused spots caused by pressure or friction.

Have new shoes fitted late in the day when the feet have spread slightly. See that there is plenty of toe space. If you can't wriggle your toes freely, the shoe is too small. See that the sole is flexible, giving gently with the movements of the foot, yet firmly supporting the delicate tendons and muscles.

GOOD MANNERS

Correct To Tell Guests "Departure Time"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please settle an argument between my sister and me? Mother and father have rented a house at the shore for this summer, and have told us that we can invite four guests, two each, for each weekend. The time of our guests' arrival is settled all right, and to everyone's satisfaction. But father insists that our guests should return to the city sometime Sunday evening (there is one particularly good Sunday evening express train); he says that Mother, who hasn't been too well this past winter, must not be bothered with guests staying over until anytime Monday, that she must rest during the week if we are to have weekend guests.

Now I maintain that it is very rude to tell your guests when they must leave. But my sister insists that some time ago she read in your column that this is not only correct but is quite customary.

Can this possibly be right?

Kay

Yes, ma'am....this is an entirely correct procedure, is quite customary, and in these days when it is indeed a problem for a hostess to plan foods and service, it is increasingly "done". And it certainly makes sense... guests told in the invitation just when they are expected to arrive, and when they are expected to leave, "There is an excellent express train on Sunday evening, leaving here at — and this will give us time to have a leisurely buffet supper after tennis or golf in the afternoon." Also you and your sister should co-operate with your father in his wise plan to avoid confusing departures of guests on Monday morning.

A Girl Who Showed Her Manners

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

The other day a friend and I were having tea at the house of a friend who has a daughter about seventeen years old. Two or three guests came to tea, and with one lady came her quite elderly uncle. When this elderly man was introduced to the hostess' daughter, she rose as she acknowledged the introduction. On the way home, my friend and I commented on this, and we thought that it wasn't necessary for her to rise, or even correct. However, this girl's mother is famous in our town for her politeness. Was her daughter correct in rising to acknowledge this introduction? My friend was particularly interested because she also has a daughter about two years younger than this hostess' daughter.

E. R.

I can well understand why this girl's mother is famous in your community for her politeness....and her daughter showed the wise and thoughtful training of her courteous mother. Yes, it was indeed proper for her to rise when this elderly man was introduced to her, and in doing so she showed a gracious compliment to them. The mother who trains such graciousness into her child is giving that child a precious gift, for this sense of courtesy "grows by what it feeds on".

Fashion Flashes

Color-hungry women, who say that they never can get enough color contrast in suits, would have admired a showing at which the star suit, a three-piece ensemble, had a green-yoked, black skirt topped by a black-banded green blouse under a brilliant tangerine woolen jacket that is banded in green.

Cited for next winter is the fur cape, both in long and short-haired furs. Black Persian lamb is used for a full cape, in 38-inch length, that buttons snugly under the chin with jewelled black and gold buttons.

One result of the big sleeve is the small hat that provides balance and contrast. A charming hat for early fall is in taupe felt an off-face breton roller, trimmed with loops of bright green sation ribbon and up-jutting wings that shade from beige to brown.

The Matter of Month Hygiene

By HELEN FOLLETT

Today's preachment has to do with the unpleasant breath, an unpleasant subject if ever there was one. One wonders if those who are afflicted with it are unaware of their dreadful handicap.

An objectionable breath is too distressing to be tolerated by the members of the family; the family should insist that cure be found. The cause may be in disorders of the nose, throat or mouth.

A physician will soon find out about that. Decaying teeth may be a factor. Infected tonsils are a common source.

Individuals who suffer from digestive disturbance or constipation may find themselves beset with this affliction. So, it looks as if a general health check-up is the real solution to the problem.

When brushing the teeth, if you are among the victims of this trouble, give plenty of time to the job because particles of food wedged between the teeth may cause an unpleasant odor.

Brush the teeth vigorously, always away from the gums. Do not over look the biting ends; being of uneven surface, they are usually the first part to decay.

After brushing the teeth, use a mouth wash, swishing it around well to flood away any foreign particles the brush may have disladged. If you haven't such a lotion at hand, dissolve one-half teaspoon of salt and one half teaspoonful of baking soda in a cup of water. Keep it in a well stoppered bottle. This amount will be sufficient for several days.

It might be well to cut down on protein, to eat fewer eggs and less meat. Take fruit juices every day and eat leafy vegetables

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

She "Gave Him The Air"— Now She Wants Him Back— Shall He Go?

Here's a young man whose heart urges him to take back the girl who once "gave him the air," but whose head wonders if it's a very smart idea. This is his story:

Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I was in the navy, and while home on leave 20 months ago I met a girl with whom I fell very much in love. I saw her every chcance I had, and even went AWOL for three days to be with her.

"Everything was running along swell until a few months ago, when she told me about another fellow she went out with, and he was coming home and wanted to see her. Well, he came home while I was away, and she wanted to tell him she didn't want very well that a sensible young have the heart to. When I came home, she told me of this, and I told her she would have to choose between us. So she said she wanted to go with me.

"When the other fellow learned of this, he took it pretty hard, and insisted on seeing her. She couldn't stand him acting unhappy and took him back and gave me the air. Now she can't get along with him, even though they became engaged, and she wants me to go with her again. She broke her engagement this week, and as yet I haven't given man would expect her to do that not I would take her out again. She told me she still loves me very much and will do anything I ask if I will take her back.

"I still love her very much, only I'm afraid she may give me the air again if someone else comes along.

Ex-navy vet

I'm sorry that I couldn't answer your letter as quickly as you asked me to in your postscrip, Ex-navy vet. But there are so many people who ask me to answer them right away that I can't possibly get around to everybody as fast as I'd like to. But I hope it isn't too late for me to be helpful.

It is perfectly natural you should feel uncertain about this girl's dependability, when she is so readily swayed by her feelings of the moment. What she'll have to do before she gets to see him any more, but didn't learn to make a decision and then stick to it, no matter what pressure may be brought to bear.

This girl is probably very young and inexperienced, besides being highly emotional, so that you are quite right, to hesitate and think it over well before giving her another chance to run out on you. Your wisest plan, I think, provided the girl attracts you so much that you'd like to resume your relationship with her, is to be very casual about the whole thing for awhile until you see how she behaves. Don't make her the centre of your whole social world, but take other girls out now and then, and don't commit yourself to anything like an engagement with her for a long time to come.

If she is sincerely attached to you, and intends to act in a more stable fashion from now on, she'll show it by being willing to let you take her "on trial," so to speak, until she proves herself. She should understand very well that sensible young man would expect her to that, after the way she has acted, before he would care to become deeply involved with her.

S. Africa Watches Trend of Trade, Rising Prices

By BRIAN YOUNG

Johannesburg, July 17 —(CP Cable) — South Africans are anxiously watching the trade situation brought about by rising prices in the United States and the recent upward revaluation of Canadian currency to par with the American dollar.

The Union fears it will be impossible for the South African government to prevent inflation here. Because prices have risen 16 per cent on basic commodities in the United States during the two weeks since price control lapsed, some South African business men are trying to cancel existing orders with American manufacturers.

These orders were made on the basis of the price ruling at the date of delivery and not at a fixed price.

Also as a result of Canada's currency revaluation, South Africa will have to pay about 10 per cent more for goods from Canada in relation to Union currency, chiefly timber, paper, motor vehicles, electrical goods, silk stockings, rails and other steel products.

South Africa's difficulty in the face of overseas inflation is that she still is largely an assembler rather than a producer in industry and her secondary industries depend largely on the importation of raw materials. With post-war de-control of many products, it becomes increasingly difficult for South Africa to obtain materials for its secondary industries and the Union is being increasingly compelled to import manufactured articles.

Rumor Secret Deal Of Soviet, Mongolia

Manila, July 18 — (AP) — An authoritative source said Wednesday the Chinese Foreign Office has learned of a secret deal between Soviet Russia and the Mongolian Peoples Republic permitting the garrisoning of Russian troops in that pivotal Asian state.

The Nanking government, this source declared, is reacting sensitively to a projected Soviet garrison in Mongolia, strategic key to China's back door.

PIANO PRODIGY MEETS THE CHAMP

25 Red Soldiers Reported Killed By Outlaw Band

By LARRY ALLEN

Warsaw, July 18 — (AP) — Twenty-five Russian soldiers were reported Wednesday to have been killed during the last month by the same outlawed bands of irregulars (N.S.Z.) which are accused of systematically slaying Jews throughout Poland.

The newspaper Glos Ladu said that the latest N.S.Z. attack was on a passenger train near Lublin, and that six Russians were taken captive and later brutally slain.

Meanwhile, mystery cloaked the fate of nine Jews said to have been held prisoner by the N.S.Z. near Kielce, scene of a pogrom July 4 in which 41 persons were killed. Advices from Kielce said the Jews were hostages for nine Polise executed for participating in the pogrom.

The N.S.Z., which is widely scattered over Poland, also is reported to have stopped a train near Bialystok recently and to have killed a number of Red Army soldiers and stripped others before escaping into a forest region. Bialystok is about 30 miles from the Russian frontier.

Demobilized Russian soldiers travelling in caravans homeward from Germany have been set upon frequently by bandit gangs. Close to a score of Russians were reported to have been killed recently in a forest.

Although troops and security forces were ordered to capture the band which attacked the train near Lublin, no announcement was made as to whether any members of the gang had been rounded up.

Newspapers said editorially that serious developments might occur unless the N.S.Z. were wiped out and unless Russian soldiers were guaranteed security within Poland.

Mitsui Family Council Reported Dissolving

Tokyo, July 18 — (AP)—The Mitsui Family Council, largest organization of its type in the world, was reported to have decided to dissolve — possibly the first step in the disintegration of a family financial empire worth more than 25,000,000,000 yen ($1,666,666,666).

The Mitsui Family Council, which dates back to 1722, holds the controlling interest in Mitsui Honsha, a family holding company with assets of about 1,200,000,000 yen ($80,000,000.) This company has 89 subsidiaries, all highly valued. In turn, these 89 are associated with about 900 others.

The council consists of 11 families with pooled assets.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were having liver and onions in pop's honor, and ma said, William, there's something peculiar about this butter, haven't you noticed it?

Well, it has a lovely golden color, and if something unfortunate has happened to its taste, it's probably doing the best it can for its age, and after all, it's still butter, and in times of scarcity we musn't look for perfection, as the fellow said when he scored a jump of 7 inches on his artificial legs, pop said, and ma said, Well, I'm glad you're so reasonable about it. The strange coincidence is, the car didn't seem to be running very well this afternoon. I don't mean anything definite, except that it took quite a time to start, and even after it started it moved in fits and jerks, she said.

Yee gods, if that's a coincidence how about my new package of razor blades? pop said. Two of then snapped in half in the razor while I was shaving this morning, he said, and ma said, Now William be logical, what have your razor blades got to do with the butter?

That's a fair question and deserves a fair retort, pop said. What has the way the car is running got to do with the butter? he said, and ma said, Everything. I got this butter at a new little gas station where they're introducing a new gas called Zippygas by selling you a half pound of butter every time you have your tank filled, she said.

For Peet sake the man must of put the butter in your car and sold you a half pound of Zippygas, pop said. I know where you can buy a pair of nylon stockings with hardly a run in them if you subscribe in advance for 6 new magazines that'll be on the market as soon as the paper shortage is over, he said.

Oh, eat your butter, I mean your liver and onions, ma said.

Which he did, using the gravey on his bread.

REUNITED AFTER 6 YEARS OF WAR SERVICE

Toronto, July 18 — (CP) — A man and his teeth were re-united here Tuesday night after nearly six years when ex-Cpl. Frank Beresford handed a set of lower molars to drummer Bob Elliott. Six years ago, when they were both overseas, Elliott was taken ill and rushed to hospital leaving his lower plate behind. His pal, Beresford took possession until they met again.

Slayer of Manicurist Hanged at Liverpool

Liverpool, July 17 — (CP) — Thomas Hendren, 31-year-old ship's baker, was hanged today for the murder of Mrs. Ella Valentine Staunton, 41, attractive red-haired manicurist.

Mrs. Staunton was strangled with a silk cord in her Liverpool salon May 30 while police officers, investigating the establishment, peered through a ceiling peep-hole. The officers said Mrs. Staunton moved just out of range before the murder was committed.

Another man was sentenced to death as police pressed their drive against an outburst of crime in which women have been the chief victims.

Joseph Henry Marshall, 30, London laborer, was sentenced to death in London for smothering Kathleen Lindsay, 18, a casual acquaintance with whom he had started to spend the night at a Victoria Hotel last month.

Marshall's lawyer told the court the case was one of "tragic circumstances" in that Marshall "came home from serving in the Far East and found his wife had had an illegitimate child. He then came to London and started drinking and going with other women."

There was no fresh word on progress of investigation in other cases. At least nine women or girls have been slain within little more than a month in Britain's worst crime wave of the century.

Wartime Concerts Now Permanent In Scottish Capital

By JAMES McCOOK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Edinburgh (CP)—Husky-voiced Tom Haddow looked down at 500 children dancing before his platform, to the music of an accordion and said:

"How—and why—would you stop that?"

Six years ago he worked in an office for the city of Edinburgh. One day a senior official told him that they don't want holidayers to take up space on the railways this year because it's all needed for war transport. They think maybe concerts and music for the children would keep Edinburgh families at home this summer.

"Would you be master of ceremonies at a daily concert put on by the city for the children?"

"I just didn't know how I'd manage," said Mr. Haddow to The Canadian Press. "But I went down to the Gardens and we had a bit of music and I asked any one of the children to come up to the platform and sing or tell a story.

"Since then, upon my soul, we've had concerts every day during the summer and I've never been short of entertainers. Look at the back door of the pavilion, there's where they come.'

Ready To Sing

There stood a five-year-old boy with a kilt and sporran and a neat tweed jacket. His mother said he'd like to sing. "I'll put him down for tomorrow," said Mr. Haddow and the wee boy smiled.

"I've never been let down once," Mr. Haddon went on, turning back to the platform at the front.

"All these children came skipping down from their chairs in front here and they stand before the "mike" and sing or tell stories, or maybe they dance. Sometimes you'll have 1,500 children and twice as many adults—there used to be scores of Canadians among them—right down here in the Gardens under the Castle rock looking on and being entertained.

"Aye, they started it to keep people at home in the war, but how can they stop it now?"

The entertainments for children and their parents have become only one feature of the Edinburgh stay-at-home movement. For adults, at the same Garden pavilion, there is dance music in the afternoon. Near the city, at Braidburn Valley, there's an open air theatre where plays are performed during the summer with the blessing of the city government.

4,702,000 Persons Employed at June 1

Ottawa, July 18 — (CP)—The Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported total employment in Canada at June 1 was 4,702,000, a gain of 390,000 from Feb. 23.

Slightly more than half the increase was due to women working on farms.

The number of unplaced was reported at 126,000, a reduction of 87,000 from the Bureau's Feb. 23 figure.

(The Labor Department, basing its figures on registration at employment offices and including those temporarily laid off or working at casual part-time jobs, showed 210,000 unemployed at May 30 and Tuesday reported 179,000 at July 4.)

HATS FROM RABBIT SKINS

Melbourne, Australia (CP) — The Australian Army used more than 3,000,000 khaki felt hats during the Second Great War. They were manufactured from the skins of 32,000,000 rabbits.

CYCLISTS MAKE CALL ON PONTIFF

The usual conservative or formal garb worn by visitors to the Vatican was waived when a group of bicyclists, touring Italy, made a brief stop in Rome. One of the bare-legged riders is seen about to kiss the ring on the hand of Pope Pius XII, as the Pontiff greets him.

Northern Trapper Now Mink Breeder

Buffalo Narrows, Sask (CP)) —Saskatchewan's rugged lake-dotted north country wasn't yielding a living to fur-trapper Hans Ausland so he decided to grow his own.

Six years ago he leveled a few feet of bush beside the Churchill River, 18 miles south of here and pitched his tent. He started to breed mink and today has a $30,000 fur farm where his two daughters and two hired men help feed more than 800 mink as well as various fox breeds.

The scientific method has been brought into this bush country farm—200 miles northwest of Prince Albert, the closest city—for the breeding of the precious mink. Mr. Ausland imports special strains from the United States for his own experimentations.

He now has glacier blue, silver blue, white and white and black mink which make female visitors' eyes gleam with envy. His own special breed is a light-brown colored animal—something he has never seen or heard of before.

Blowing on the mink's fur to test its quality, Mr. Ausland is careful to hold the small animal's head firmly between his fingers. When they bite they hang on.

He has constructed boxes of his own design to simplify feeding and cleaning. Inspiration for the idea came by "just sitting down and looking at the old cages for a few hours."

When visited he had no worries except his stomach. His family had gone 40 miles up river to attend celebrations at Ile A La Crosse.

"I'm afraid I might get Hudson Bay stomach—too much canned goods," he said.

FIRST FALL WHEAT SHIPPED

Chatham, July 18 — (CP) — Nearby Tilbury farmers Tuesday shipped the first carload of fall wheat from the district this year, James M. Monacher, of the Board of Grain Commissioners said. The shipment was 10 days ahead of 1945.

Real Estate Deals Are Slow in Berlin

Berlin (CP)—Nobody wants to buy ruins, inquiry among Berlin real estate dealers reveals.

This fact somewhat surprised real estate brokers, who at first blush though investors might want to acquire ruins cheaply, tear them down and rear new structures.

Investors, however, reasoned differently. First of all they don't know what is to be the position of mortgages on property now standing in ruins. Next, there is the question of whether real estate valuations will undergo a change in view of the unprecedented situation created by mass destruction of entire city sections through bomb and artillery action.

Take downtown Berlin, for instance. Real estate before the war naturally commanded top prices. But can the centre of the city, which "has had it," ever be rebuilt? If so, will it again become the commercial centre or will it, as some city planners have it, be turned into a series of settlement projects? The uncertainty about the future of the city is putting a curb on speculative buying or purchase for investment.

On the other hand, anybody who has a roof over his house is anxious to hold onto his property. Hence, although countless would-be purchasers of homes are registered with real estate agents, properties are being offered for sale only by people who need cash badly or by heirs who have no use for the real estate.

Vacant lots, like ruins, are not wanted. One main reason is the dearth of building materials outside of bricks. Bricks are as plentiful as the sands on the sea.

BABY'S HOT LITTLE HEAD MAY BE A DANGER SIGNAL

WHEN your Baby's head feels hot to your hand you must do something. And do it quickly. Read what another mother does and what results she gets: "My baby's cheeks and hands were so hot I was frightened. I gave him a Baby's Own Tablet at noon and by after supper he was all better."

And Mrs. Francis Carvell, of Midland, has this to say: "My little girl was so feverish I was really alarmed. Then I thought of Baby's Own Tablets, so I gave her three every two hours and by night she was up and around."

Baby's Own Tablets are sweet-tasting, easy to take—and may be quickly crushed to a powder if desired. They help reduce the simple fever common to trivial sicknesses of babyhood by clearing harmful wastes out of the system. If fever is not relieved promptly, consult your physician. No "sleepy" stuff—no dulling effect. Equally good for constipation, teething troubles, upset stomach and other minor ailments of baby. Used with confidence by mothers for over 40 years. Get a box today. Sickness so often strikes in the night. 25 cents. Money back if you are not satisfied.

One of the good lead rules in bridge is: Return your partner's led suit. Of course, it has branches. And each branch has its own deviations, which some players think of as exceptions.

One branch of this rule is: Return the fourth best of your own original holding in that suit. Thus, if you started with four or more cards in it, you are not expected to lead back the highest.

Another branch of this rule says: Return the highest if you had an original holding of less than four. Thus, if you started with three or less, you are expected to lead back your highest.

Deviate from branches when circumstances prompt you to digress. As when dummy cards advise a change of policy. Or when partner's led card tells you to change. There are symptoms that will tell you when.

In the branch of fourth best return, at least one deviation is usually obvious. It is the exception: Unless you should play highest of four in order to unblock for partner.

In the branch of highest return more than one deviation may be found. One of them is the exception: Unless the return of your top will surely promote a trick for opponent.

South is declarer in no-trump when the hearts are as shown here:

NORTH
♥A K

WEST ♥J 10 6 2
EAST ♥Q 9 4

SOUTH
♥8 7 5 3

Your partner in the west starts with a lead of the heart deuce. Dummy in the north wins with the king. From your east hand, discard the nine; an encouraging come-on signal.

When you later win a trick in some other suit, lead back your heart queen, as your return. With an original holding of less than four cards, you should return your top.

When would you not return the queen? When you had reason to believe the jack was in south instead of in partner's hand.

Do that which pays the most for your side.

Hollywood Column

Hollywood, July 18 — (AP) — As it must with all child stars, Margaret O'Brien is growing up.

When a movie moppet reaches an advanced age (Margaret is all of nine), she begins to abandon her wide-eyed ways and adopt some glamor. That's what's happening to Margaret.

When I saw her on the set of "Ballerina" she was sporting her first permanent wave. And she was wearing lipstick and a little bit of rouge. She is playing the title role in the film and even her mother expressed surprise at her ability as a dancer.

Margaret interrupted proceedings to announce: "I'm giving up acting — I want to be a dancer." She didn't explain whether the permanent, lipstick and rouge had anything to do with her decision.

Mrs. O'Brien confided that her daughter is beginning to show signs of concern about her career. When the waitress brought her lunch, Margaret looked at her mother and asked: "Is this fattening?"

Now look who's fretting about movie censorship — Maria Montez. When I found her languishing on the set of "Pirates of Monterey," she started sounding off about the film shipping puritans:

"I go to the movies almost every night and it's the same old thing — boy meets girl, boys loses girl — no plot, nothing.

"Everything on the screen is infantile. I don't mean that pictures must be indecent to be adult. But really strong emotions are never seen. There should be two types of pictures — one for children, the other for adults."

In the film palaces . . . "To each His Own" in a weeper, but a surprisingly good one. Ably written, it retells the situation of an unwed mother who loses the affection of her child. John Lung shows star promise, and Oliva de Haviland deserves an Academy mention. The film is not for the kiddies.

Danish Food For Britain

London, July 18 (Reuters)— Britain is importing "substantial quantities" of food from Denmark and negotiations for future supplies are under way, Food Minister Strachey told House of Commons questioners today.

Mr. Strachey said Britain's Purchases include a large part of Denmark's exportable surplus of bacon, butter and eggs and substantial quantities of cheese, fish and bacon factory offals.

Johnny Bulla Is Hottest Swinger In Chi. National

By JERRY LISKA

Chicago, July 18 (AP)— Big Johnny Bulla, who claims his heart was broken when he blew the British open title, is the hottest swinger in the Chicago Victory National Golf Tournament which ends some fancy preliminaries at Medinah Country Club.

Bulla minimized a scorching 67 he blasted yesterday as a conglomerate field of the United States' top professionals, amateurs and women players launched a 36-hole scrap for pro-amateur, pro-lady and pro-senior titles.

"I played my biggest tournament—and lost it over in England a couple of weeks ago," boomed Bulla, whose four-under-par performance on Medinah's 6,929-yard No. 3 course equalled the club record. "I wake up nights thinking about those last three greens I three-putted to hand the British open title to Sammy Snead."

By wrapping together a 34 and 33 yesterday, Bulla hoisted Al Anderson of Medinah, Ill., with a 40-41-81, into the 18-hole lead in the pro-senior running. His amateur partner, Illinois State champion Earl Wilde of Chicago, contributed a 79 for a 146 total. This was only four strokes off the pace set by Lawson Little (72) and amateur George Dawson (70).

The pro-lady leadership was held by Ben Hogan and Louise Suggs, newly-crowned women's western open titlist, with 148, thanks to a phenomenal round of 75 by the poker-face lass from Lithia Springs, Ga.

Besides Bulla and top amateur Dawson, the only other player to squeeze under par 71 was Harold (Jug) McSpaden with 37-33—70.

Tennis Finals In Junior Ranks Conclude Today

Ottawa, July 18 (CP)— Play in the Dominion junior tennis championships was scheduled to conclude today at Rideau Lawn Tennis Club, with the exception of the junior men's singles contest between unorthodox Lorne Main of Vancouver and Colin Maass of Westmount, Que., rising star of the tournament.

The 16-year-old west coast court expert will meet Westmount's "dark horse" of the tourney in a featured match July 26, during the Dominion senior championships.

Finals matches today were scheduled for junior men's and women's doubles and junior women's singles, with the top names of the meet participating variously in the draws.

Winnifred Harpel of Port Arthur, 1946 Ontario junior champion seeded No. 1, will meet Jacqueline Merner of Kitchener, in the junior women's finals.

However, in women's doubles play the two will combine forces and try to defeat the resourceful Ottawa team of Shirley Stotesbury and Rita Boisvert, who yesterday rallied after being forced to 40-love at match point and beat Marjorie Holmes and Colleen Nolan of Ottawa 4-6, 8-6, 6-2.

The junior men's doubles final will match Main and Jimmy McGregor of Toronto against Maass and Bruce Logie of Toronto.

The city slicker may like to go off to the country to find his fishing, but he doesn't have to.

Fishermen who were kept near home by gas rationing in war time have discovered that many an unfished, unpolluted pool is to be found near their city homes. Such pools on the outskirts of cities can be explained by the fact that they once were "in the country," and the city since has caught up with them. Many pools have been well stocked and then virtually abandoned by fishermen because they are surrounded by homes and industry.

The truth of the matter is that for many fishermen half of the fun of fishing is taking a trip to the country and camping out.

Dr. Wellbanks' Horse, Carl Dale, Wins at Picton

Picton, July 18—No horse managed to win three straight heats at a Kingsway Race Meet held here yesterday under the auspices of Picton Kinsmen Club. Competition was especially keen, with close finishes being a feature. Prize for the best mile went to Gallogy of Kingston, who drove George Cockburn's Maude Grattan in the third heat, doing the mile in 2.14½. An attempt was made by B. Kane with Oxford Lad to beat this mark in the last heat of the free-for-all, but finished in 2.15. He did the first half in 1.09 and the second in 1.06. Cockburn's horse did it in 1.06 and 1.08½.

J. K. Welsh headed the local race committee. Proceeds were for the National Cancer Fund. Music was furnished by the Pipe Band, under Jamie Clark, of Belleville. A second meet here on July 31 was announced.

Kelly Sr. Calls Off Rowing Race

Philadelphia, July 18 — (AP)— A special sculls race between Jack Kelly, Jr., of Philadelphia, and Jean Sepheriades of France, is "out of the question," says Kelly's father.

"I never heard a word about such a race until I saw it in the papers," said Kelly senior in a telephone interview from his summer home in Ocean City, N. J. "Nobody ever consulted me about it or I would have told them it was impossible."

"Sepheriades won the race at the younger Kelly at Henley-on-Thames, England, in the finals for the Diamond Sculls championship. Upon Kelly's return to this country, a special return match in the United States was proposed by Michael E. Murphy, Philadelphia oil man.

"Sephariades won the race at Henley fair and square," Kelly's father — who is his trainer — declared. "He is entitled to all the glory which goes with winning the coveted Sculls trophy . . .

TIME RATION FOR MUSIC INSTRUCTION

London, July 18 — (Reuters)— Music instruction is the latest thing to be put "on the ration" in austerity-ridden Britain. The Royal College of Music has imposed a limit on the time students may spend there because "we have had six non-productive years, which have got to be made up in the shortest possible time," a college official explained.

85-YEAR-OLD MAN IN ALIMONY ROW

Chicago, July 18 — (AP) — An 85-year-old man today became the oldest inmate of alimony row in the history of Cook County. He was Patrick O'Mahony, who was committed by Superior Judge George M. Fisher after he refused to pay his estranged wife, Anna, 76, $360 which she claims he owes her on a $15 a week temporary alimony order.

LINER NORMANDIE WILL BE SCRAPPED

Washington, July 18 — (AP)— The French liner Normandie is slated to be broken up in the current drive to relieve the scrap metal shortage, a maritime commission spokesman said last night. Sunk at a pier in New York early in the war because of a fire, the Normandie later was salvaged but because of her condition never was refitted for use.

Cubs Peek in Pennant Door As Cards Falter to Phillies And Dodgers Fall into Slump

Brooklyn Staggers to 7th Defeat in 8 Starts; Yanks Win Two From St. Louis; Phillies Ruffle Cards' Feathers

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sport Writer

Brooklyn's dismal slump and the Cardinals' habit of losing to the Phillies is leaving the door wide open for Chicago Cubs in the National League pennant scramble.

Although the Dodgers still rule Ford Frick's roost by a half game, many baseball men believe the real 1946 race in September will find the Cards and Cubs battling for the flag.

Counted out of the race and rated "just another wartime club" in the early spring calculations, the Bruins today are a strong third, breathing hard on the necks of St. Louis and only 3 1-2 games out of first place.

The Cubs made ground yesterday by drubbing the Braves, 10-0, in the afternoon and then watching both the Brooks and Cards bow under the arcs.

St. Louis once again refused to take advantage of a chance to regain the lead they hadn't held all by themselves since May 19. Oscar Judd had a 10-1 early margin but faded in the last two rounds and had to call in relief help from Charlie Schanz and Dick Mulligan to save the 10-7 decision, it was the fifth time in 11 meetings the Phils had beaten the Birds.

Brooklyn staggered to a fifth successive setback at Cincinnati, 5-2, their seventh defeat in eight starts on the current western tour. Young Hank Behrman appeared to have a 2-1 triumph in his pocket until the Dodger defence collapsed in the four-run eighth to give Bucky Walters his sixth decision.

Rookie Ralph Kiner sunk New York Giants with a three-run homer and two singles behind Pittsburgh's Nick Strincevich, 8-5.

All major league attendance records went by the boards at the Yankee Stadium when the New Yorkers lured 30,159 customers to boost the season high to 1,510,934. The best previous mark was 1,485,166 attained by Chicago Cubs in 1929 and that was for an entire season.

The Yanks won two from St. Louis, 3-2 and 8-4 but remained 11 full games behind Boston which dumped Chicago twice 3-1 and 6-1.

Jimmy Outlaw's 12th-inning double enabled Detroit to trim Washington 3-2 for Al Benton's first success since April 18.

Allie Reynolds got victory No. 5 on the record by subduing the Philadelphia Athletics with five blows 8-2.

Toronto Indians Sign 10 Players

Toronto, July 18 (CP)—Toronto Indians entry of the Senior Ontario Rugby Football Union next fall has already signed 18 players, it was announced last night, and among them Harry Sonshine, veteran grid warrior in several loops, will be on the active list.

The list also includes Ross McKelvey, which seemed to dispose of reports that McKelvey would play for the Montreal Alouettes. Others in the fold include Doug Pyzer, Don Durno, Don Crowe, Billy Stukus, Jake Gaudaur, Johnny Farmer, Dick Harrison, Juan Sheridan, Dave Grant, Leo Ciotta, Ken Booker, Bob Johnston, Fred Page, Bill Petri and Bill Douglas.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

What should be one of the baseball epics of the present season takes place tonight at the RCAF diamond, Trenton Air Station, when "Moose" Matthews' league-leading Flyers clash with Batawa Shoemen in a scheduled game advanced from Monday, July 22.

The Flyer buckaroos winging their way along a crest of victory have nicked "Smoky" Smith and his crew by the close margins of 2-1 scores on their two previous meetings, and tonight's struggle should be well worth seeing. The Batamen will probably take no chances and send their ace, Smith to the mound. Flyers will likely start Gibb. If Bata cops the nod the squads will be tied on the top perch with nine wins and three losses each.

• • •

More baseball too tonight, for those who have no way to get out of town. Latta, fresh from their Tuesday night victory over Batawa take on the high-riding SWACO squad, and this joust too should be one for the book. SWACO tacked a neat 8-0 defeat on the Kiwanis Juniors Tuesday evening, and are a much improved team over that which started the season.

• • •

Remember the Latta-SWACO game locale has been changed from the Fair Grounds as scheduled, to the Alemite Field. That announcement was made today by League President Don Thomas.

• • •

Comes a letter from a softball team in Oshawa dubbed the U.A.W.A. an intermediate "A" squad which states the team is desirous of playing an exhibition game here with a Belleville squad on Saturday, July 27th. Any city team that would like to invite the Oshawans here for an exhibition tilt on that date should get in touch with Al. Wilson, 3 King Street W., Oshawa.

• • •

Down off Victoria Park these balmy breezy days, where the lone trees sigh in the evening zephyrs, and the gentle waves lap at the rolling hulls of pleasure craft, the local yacht laddies are having their summer fun. There is a number of handsome visiting speedcraft lazing at anchor and, some of the jobs are well worth looking at.

• • •

And speaking of boats and boating, egad, up comes a challenge, of all things. It seems that Gordon Cook has acquired ye goode shippe "Joker" the same sea-varlet that scattered the waves for years under the guiding hand of Frank Smith. Gordie has had the li'l lady overhauled and is now ready to enter her in any race that might pop up out of the blue horizon.

• • •

But Gordon is an ambitious lad, and has his eyes on that trophy held by Maurice Callaghan. And being a gentleman and a sportsman, Gord figured the best way to cop that mug is to challenge friend Maurice to a duel of ships through the wind and over the waves of the Bay of Quinte off here next Sunday.

• • •

So there you have it, Mr. Callaghan. The gauntlet is cast for the boating duel come Sunday, and Mr. Cook and his squires are all ready to take the Callaghan crew over the course for that mug.

• • •

"Bockwinkle will not be the same man on Saturday morning. He will be a shuddering wreck; a mere shell of his former self." That is an interpretation of the mass of jumbled verbiage that issued from the lips of Lee "The Scowl" Henning when approached on their forthcoming mass meeting at the Hume Arena Friday night. He tossed a tawny mane from over one eye and scowled his best or worst scowl. "So Belleville doesn't like me, eh?" he gurgled. "Well, I'll show 'em Friday, I'll hock the Bock, and then take on all Lawson has for the rest of the card."

• • •

"That goes for me too," bunnied Dunlop the Bunny. "Lawson threw in Morgan against me last week when I had Fox looking for a foxhole and Flanagan singing 'Goin' My Way.' Now I've got Morgan alone, and what I'll do to that ex-marine, will make the Japs look like pikers." Nice li'l playmates this pair, and it looks as though the Arena will have to reinforce its rafters come Friday.

• • •

What should turn out to be a nifty softball clash takes place tonight at Point Anne where the homesters tangle with the high-flying Mountain View nine. The air force has shown surprising reversal of form in its last few games and are out to continue their suddenly acquired winning streak. They have taken SACOS and Flashes in their game-winning stride and will be out to fatten that win average.

• • •

Belleville junior softball and baseball teams established something of a precedent last night on their respective diamonds as both chalked up neat wins. At the Alemite Field, Speedy St. Louis' baseballers defeated the luckless Napanee squad by a 6-5 score while Don Barrett's Goodman youngsters behind the pitching of Don Boyle threw a monkey wrench into the winning machinery of the Mountain Squad turning them back by a 9-3 count.

Boyle was the spark-plug for the Goodman kids playing his first game with them since he was ruled ineligible to play for Point Anne. He played last night with the special permission of the OASA, Hamilton, so we are informed, as the Point Anne management still persists in refusing to release the starry hurler.

Speaking on that point, Manager Phil Loft of the Pt. Anne team informed us yesterday that the OASA had informed him that Boyle could play for his team if the Belleville Association gave him a waiver. This the teams in the Belleville League has refused to do — and there the matter stands. "Things have come to a pretty pass," Manager Loft said, when a plant employing 150 men has to supply baseball players to a city of 18,000."

Up at the Alemite Field, Bobby Bunton went right back at the pitching chore for the Kiwanis Juniors and allowed ten scattered hits. Napanee clustered hits in the sixth when trailing by a 6-1 score and sent 3 runners across the plate. They got another in the seventh to throw a scare into the Belleville kids but Bunton tightened up and averted the threat.

• • •

There were a few fireworks at the Mountain View-Goodman game with both teams yelling loud and long at the plate umpiring. The official scorer got mixed up. The kid chalking up the score on the board endeavored to end the game in the eighth innings and the squads were halfway to the dugouts when the mistake was noticed. There are rumors of protests — and it appears a good time was had by all, but the umpire.

ROYALS ROLL UP HIGH SCORE AGAINST BIRDS

Montreal Leads Int. Loop by 12½ Games; Leafs Belt Buffalo 6-5 Hitting Three Homers

By The Associated Press

The high-flying Montreal Royals are continuing to roll up box car score triumphs as they move towards their second consecutive International League pennant.

Pacing the field by 12 1-2 games, the Royals ran up 14-5 and 10-5 victories over Rochester Red Wings last night. The nightcap marked the 26th time this season the Royals had counted 10 or more runs in a single contest.

Glen Moulder and Cy Buker hurled the route for Montreal while Al Campanis, with three singles in the opener and a two-run homer in the finale paced the Royals at the plate.

Newark Bears moved back into the runner-up spot by one percentage point as they nosed out Baltimore Orioles 2-1, while Syracuse Chiefs lost a 5-4 battle to Jersey City Giants and dropped to third place.

Ken Holcombe limited the Orioles to four hits in gaining his first victory since returning to the loop. Holcombe retired the first 16 batters he faced but Al Cihocki clouted a four-bagger to end the right-hander's bid for a no-hit no-run game.

Jersey City staged a four-run ninth-inning rally to defeat the Chiefs. Jim Prendergast was cruising along behind a 3-1 advantage when the Giants tore into him and Floyd Giebell for four singles and a double to pull the contest out of the fire.

Toronto Maple Leafs belted three home runs to defeat Buffalo Bisons 6-5. Ellis Deal returned from the outfield to the mound and smacked one homer. Austin Knickerbocker and Don Richmond clouted the others. Prior to the game, the Leafs had hit only three four-baggers in their last 20 games.

Milford Opens Floodlighted Sports Diamond

Picton, July 18 — Setting an example for other small centres in Ontario, the village of Milford, with a population of less than one hundred persons, and serving a township of nine hundred persons, now has an illuminated baseball and softball diamond. This was officially opened Monday night in the presence of five hundred spectators. The lights were turned on by Carson Scott, head of the South Marysburgh Recreation Centre. Reeve Donald Thompson referred to the splendid co-operation that had been given. The eight poles and installation of the flood lights had been done without cost and many had donated time and money to make the venture possible. County Warden Earl Brummell congratulated the village and South Marysburgh township on this progressive step and believed that it was one of the first, if not the first, Ontario village to instal flood-lighting.

In addition to the softball and baseball fields, there is a double court for tennis, and it is planned to arrange for other sports on the large grounds.

In a Couny hardball league game, South Marysburgh defeated the league-leading Bloomfield team, 9 to 8. Bill Hood was the winning pitcher, while G. Platford and H. Hayden shared hurling duties for Bloomfield.

There were two girls' hardball games of two innings each. Cherry Valley defeated Milford by one run in the first game and in the second they defeated South Bay, 12-4. Rose Hood pitched for the winners and Arlie King was catcher.

In a man's softball game, Royal Street and South Bay tied 4-4 in a four-inning contest.

This recreation centre is the scene of much activity as there are county hardball league games, four men's softball teams and 4 girls' softball teams using it.

After losing the first two singles matches, Sweden's two-man Davis Cup team eliminated Yugoslavia from the European zone tennis finals yesterday at Varberg, Sweden, three games to two, to earn the right to meet the United States. The rivals will play at Forest Hills, N.Y., Aug. 16-18 in the world semi-finals, the winner to challenge Australia, cup defender, in matches scheduled for next December.

Sweden's Torsten Johansson registered the needed win yesterday when he defeated Josip Pallada of Yugoslavia by three sets in the concluding singles match.

Promoter Jack Solomons announced in London yesterday that Bruce Woodcock, British heavyweight champion, would fight Gus Lesnevich of New Jersey Sept. 17 in Harringay Arena, London, for the world light heavyweight title.

Pitcher Don Black, purchased last winter by Cleveland Indians from the Philadelphia Athletics of the American League, yesterday was optioned by the Tribe to the Milwaukee Brewers of the American Association, Indians' officials reported.

Tony Zale of Gary, Inda., world middleweight champion, and Rocky Graziano of New York yesterday signed for a title bout of 15 rounds to be staged in Yankee Stadium July 25.

An x-ray at New York yesterday showed pitcher Red Ruffing of New York Yankees suffered a broken knee-cap when struck by a baseball June 29. The star player is expected to be out for six weeks.

Hit by a foul tip in Tuesday's game at Chicago, catcher Walker Cooper of New York Giants was found to have suffered two breaks in the middle finger of his right hand. He will be out for a month.

Heavyweight champion Joe Louis was defeated yesterday at Detroit but it was at golf. Dr. Remus Robinson of Detroit eliminated Louis 3 and 2 in the semi-finals of the third annual Joe Louis golf tournament.

Inquiry Into Sinking Of Tug is Opened

St. Catharines, Ont., July 17 — (CP)— An inquiry into the sinking of the tug Dalhousie Rover in the Welland Canal at Port Weller, Ont., June 29, was started here today by Mr. Justice Keiller Mackay of the Supreme Court of Ontario.

Mr. Justice Mackay was appointed commissioner for the federal department of transport. A. J. P. Cameron of Toronto is solicitor for the department.

The Dalhousie Rover capsized after striking a marker buoy and being deflected onto a mudbank and carried six crew members to their death. Five others were rescued. The 80-foot, all-steel tug was floated last night and salvage men said they expected she will soon be put in the Port Weller drydock for inspection.

Edmonton, July 18 —(CP)— Canadian linksmen with hopes of annexing the Canadian amateur crown should keep their eye not only on the ball, but on the strong American contingent scheduled to battle over Edmonton's Mayfair Club come July 29.

That's the opinion of Edmonton's golfing cop, Henry Martell.

Henry, who has just completed his sixth consecutive successful defence of his Alberta amateur crown and who has his own sights trained on the Canadian title, says he wouldn't be surprised to find Canada's amateur crown being toted south of the line when the last ball drops in the week-long tourney Aug. 3.

Admittedly, he says, such fellows as defending champion Kenny Black of Vancouver and Toronto's Phil Farley have plenty of links ability.

But such players as Frank Stranahan, sensational Toledo, O., amateur who captured top honors at Kansas City recently beating such pros as Byron Nelson and Ben Hogan, will take a lot of beating.

But you can tell Henry isn't really too glum about Canadian chances, and particularly the chances of Mr. Martell himself following his par-shattering display last week when he again took the Alberta title, for one thing Mayfair's lengthy course requires long, accurate iron shots. And that's something he has plenty of.

Glamor Muscles: Time was when the male had exclusive rights to such things as cigarets, suits and long pants and then along came the lassies with tailored garments, slacks and chain-smoking habits.

Now lady wrestlers have invaded Alberta. Two comely muscle ladies gave a grunt and groan display at Medicine Hat last week.

Male wrestlers in Calgary heaved a sigh of relief when that city's wrestling commission turned thumbs down on a projected performance there.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

New York, July 18 — (AP) — Announcement that Princeton, the oldest football-playing school in the United States, has listed 22 grid games for four different teams next fall brings out the fact that there'll be a heck of a lot of football in 1946 . . . the Tigers likely will be stressing quantity more than quality with junior Varsity, 150-pound and freshman squads being organized when they don't even expect a top-rank Varsity team . . . but a lot of other schools where the coaches preferred to concentrate on one strong team, are coming up with "B" squads this year . . . and in case you've forgotten, there'll be two big pro leagues and a number of minors operating.

Walks are Good, too

Benie Moore, Louisiana State University coach who was quite a baseball player in the "good old days" at Carson-Newman, comes up with a recipe to prevent Ted Williams from hitting . . . "I'd knock him down every time he stood at the plate, because that's the only way to stop him from hitting those long ones." . . . Yeah, likely he'd only get two-baggers then.

Sports Before Your Eyes

Chuck Taylor, active Coalport, Pa., welterweight, has taken over the management of Bernie Miller, New York Negro, after boxing 45 rounds with him. Wonder if Chuck heard that oldie: "If you can't lick them, join them?" . . .

Tommy Hinnershitz, the auto race driver, isn't putting on the dog when his chauffeur pilots his car up to the track. He figured it was a smart move after having his license suspended for three months on a speeding charge.

Knapp Takes Orr—Orr Takes Nap; Polmanter Scores Third Round K. O. Over Howard in Arena Main Bout

Belleville Heavy No Match for Experienced Foe; Fast Flurrying Action Features One of Best Cards Offered Here to Date

By unleashing a savage two-fisted attack such as he has never displayed in the local ring this season, Belleville's George Polmanter pounded Peterborough's Grant Howard to the canvas after 37 seconds had elapsed in the third round of the scheduled five round main "go" at the Hume Arena Wednesday night.

Polmanter never looked better than he did Wednesday night. Actually, he won the fight in the second round when he dropped Howard for an "eight" count just before the bell. When the Peterborough lad got to his feet, Polmanter rushed in with a series of lefts and rights that had the visitor virtually 'out on his feet." The bell, however, saved him from further trouble.

The third round finished it. Right from the opening bell, Polmanter stalked his prey and set him up for the "kill." It came after only 37 seconds as Polmanter turned on another barrage that dropped Howard to the canvas.

The bout was Polmanter's all the way. Only in the first round did Howard look as if he might have a chance. It was a fast moving round but very little hard punching was offered. When the heavy going started in the second round, however, the visitor weakened.

Orr's Debut Spoiled

Belleville's Bill "Tiger" Orr ran into too much power in his debut when he tangled with Oshawa's "Al" Knapp in the semi-final. The Oshawa lad showed hitting power, the likes of which hasn't been seen in the local ring this semester. He went after Orr right from the opening bell and in less than ten seconds, dropped "Orr for a "nine" count.

When the local boy got to his feet again, Knapp waded right in with another flurry of stinging rights and lefts to "dump" Orr again for the finish. Referee "Jiber" Ellis started to count but, when he got to "five" he saw there was no use counting further. Orr was "out" to stay.

The "KO" came at 45 seconds of the opening round. It was too bad that Orr's debut had to be spoiled but Knapp was just too good for him. After the knockout, Orr's handlers had to carry him to his corner and work on him for quite some time before they could bring him around.

Preliminaries All Good

The preliminaries were all good and helped to make the card one of the best of the season. Belleville's Ron Mansfield and Dan Ferguson of Trenton fought to a three round draw in rather an odd bout. The Trenton lad was on the "bicycle" throughout but every once in a while, he would stop and throw punches at the pursuing Belleville battler.

There was lots of action much to the delight of the fans. These was only one knockdown during the fight and that came at the start of the middle round when Mansfield dropped Ferguson for a "four" count.

The third and final round was the best. The boys really mixed it and had the fans on their feet for the entire round.

Belleville's "Soup" Mondeville fought his way to a close three round decision over Fred Harding of Oshawa. Mondeville had Harding somewhat bewildered in the opening round as he rushed to the attack throughout. Harding came out of his shell in the second round and started to work a little better and if anything, had a slight edge on the round.

The final round was a dandy with lots of mixing. The local lad fought a real good fight and he deserves a lot of credit. To be truthful and yet take no credit away from Mondeville, Harding didn't look his usual self. His timing was away off and he didn't have his usual "drive."

Grant MacIntyre of Oshawa proved just a little too good for Belleville's Arthur Duby and earned a close decision over the local lad. The decision was not too popular with the fans and they lost no time in letting the officials know about it.

The opening round was fairly slow with the boys trying to feel each other out. The second round was a "rouser" as the boys stood "toe-to-toe" for fully 30 seconds and hammered away to bring the crowd to it's feet.

The Oshawa lad looked plenty tired in the final round and Duby showed to advantage in the closing half of the round. The fans thought the verdict should have been given to the local boy but the officials didn't see it that way. In any case, it was a real fine bout and a rematch would go well.

Cecil Anderson of Belleville was just too clever for Trenton's Harry Ayres and was awarded a well-earned decision. The Trenton lad was as game as they come but he just didn't have the stuff to take Anderson. The second round was the best. Ayres was swinging like the proverbial windmill but wasn't connecting very often. Between swings, Anderson stepped in with long left jabs to further bewilder the Trenton youngster.

Bill Anderson of Belleville and Wilf Duby of Trenton fought to a three round draw. It was a good bout altho' the styles of the two battlers didn't mix too well. Duby elected to force the fight while Andeson let Duby do the chasing and scored his points on clever counter punching.

Duby slipped to the canvas for a 'no' count twice during the middle round while Anderson was 'downed' for a 'no' count just before the final bell.

Viau Wins Via TKO

In the curtain-raiser, Lorne Vieau of Trenton had too much "steam" for Oshawa's "Bud" Henry as he earned a TKO over the Motor City lad at 55 second of the first round. It was Vieau all the way as he dumped Henry for an "eight" count early in the second round. Henry was saved by the bell in the same round when the bell rang as referee "Jiber" Ellis was tolling "five."

The Oshawa lad took a "nine' count after the third round had started out with a flurry. He got back on his feet only to be belted to the canvas again and it was at this point that Ellis figured Henry had "had it" and he raised Vieau's hand in token of victory at the 55 second mark.

Ellis Good

"Jiber" Ellis was the third man in the ring for the entire card and turned in an exceptionally fine performance. He was in complete command of the fights at all times and deserved a lot of credit for his officiating.

The next card will be staged on Wednesday, July 31st and will feature Trenton's "Jiber" Ellis and Harold Jones of Peterborough in the main event.

Officials: Referee, "Jiber" Ellis; announcer, Maurice Callaghan; judges, Bill Crawford, Bob White and Fred Parry; timekeeper, Johnny Lloyd.

(By The Canadian Press)

Falls Houcks took over second place in the senior Niagara District League at Niagara Falls last night when they broke the deadlock with Welland Atlas by a 4-1 win.

The smart pitching of young Carmen Rienzo, who restricted the defending champions to five hits and fanned 12 batters, was the highlight of the contest.

In the Inter-county Baseball League senior standing, Waterloo Tigers moved into fourth place by defeating Kitchener Panthers 6-4 at Kitchener. It was the second victory in two starts for Ken Sargent, who fanned nine opponents.

St. Catharines turned back Hamilton Consumers 10-3 at Hamilton in another Niagara District League game. Blazetich went the route for the winners and although hit hard was good when danger threatened.

At Fort Erie "Jum" Hall's nine shoved across a tally in the eighth inning to defeat Merritton Thormers 5-4 in a Niagara District Senior Baseball League contest. Red Thompson scored the winning tally when hurler Jack Nestor fired a wild pitch.

AT THE McCARTHY — The season's most spectacular romantic movie triangle features George Brent, Lucille Ball (R) and Vera Zorina who are co-starred in Universal's lavish and suspenseful comedy-drama production, "Lover Come Back," opening tomorrow at the McCarthy Theatre.

JUNIORS TAKE NAPANEE 6-5 IN CLOSE GAME

Visitors Fall Short in Strong Late-Inning Bid for Victory

Staving off a determined Napanee late innings rally, the Kiwanis Juniors baseball squad came through with a 6-5 win in a scheduled game at the Alemite Field last night.

The local kids were enjoying a 6-1 lead at the end of the fifth innings and the game appeared to be in the well-known container. But the Napanee bats blazed into sudden action in the fifth and before the Juniors had settled down to serious work, the visitors had brought the score to 6-4.

Napanee maintained the attack in the seventh scoring one run and coming within an ace of tying the game, but the Juniors warded off the threat and trotted off the field with a long-awaited victory.

Bobby Bunton again toiled on the mound for the homesters. He was touched for ten hits, five of them two-baggers by Jocko and Holmes and Murphy, but he whiffed 6 and walked the same number.

Coathup who did the hurling for the Napanee squad was also nicked for ten safeties with the Green brothers and Reeves getting doubles. He walked two and struck out three.

Kiwanis scored three runs in the third to take a commanding lead and increased this by three more in the fifth, with Napanee coming back with only a single in the third until the fifth when they exploded for three markers.

Reeves was the hit hero for the Juniors getting three for four, one of them a two-bagger. V. Green smote a mighty three-base clout and brother Bud came through with a brace of clouts. Holmes, Jocko and Switzer were the batting guns for Napanee.

AT THE CAPITOL — Alfred Drake and Janet Blair have a hectic love affair in Columbia Pictures' Coast Guard musical, "Tars and Spars," currently starring them along with Marc Platt at the Capitol Theatre. Drake is the singing sensation from the stage hit, "Oklahoma!" while Janet Blair has lent her charm, her voice and her dancing to many a hit film. On the same program Frank Sinatra in the short "The House I Live In", also Buster Crabbe in "Stage Coach Outlaws."

GOODMANS' TRIM MT. VIEW 9-5 BEHIND BOYLE

The Goodman Juniors scored a 9-5 upset over Mountain View Bombers in a thrilling game at the Fair Grounds last night.

Don Boyle pitched the game for the Juniors and allowed only eight hits, while Welstead served them up for the Bombers and gave the Goodmans fourteen hits. Boyle struck out six and Welstead only fanned two, the former putting forth a great show in his first performance on the mound for the Juniors.

The first inning proved scoreless, but in the second the Juniors tallied one and Mountain View came back with three. In the third inning the arguments started when Rollins got a dribbling hit and made second on a series of errors while Moher scored. Mountain View claimed that the ball hit the bat twice, so Charlie Bawden overruled, Rollins was called out and Moher was sent back to first base.

From then on until the sixth inning, the game was scoreless, but in the first of the seventh the Juniors scored three runs to take the lead. Then, in the first of the eighth, they hit Welstead's deliveries five times and crossed the plate for the same number of runs to make the score 9-3. In the last half of the eighth the Bombers got two more runs on three hits. The ninth inning was scoreless.

Millar, third basemen for the Bombers, accounted for most of the errors of the ball game and in this way advanced runners to eventually score against his team.

A three-base hit by Green in the eighth inning looked like another rally for the Juniors but Haggis fanned to leave him on third base.

The teams:

Juniors—H. Wardhaugh, 3d.; Moher, s.s.; Rollins, 2d.; Green, c; Haggis, lf; Donovan, rf; Caulkin, rf; D. Adams, 1b; Boyle, p.

Mountain View—White, rf; Murray, c; McCartney, ss.; McKell, 2d; Miller 3d; Welstead, p.; Burnett, lf; Lambly, cf; Allan, 1st; Green, Parker.

Umpires: Pointer, plate; Bawden, bases.

CHAPTER 19

"You're going to tell her?" Annette's sense of the dramatic was aroused.

"Not yet."

They smiled at each other. Camilla said, "I'm very grateful to you for telling me this. I've known Mark a long time and... and loved him a long time. I couldn't bear to see him make such a dreadful mistake."

Annette folded her hands. "But Iris is a fascinating girl. She isn't humble. She's very courageous and proud. One can't ignore those things about her."

Their hostess came up to the table. "Camilla, must you go? Can't you play another hand?"

And Camilla answered wisely. "I think I've played my hand, my dear."

Iris could scarcely work for thinking of her mother in New York with Eve. Tommy's weather-beaten boyish face was grave when he came to his meals. Two days had passed and Selina had neither wired nor written.

Iris—met Mary North in a tea shop one day for lunch and over their salads Iris told her of the woman who had been with Mark.

"That," said Mary, diminuitive and beautifully dressed, "could be no one but Camilla Winters."

"She made me feel dull and shabby," said Iris who looked anything but dull and shabby. "She looked wise and beautiful as if she's been everywhere and can talk about anything—as if she's never done an ungracious thing in her life."

Mary laughed her childish little-girl laugh.

"Appearances are deceiving, darling. Camilla does look like a goddess who suddenly descended in our midst but she's cold and calculating to women and irresistible to men. Her odd spectacular clothes are just a part of the woman's game."

"But I was breathless with admiration of her," said Iris innocently.

Mary folded her small hands and said, "The story of Camilla that every one knows is that she practically pursued Mark. Men don't love women who deliberately but themselves in their way She loves him, "said Mary, her blue eyes admiring Iris's soft thick lashes and the fresh glow of her skin," with her claws sharpened. Women tolerate her because they don't want her for an enemy."

"All of which puts me in a nice spot."

"Don't worry, darling. Camilla would give her diamond bracelets to be you—with all your difficulties."

"But why?" Iris laughed.

"Because, dear infant, Mark is in love with you. He may even be in love with your difficult family because obviously to love you one must love your family."

"All this talk about Mark while I...."

"And all your thoughts of him. Don't deny it, Iris. Don't turn away from it. You see, dear, I know. I've never forgiven myself for refusing to marry Julian the first day he asked me. We lost time we could never make up. I could have been married to him eight years instead of five. But we didn't know we had so little time to be together."

"And won't there ever be anyone else, Mary?"

"When I'm old and lonely, and parties bore me, I may marry a nice man. Julian taught me how perfect marriage can be. He told me that—that day one could not live with a memory. I can't talk any more about it, dear. But don't throw away the greatest experience of your life."

"Do you think Mark and I...."

"It was inevitable, Iris. I believe in things like that, crazy as they sound." She looked down at the diamond studded little watch. "We had a delightful talk and lunch. Now I've got to go for a fitting.

"More elegant gowns," said Iris, smiling.

"I need elegant gowns, child. You don't. With your hair and eyes and figure you could wear sackcloth and get more attention than I'll ever get. Iris, look! Camilla is coming now."

Theirs were not the only eyes that followed the elegant figure to a corner table. Camilla's dark eyes arrogantly swept the crowded tea room. Mary smiled at her and turned to Iris. "She's sharpening her claws, darling. Let's dash."

Sunday was a warm sunny day. after straightening the house Iris went to the back yard to the old hammock stretched invitingly between two large shade trees. Relaxed, her hair tumbled about her face, she closed her eyes — as if by closing them she were shutting out not only the sun but—the truth. Overriding all the ugly truths that haunted her came the sweet illusion of loving Mark, the memory of strong brown hands on her shoulders; and the stern mouth which contradicted his eyes. "In my life that has been so imperfect this one thing had been perfect. If anything should shake my confidence in him, I should never believe in anything again. Let Camilla sharpen her claws. She can't touch or tarnish this."

Iris did not hear the car door slam nor the heavy hurrying footsteps coming up the path.

"Iris!"

Selina was standing over her. Selina had come back. And she was alone.

Iris blinked in the sunlight like a child awakening from a pleasant dream and reluctantly returned her mind to reality. She smiled at her stepmother but Mrs. Wade did not return the affectionate greeting. Her mouth set, her arms folded, she stood over Iris and said, "Come into the house. Is Tommy working?"

"He went in early."

"Did you pack his lunch?"

"Of course." (Tommy had said, "Your lunches are better than Mother's")

In the living room the furniture and wall-paper looked duller than usual in the sun streaming across it. Iris's yellow sweater was the only touch of color and brightness in the drab room.

Selina took off her light coat and sank wearily in a chair. Iris stood over her, looking like a slim young boy waiting to obey a command.

"What Martha wrote was true" said Mrs. Wade indignantly. "Eve's been wasting her time and her money. When I got there half a dozen people were having a party and I cleaned them out in a hurry. Such carryings-on! And I told her she either had to study and behave herself or get a job home and forget about singing." Her voice broke. "I hardly knew my own child with her eyelids painted blue and her mouth.."

"And did she promise to behave?" Iris's mouth had a hint of a smile.

"Yes. I moved her into a room with a nice respectable family and I went to see one of the best teachers in New York. He said her voice is beautiful. You should have heard him rave about it. I guess," she continued placidly, "what she did was natural. But as soon as I got her straight and settled I came right back. Has anything happened here?"

Iris shook her head. "No." And she was thinking, "Camilla Winters, Mother—you two should meet."

"I guess that boy you're engaged to has been here every minute."

"He hasn't been here for two years."

"I don't want him here. I won't have him here! I want that understood."

Iris said, "This is your home."

"And I've come to another decision, too. When Eve goes abroad, I'm going with her. I prefer that to being turned out without a home. When you marry this clerk of yours, do you suppose I can live on Tommy's salary?"

"I wasn't going to desert you. And what about Tommy?"

"He can shift for himself. Why should I spend my few remaining years cooking and working for children who are ungrateful? You and Tommy are allied against me." Her eyes flashed at Iris. "You'll remember all I've told you when you're married to a poor boy, living in small furnished rooms, and wondering where the next meal is coming from! You'll remember! You'll want to hide your face from people like Mary and Mark."

Turning, Iris went upstairs to the small desk in her bedroom. "Mother is back safely," she wrote to Eve in her steady hand. "Freedom is likely to breed unruliness at first dear. One doesn't know quite what to do with it, although never having had it myself, I don't know very much about it."

When the telephone rang on the little night table next to her bed, she went toward it reluctantly. Probably Joel, saying, "Meet me somewhere tonight." Joel—still swaggering and boasting.

It was not Joel but Mark who said, "Iris," as if he loved the name. She could not speak but suddenly her heart was in her eyes as she sat on the bed against small lacy pillows and gripped the phone tightly. And outside, thought Iris, the sun was shining just a little brighter. Mark, you call and the world stands still for me.

"Hello, Mark."

"Have you gone into seclusion? Can you hear me, Iris?"

"There seems to be a great deal of noise where you are."

He laughed. "The country club locker room. They're arguing about their golf scores. And where are you, Iris?"

"In a sea of pillows."

"That's not difficult to visualize. Iris, there's a restaurant or tea room or whatever one calls it just outside Washington. The music is good, the food better, and," he laughed again deeply, "there will probably be a moon on the Potomac tonight. What do you say to that?"

"It sounds—enchanting."

"Splendid. I'll call for you at seven. No later."

It was two o'clock then. Her thoughts turned to how long — this wavering between Mark and Joel could continue—then they dissolved into a dreamless sleep. Iris slept until after five, awakening in a room blue in early twilight.

Moonlight on the Potomac, she kept thinking, and Mark's eyes following her. She snatched precious moments to cherish in time to come in loneliness, is disillusion or whatever awaited her.

Gravely she looked at the solitaire in its satin lined cases, then put it away. No not tonight. Don't think of it tonight. Like a man who has only a few hours to live.. In the morning everything would be the same again.

She dressed with care, putting on a dark frock with a short silk coat and brushed her dark curls high, scolding the tremulous happiness in her eyes. Nothing had ever been like this! Not even the first weeks she had known Joel. A child in love with love she had been, a child chilled by an unhappy home who had responded heart and soul to the first boy who had kissed her. After that she had been a little afraid of him, and now fear was nothing but pity.

But this—no fear, no pity, but profound tenderness and a deep emotion that made seemingly great things small in comparison with it and made all the world mellow. And this made women follow men in strange far-off places, made them endure and bear. It could not be measured, and often it was close to tears.

(To be continued)

Says It's Great To Be Rid Of Stomach Troubles After Years of Suffering

Praises Syntone for Giving Relief from Gas Pains, Sour Stomach and Indigestion; Also Free of Backache and Sleeps Better.

Mr. C. Dickens, 33 Bay Street south, Hamilton, Ontario, is glad to pass his experience along to others, because he knows what it means to get relief from stomach troubles that spoiled his appetite, made life miserable for many years and brought on suffering from backache, sleepless nights and tired feeling. Here is Mr. Dickens' experience as reported only a few days ago:

"For several years I suffered with stomach troubles. No matter how careful I was of what I ate, I was subject to indigestion and belching up of hot, sour liquids after my meals. I would get awful gas pains and a feeling of pressure in my stomach that gave me a full, heavy sensation and shortness of breath. I had a lame, aching back and I often wasn't able to get my proper sleep at night, so I usually felt tired from the time I got up in the mornings.

"I tried so many different things without getting any benefit that I was pretty well discouraged with everything, but when I read about Syntona helping other people, I decided to get some. I'm certainly glad I did, because this medicine has proved different from anything I ever took before. My food is digesting well now and I am free of all that gas, sourness and distress in my stomach. My appetite has come back, so I enjoy my meals once more.

"Also I am rid of backache and I am able to get a better night's sleep, with the result that I feel much better in the mornings. I have more energy to carry me through the day's work. It's certainly great to be rid of all that suffering after so many years."

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST. Find out how it can help you, too.

STRIKE ENDANGERS FRUIT CROP

Hamilton, July 18 —(CP)— An already serious shortage of fruit baskets to handle this year's bumper crop of peaches and grapes has been made "critical" by the shutdown at the Steel Company of Canada, cutting off the necessary supply of wire for baskets, hampers and covers.

Roy Farrell of the Farrell Basket Factory, Grimsby, said two weeks is "the limit that any of the basket factories can keep running . . . and there will undoubtedly be a terrific shortage of baskets."

MACKENZIE'S COLUMN

The King Wields Much Power Thru People's Affection

By DEWITT MacKENZIE
(A.P. Foreign Affairs Analyst)

For an outsider reared in the understanding that England's constitutional monarch has no governmental authority in his own right, there's an odd ring to the current positions by British housewives to their King to repeal the bread rationing which is scheduled to become effective on Sunday.

Of course King George can't reverse his government's decision to ration bread and the indignant housewives are well aware of that fact. Why then are such petitions addressed to him?

Well, tradition had something to do with it — tradition which dates to the days when kings ruled by divine right and were lords of all they surveyed. However, it strikes me that the real reason lies in the fact that these days the monarch has no governmental powers but is completely detached from the political arena.

Because he is wholly outside politics, although devoting his life to the people, he is held in the deepest respect and affection by his subjects. They feel that he is one of the men upon whom they can bank without reserve. And so, because of the unique position which he holds, an appeal addressed to him, even though he never deals with it, attracts public attention.

However, that isn't the whole story. Actually, and the constitution notwithstanding, the King of England is a powerful individual, and the ministers of government pay much deference to his wishes. The reasons are (1) the high regard in which his subjects hold him, and (2) the fact that the direct heir to the throne is trained intensively from birth for his or her great responsibility.

George's grandfather took a lively hand in governmental affairs at times, and the next in line, George V, was a chip off the old block in that respect. It was during the countrywide general strike of 1926, if memory serves me right, that George V sent for the Home Secretary when the situation was beginning to look ugly and told the harassed minister: "I will not have my people manhandled." And that was that.

Nothing like that is likely to happen with the present king, but I'll bet a bright new penny that so long as Britain has a king, just so long will the government pay him deference and grant his wishes where they can.

Says Kamikaze Fliers Pilot Planes In Fr. Indo China

By ROBERT N. COOL

New York, July 18 — (AP) — Japanese kamikaze fliers who did not get a chance to blast themselves into Shinto Heaven against Allied warships have been spending the post-war months piloting British army personnel in French Indo-China, says Hassolt Davis, author and explorer, who has just returned from the Far East.

Davis, Boston-born veteran of the Free French army, campaigned with British and French forces against the Viet Minh, Indonesian Independent Movement, before a peace treaty was signed last Mar. 5th.

At that time, he said, "big and tough and surly" ex-kamikazes were employed extensively in ferrying British and French troops into the interior for operations against "Japanese-led bandits" associated with the Indo-China nationalists. He believed the Japanese suicide pilots are still helping disarm approximately 7,000 Japanese who he said continue to aid Indo-China bandits in the back country.

"The kamikazes are good pilots. I rode with them on three long flights without any suggestion of trouble," said Davis in his trophy-lined flat. Still in the uniform of the French army, which he joined in Africa early in the war, the 39-year-old author of "Half past When" and other works of exploration and adventure was about to leave for Maine to complete a New York tour on his Far East experiences.

"Most of the Japanese prisoners in Indo-China are servile little chaps," he said. "But the kamikaze pilots are big — some of them about six feet — and they're arrogant. But the British pay them good money for flying their planes on non-military operations."

THREE QUAKES AT LEAST RECORDED

New York July 18 (AP)— A series of at least three earthquakes, described as quite severe, was recorded today on the semismograuh at Fordham University. Rev. Joseph J. Lynch(semismologist ,said the shocks originated approximately 2,600 miles from New York in an undetermined direction.

NAMED IN SPY REPORT

W. M. Pappin, who was named in the royal commission report on espionage, denied that he had any connection with the issuance of a passport.

HOGS

Toronto, July 18 (CP) — Grade A, dressed, bacon hogs, were unchanged at Hull $20.75 delivered, in market reporting early today, Stratford reported prices there unsettled with Grade A quoted to farmers $20.15, to truckers $20.65, down 65 cents cwt. from previous settled prices there.

Brantford reported quotations unchanged $20.40 plus transportation.

GREEK BREAD RATION

Athens, July 18 —(AP)— The Greek bread ration will be increased from eighgt to 10 ounces daily per person effective Aug. 1, the supply ministry announced today. The announcement said the increase was made possible by the excellent Greek wheat crop, which this year equals pre-war production.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE

Toronto, July 18 —(CP)— The gold and the Western oil stocks had minor index gains on the stock exchange at mid-day and the base metals and industrials were lower. Trading slackened to a jog and the volume was only 416,000 shares for the first three hours.

The market opened with Sherritt under moderate selling pressure and the price slipped back to 2.30. At early afternoon it was around 2.35 for a net loss of 20 cents. Labrador dropped 20 cents and Pend Oreille weakened 10.

The industrials showed weakness in the utility, steel and miscellaneous groups. Papers and foods showed strength.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

New York, July 18 — (AP) — Selective recovery tendencies continued in today's stock market although many leaders did little or nothing.

Dealings were quiet from the start but activity in low-quoted issues aided volume. Gains of fractions to a point or more predominated near the fourth hour.

On the exchange at noon Canadian Pacific at 18 7/8, International Nickel at 37 1/4 and Hiram Walker at 140 were unchanged.

King's Prize Of 50 Guineas For Young Exhibitor

Toronto, July 18 —(CP)— Agriculture Minister Kennedy of Ontario yesterday announced that the King's prize of 50 guineas will be awarded at the 1945 Royal Winter Fair to the exhibitor of the champion baby beef steer or grade heifer owned and exhibited by a qualified member of a boys' and girls' baby beef calf club in Ontario.

The minister said the prize, which has a cash value of about $250, is being awarded in this class with the objective of encouraging calf club members to take an interest in the breeding and feeding of higher quality stock.

Exhibits entered for the major prize may not be shown in any other classes at the fair and the exhibitors must have fed, cared for and fitted the calves themselves, the announcement said.

The prize had its beginning in 1860 when the late King Edward VII, then Prince of Wales, gave the board of agriculture and arts for Upper Canada $800 for prize money, to be applied as it wished. The board invested the money and the income since has furnished prizes.

Bewildered survivors of an outing tragedy, Billy, age one-and-a-half, and John, age four, are shown in a hospital crib. Their parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Canada, of San Francisco, Calif., ate poisoned mussels and are dying. The children weren't hungry and forwent the mussel stew and their lives were spared.

Traces American Spiritual Culture To Roosevelt

London, July 18 —(CP)— Ilya Ehrenburg, Russian journalist, declared today in a broadcast article that the United States' spiritual culture is "only just beginning." He said it would become "great and independent."

The Moscow radio broadcast another in a series of articles in the government newspaper Izvestia by Ehrenburg based on his recent visit to Canada and the United States.

Ehrenburg attributed the spiritual culture development to Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

"Thoughtful people capable of estimating the progress of history rallied around Roosevelt," he wrote. "Even if they have been removed or have resigned, the late President's activities have not disappeared without a trace . . . an American intelligentsia has arisen. It is still weak and diffident. It is as though it were hiding from the neon lights and juke boxes, from the church preachers with their allusions to commercial firms and from the advertisements with Biblical quotations . . .

"But among that intelligentsia one finds more and more good people who understand that salvation does not lie in running away nor isolation but in raising the spiritual level of the average American to the technical civilization which accompanies him from the maternity home to the crematorium."

London Press Does Not Shun Investigation

London, July 18 (CP)— London newspaper yesterday expressed an editorial welcome toward a proposed government inquiry into ownership of the British press and the extent of financial and advertising influence on its presentation of the news.

Herbert Morrison, Lord President of the Council told the House of Commons Tuesday in a debate on the BBC that the government had decided an inquiry into the press was "worth consideration."

"The press has neither the right nor reason to shun dispassionate inquiry," said the Times, Indepndent, in its leading editorial. It warned, however, that it would be difficult to frame any remedial legislation without striking "at a primary liberty of the people to read what they like."

The Daily Mail, Conservative, said the suggestion of an inquiry in itself was "perfectly harmless" but declared it was symptomatic of "an antagonism to free speech."

The National Union of Journalists at its convention in Liverpool in April urged an investigation into the ownership, control and financing of British newspapers.

TURKS TO GET A REAL TEST IN DEMOCRACY

Big Political Campaign to End With Election Scheduled for July 21

By EDWIN B. GREENWALD

Istanbul (AP)—A full-blown political fight is raging in Turkey, a harbinger that this old land which threw aside her sultans two decades ago is coming of age democratically.

While there were infrequent inter-party battles in Turkey's earlier bloody and fantastic history, opposition was crushed promptly. But this time the opposition apparently is here to stay, and the citizens are getting their first look at how a real campaign, with all its name-calling and mud-slinging, operates.

They have been startled by some of this name-calling, particularly that directed against President Ismet Inonu himself, a personage who heretofore was criticized only in guarded whispers.

The election is scheduled for July 21. Two profoundly important decisions form the background of this development in self-government. First was abolition of all bans against any political group other than the reigning Republican Peoples party; second was a ruling by the court of appeals reversing the conviction of four newspaper writers sentenced to prison for "offending the dignity" of the government.

While Turkey proclaimed herself a republic after overthrow of the decadent Ottoman empire in the revolution 23 years ago, there were many who scoffed at the designation and contended that no sultan ever held a firmer grip on his people than did iron-man Ataturk and his successor, Inonu.

Public meetings were banned. Newspapers were suspended for criticisms the government disliked. The political police—as efficient as any in the world—had little idle time.

Public Opinion Felt

While government supporters said the lowering of the ban last December against political parties was a natural evolution in a growing democracy, opponents contend it was a step made necessary by internal pressure and external frowns. Immediately after the ban was eliminated, four parties sprang up but of these only the Democrat party headed by the old revolutionary and one-time prime minister Colal Bayar assumed stature sufficient really to frighten the Inonu government.

Bayar, long a hard-boiled critic of Inonu and his government, said he would refrain from participating in the national election on grounds that Inonu broke his pledge to the nation not to hold elections until the press and police laws had been eliminated.

Inonu replied that Bayar's withdrawal from the elections was not unlike tactics used by parties in certain lands where failure to participate was designed to "accuse the government in the eyes of other states."

But no effort was made to stem the growing political battle. The official paper Ulus announced that newspapers could support or condemn any party they wished without fear of reprisals.

Then, in the heat of the growing campaign, the court of appeals handed down what governmental students consider one of the most important decisions in the history of the republic. It held that four newspaper writers, which wrecked two newspaper plants, should be released from jail and given new trials.

Turkey's adolescence in self-rule appears to be about over.

DILIGENTI QUINTS OF BUENOS AIRES THREE YEARS OLD

Scientific Feeding and Training Ensures Good Health for South America's Famous Five

Buenos Aires, July 18 (CP) — The five little Diligentis, one of the two sets of quintuplets in the world celebrated their third birthday July 15 quietly.

The father, Franco Diligenti, said they would have a birthday party like any other children but "nothing special."

The quints received one present in advance — an autographed picture of the Dionne quintuplets sent them from Canada a few weeks ago. And some new toys, but not too many, because they share them and one new one amounts to five new ones.

The birthday cake, however, was a monumental affair. It had a centre tower three layers high with five smaller individual cakes arranged around it in a sort of scalloped formation. Each of the individual cakes had its own three candles and the name of the owner: Franco, Jr., Maria, Fernanda, Carlos, Alberto, Maria Esther and Maria Christina.

This was the design worked out for their second birthday. It gives each one his own set of candles to blow out—not that they had much success along that line last year. Diligenti hopes it will be better this time.

The neighbors don't pay much attention to the quints, whose birth was kept secret for eight months. Only on Sundays do people stop to look at the children playing in their garden, and Diligenti says they are people from outside the neighborhood.

You walk up to the new Diligenti house along quiet, tree-shaded streets in a suburb where many English and North American families live. The clerk in a corner store, in reply to a question about them, hardly looks up from the counter as he gestures and says:

"That's where they live —right across the street. Probably they are in the yard now."

And so they are—all five of them clustering around a butterfly on the graveled walk of their garden, with two uniformed maids looking on. Three girls in pink coats and the two boys in tan ones. All the same size now, but not looking very much alike.

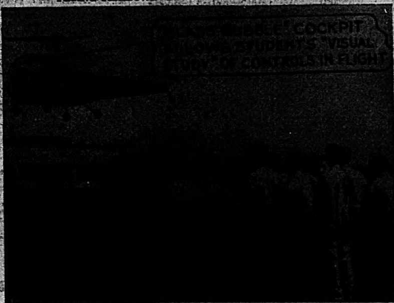
A six-foot fence of steel palings surrounds the acre of flowers and grass in front of the new house. But there is plenty of space to look through — not that many people do. Children coming home from school don't glance in; an older woman does, and waves at the quints who wave back. The gates are unlocked and one of them is not even closed.

The children are kept to themselves and seldom go away from the house. They have no friends in the neighborhood and are not encouraged to go near the fence while other children are passing. As a result of this care and a rigid regimen of injections — "calcium and vitamins and things like that" — so far they have escaped all children's diseases. "Haven't been sick for a day in two years,' the father said proudly.

There is a special staff of five servants who do nothing but care for the quints; a physical training teacher, a French governess, a trained nurse and two maids. The children eat just about any food they like, and, naturally enough prefer dessert to potatoes.

Their day starts around 8 a.m. when they wake up. They get a few minutes of scientific exercise "and love it,' then breakfast. Play time is until lunch, then there is a nap from 1 to 4. Bedtime comes reluctantly, about 8 or 8.30. Diligenti, who was planning a trip to the United States before the quints were born, has given up the idea now. "My wife and I are content here at home," he said proudly.

"FLYING FISHBOWL" BOON TO HELICOPTER STUDENTS



The glass bubble cockpit of this Bell helicopter gives students on the ground an excellent view of the use of the controls as the craft hovers at a low altitude. This photo was made at the first helicopter flight training school, operated by Bell Aircraft Corp. at Niagara Falls, N.Y., which is limited to commercially licensed, fixed-wing airplane pilots. The student does a goodly share of his first day flying within 25 feet of the take-off spot.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking the 2nd half of his first cigar, and ma said, Really, William, I mean really, I've always been more or less of a leftist liberal in comparison with a lot of the people I know. I mean up to the present I've taken the stand that there's no such thing as too much freedom and that everybody should be a law to themselves as long as they dont actually break the law, if you know what I mean, she said.

You mean as long as they dont fall down and fracture themselves, pop said, and ma said, In werds of a nutshell I'm beginning to think that people are less fit to govern themselves than they seem to think, and a reasonabe amount of domineering from higher authorities might be just what we need. I mean to a certain limited extent, she said.

You wouldn't mind having a dictater telling you what to do, as long as he didn't actually tell you when to do it, is that it? pop said, and ma said, Well, something like that. I mean capitol and labor will both overstep the common bounds if they're given too much power, and I've had a glowing example of it in this very house. The last gas bill was rediculisly high, and the gas company certainly represents capitol if anybody does. Well, the man came around to read the gas meter today, and he surely represents labor in his ignorant way, and when I complained about the size of the last bill he insisted that the meter is in perfect adjustment, and when I told him in a nice way that I doubted it very much, he impudently and arrogantly asked me if I was trying to teetch him his bizzness. So there you have a perfect combined example of what happens to both capitol and labor when they are left to their own sweet wills, and that's why I'm in favor of a little mild dictatership, she said.

Two Sentenced for Robbery With Violence

Kitchener, July 18 (CP)—Fred James Morgan, 23, Galt and Joseph Wendel Kempel, 19, Kitchener were sentenced yesterday to three years in Kingston penitentiary for robbery with violence. A third youth, Frank Melynchuk, 18, Waterloo, also pleaded guilty but was given suspended sentence because he had no previous record.

The robbery took place last January when the three youths met Rudolph Mofkalik of Kitchener in a pool room, lured him by taxi to a lonely spot in the country and relieved him of $2 after a roadside fight. During the fight, Melynchuk remained in the taxi.

Rehearse Routines In Ruined Church

London (CP)—A blitzed church rang to the top of dancing shoes and the thud of a not too tuneful piano.

Blond hair piled high, bare legs blue from cold, 24 little "Tiller Girls" in skimpy black practice panties and white blouses, rehearsed a dance number for a new musical show.

John Tiller chorus girls were famous before the war at Paris night spots like the Folies Bergeres, where the singing girls were French but the rows of long-legged, beautifully trained precision dancers were usually "English misses" from the school across the Channel. Tiller girls went to the United States, toured the Riviera and danced in floor shows in South Amercia. When war came, the troupes had to stay in Britain.

"We had girls playing right through the London blitz," said Miss Doris Alloway, kind-faced director of the school. "But we were very lucky."

"A bomb fell on a theatre while one troupe of girls was dancing at Bristol. And of course we've had them here. But we never had a girl killed during the whole war."

The National Service System took many Tiller girls away into the services and industry just when they reached their most useful age from the point of view of the school—18 to 22.

"Married Tiller girls tried to help us out," explained Miss Doris. "But if they were of call-up age they had to get a Ministry of Labor permit to dance."

Began in Manchester

When John Tiller began his famous dancing school in Manchester in 1890, he developed with his troupes of chorus girls a type of highly trained team dancing never before seen on the stage but soon widely copied, especially in America.

But the Tiller girls were famous not only for their dancing. "Les girls Anglaises" as the French called them, had a reputation for virtue, and the strict discipline of Mr. and Mrs. Tiller left some of the Latin countries gasping.

This reputation became a commercial asset much prized still by the old staff members, now directing the school as a private limited company, according to John Tiller's wishes expressed before he died in 1925. The school is still being run in the same personal way as in the days when Mrs. Tiller helped the girls do their laundry and advised them on love affairs.

All the girls want to go abroad. "We've never been able to go abroad since we grew up," said one. "That's what we want more than anything. To get to France again, like the girls used to before the war. Or America. Or anywhere."

"We've had offers from managers in Paris," said Miss Doris. "But so far we've turned them down. It doesn't seem to us the Continent is the right place for young girls just now. We can't tell what the food will be like or for accommodations.

"But we hope we'll soon have girls again at the Folies Bergeres and other famous French halls."

Connie Mack Honored

Philadelphia, July 18 —(AP)— Connie Mack, 83-year-old owner of the last-place Philadelphia Athletics, today will receive the 1946 Sportsmanship Award of Lions International, holding its annual convention here.

Convention officials said the award is "in recognition of all of Mr. Mack's past achievements."

YOU'D NEVER BELIEVE SHE IS 48 . . . .

She's one of the peppiest, happiest-spirited women you ever saw. At the time when most women think life is passing them by—she's right in the midst of things—always ready to go places and do things . . . as popular with the men as girls half her age. To look at her you would never believe she was a day over 32.

How does she do it? She gives the credit to Dr. Williams Pink Pills . . . for well she knows how important it is to have plenty of rich, red blood during those years when so many women are "pulled down" in health by bodily changes.

If you feel "always tired", if you look pale and dragged out, if you are suffering from a feeling of nervous exhaustion, are jittery and irritable, you may be paying the price of poor blood make-up. Don't wait—start Dr. Williams Pink Pills today. They contain an easily assimilable form of iron—fortified with a generous amount of Vitamin B_1—and are wonderfully effective in helping to build the rich, red blood so necessary to vigor and energy. 9 Persons Killed, Gas Main Explodes At Onset, Mass.

Workman Digging in Cellar Punctured Main, Report

Onset, Mass., July 19 — (AP)—Nine persons were dead and 25 others were in hospital today, all victims of a violent gas explosion that blasted four buildings into splinters in the centre of this Buzzard's Bay village.

The blockbuster-like explosion rocked the entire village about noon yesterday, when, the State Fire Marshal's Office said, a gas main was punctured by a workman digging in a cellar.

Four two-storey wooden buildings were flattened, burying some of the victims beneath shattered debris while scores of others were cut by flying glass or suffered from shock. All the dead were Massachusetts residents.

Lieut. John E. Bassett, United States Army, who was within 100 yards of the blast, said, "It was like a blockbuster." He reported a fire that broke out was quickly extinguished by firemen preventing possibly more casualties.

The last body was taken from the wreckage about nine hours after the blast.

Eyewitnesses reported some victims were blown bodily from the buildings. Concussion tossed plates and utensils to the ceiling in a restaurant 250 feet from the scene.

U.S. Tourists Alarm Family From Blazing Home

Orillia, Ont., July 19 — (CP) — Seven United States tourists, all from Pittsburgh, today were credited with saving the lives of 7 persons who fled in night attire from a blazing ten-room frame home near here.

The tourists were motoring past when they saw the flames.

"The whole back kitchen was blazing when we drove up the laneway to see if there was anything we could do to help," said Harry Rourke of Pittsburgh. "There was nobody in sight and we thought there was nobody home. I smashed the dining room window and yelled 'fire' several times; then I heard footsteps upstairs and other people yelling. Soon they came running out the door in their night clothes. It wasn't long after that the whole house was on fire."

The other tourists were Mrs. Rourke; her daughters Joan and Marion; and Mr. and Mrs. James Marison and their daughter Katherine.

The persons who fled the fire were Mrs. Joseph Brodie; her children, Steve, 17; Alma, 14; Miriam, seven, and David, six; and Mr. and Mrs. William Thomas of (267 Hibernia Street) Stratford, visitors at the Brodie home.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas said they were awakened by the shouting of Rourke and Marison. They escaped by climbing out the window of their ground-floor bedroom.

PLAN NEW C.N.E. GRANDSTAND

Toronto, July 19 (CP)—Plans for a new Canadian National Exhibition grandstand which will seat 25,100 persons and cost $1,000,000 were approved yesterday by the Board of Control at a meeting with the C.N.E. Board of Directors. The new stand is to replace one which burned some months ago.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, July 19 —(CP)—Synopsis at 7:30 a.m.: Hot weather invaded Ontario Thursday with maximum temperatures hovering near 90. This warm air covers Southern Ontario, the Maritimes and Eastern United States, and maximum temperatures in the Central States climbed to 100 or over in many localities. A cooler air mass which has pushed over the rockies from the Pacific covers the western half of the continent and scattered thunderstorms are occurring along its leading edge which extends from Northern Ontario to Texas. This colder air is expected to reach Southern Ontario Saturday, bringing a drop in temperature and humidity for Sunday.

Finger Prints May Play Role In Degnan Probe

Chicago, July 19 — (AP)—Finger prints found in Suzanne Degnan's bedroom after she was kidnapped and killed last Jan. 7 may play an important role in the police investigation of William Heirens' connection with the crime, Chief of Detectives Walter Storms said today.

"We have been working on these finger prints for several months," Storms said, "and while we expect a positive report very shortly, it can not yet be stated definitely whether the prints are those of Heirens, Suzanne or members of the Degnan family."

Police and the Federal Bureau of Investigation have said prints found on the $20,000 ransom note left in the bedroom matched in several points to prints of Heirens, the 17-year-old University of Chicago student.

Meanwhile, lawyers for Heirens and the prosecution were busy preparing their cases for a possible trial of the young student. These plans proceeded despite reported negotiations between the state and defence counsel which would result in the state recommending a life sentence instead of the death penalty for Heirens in exchange for a formal written confession of the Degnan crime.

The Chicago Sun said that State's Attorney William J. Tuohy will attempt to obtain a written confession from Heirens next Monday or Tuesday, not only of the kidnap-killing of Suzanne but also of the slaying of Frances Brown, 33, and Mrs. Josephine Ross, 43-year-old widow.

Ontario Plane To Spray B.C. Forest

Toronto, July 19 — (CP) —Ontario government officials said today a giant Canso aircraft owned by the Department of Lands and Forests is en route to British Columbia to spray forests which are being ravaged by the hemlock looper. The outbreak in B.C. has been described as "the most critical insect plague in a generation."

The Canso was purchased by the Ontario Department recently and was used in combating spruce budworm in this province. It has just completed an aerial survey in the Patricia district of Northern Ontario and was to have been used in a survey of the Albany River watershed. But the urgency of a request for help from B.C. led to the order to send the aircraft west.

Explosion of 100-Pound Magnesium Bomb Startles Bikini Task Force

By ELTON C. FAY

Aboard U.S.S. Mt. McKinley, July 19 (AP)—The premature explosion of an oversized photographic flash bomb startled the crossroads task force today during its dress rehearsal for the underwater atomic bomb explosion on July 25—and exposed an operational secret.

In explaining why a 100-pound magnesium flare went off 51 minutes before the schedule time, Vce-Admiral W. H. P. Blandy had to reveal that a dummy, non-explosive atomic depth charge was planted underneath the guinea pig fleet for practice purposes.

The dummy bomb was suspended from the vessel to be used for the real explosive, and was fired by a complicated trigger mechanism involving radio impulses from a distant ship and complicated time-clock devices, all designed to guarantee a 100 per cent safeguard against premature detonation of the real bomb.

The practice magnesium bomb mounted on a floating drydock, one of the target ships, was fired by a comparatively crude radio circuit and, as it developed, went off far too early because of some accidental cause not known for the moment. It merely emitted a radio "blip" sound without an explosive charge.

Admiral Blandy declared the accidental firing of the flare "simply cannot happen to the atomic bomb." Precautions are so elaborate, he said, "not even lightning" could set it off before all hands are miles away in safety.

A task force spokesman said no personnel was anywhere near the area of the flash bomb, the blast of which was minor because it was designed chiefly for illumination.

C.C.F. WANT-OF-CONFIDENCE MOVE DEFEATED 135-37

Mr. Ilsley Replies To Opposition Demands For Reductions In Expenditures

By GEORGE KITCHEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, July 19 (CP)— The Commons last night voted 135-37 against a C.C.F. motion of want-of-confidence in the government after hearing Finance Minister Ilsley make a spirited defence of his budget and then saw a second budget debate develop on a similar Progressive Conservative motion.

Mr. Ilsley answered opposition demands for cuts in expenditures, explained the government's position on taxation of co-operatives, told why tax reductions had been deferred until next Jan. 1 and denied charges that the administration was wielding a "big stick" in its new financial proposals to the provinces.

After he had concluded and the vote was taken, John Bracken, Progressive Conservative leader, rose to outline the debate with a speech in which he charged that the Dominion had sought to "bribe and bludgeon" the provinces into surrendering their rights in past Dominion-Provincial discussions.

Mr. Bracken still was speaking at the adjournment hour and the debate was put over until next Tuesday.

The defeated C.C.F. motion expressed regret that tax reductions had been insufficient, that the budget had failed to provide public investment to assure full employment, that social security measures were not contained in the provincial offer and that co-operatives were not recognized as non-profit bodies.

Tired of Too Much Love Accused Man Testifies

Boston, July 19 —(AP)— Decorated Army Airforce Lieut. Thomas Farrell, 25, was on record today as saying that he finally became "disgusted" when, he maintained, Helen Stavrou, 18, a former airfield typist, asked him for "a little more love" during a night ni a Boston hotel room.

Farrell, veteran of 35 missions in Pacific warfare, is charged with branding the girl with lighted cigarets, slashing her with a razor and sex offences during the 17-hour stay in the hotel.

Shortly before Farrell left the stand in Superior Court, Prosecutor Edward M. Sullivan asked:

"You said Helen came over to the bed and asked you to give her a little more love?"

"That is right," the United States army officer replied.

"You said I am disgusted with you," Sullivan continued.

"I said I was disgusted," the flier responded.

"You weren't disgusted before when you were intimate with her?"

"No," Farrell said.

Farrell denied that he either branded or slashed the girl.

U.S. Army Denies "Union Busting" in Discharging Proving Ground Workers

By EDWARD E. BOMAR

Washington, July 19 — (AP)—The United States Army denied "union busting" charges today in the wake of an announcement that it had fired five civilian employees at the Aberdeen, Md., proving ground — scene of many top secret tests.

The War Department said the five, who included physicists and chemists, were discharged "in the interest of national security." It declined to go into details.

The fact that all five are officers of Local 250 of the newly-formed C.I.O. Public Workers of America, it said, is "a coincidence and a reflection on the union's discretion in permitting them to serve."

Abram Flaxer, National president of the union who was in Washington attending a meeting, told a reporter the action was 'an obvious union busting device."

Members of a U.P.W.A. delegation which tried vainly to protest to War Secretary Patterson said the union was carrying on an organization drive at Aberdeen and contended the discharge of the Local's officers was more than a coincidence.

Maj.-Gen. Floyd L. Parks, director of the war department's Bureau of Public Relations, announced the action by Brig.-Gen. Alfred B. Quinton, Jr., commander at the proving grounds, where secret tests are carried out on rockets and other guided missiles as well as on guns, tanks and vehicles.

Gen. Quinton acted under a law which empowers the war department's secretaries to remove "in the interests of National Defence" any army or navy employees for subversive activities.

They were identified by Gen. Parks as Harry and Irving Spector, brothers, Abraham Kotelchuck, Phil Weiss and Rheabel Mendelsohn, the latter a woman.

Mr. Mason told reporters that the war department's record of dealing with unions among some 2,000,000 wartime and post-war employees at about 1,580 army installations made it evident that no anti-union bias was involved.

"Only a few dozen employees have been removed under terms of that statute, and this ought to suggest that the war department hasn't gone off half-cocked on a witch-hunt or a red-baiting expedition or is union-busting, in this instance."

"Railroad Lobby" Is Main Opposition to Power Project Charges U. S. Senator Aiken

Washington, July 19 (AP) — Senator George Aiken (Rep.-Vt.) said yesterday "main opposition" to the controversial St. Lawrence Seaway and Power project is engendered by what he termed the "railroad lobby."

"Railroads," he told his Senate colleagues, "have put a brake on transportation progress in this country, and .. their monopolistic practices should not be allowed to continue to the detriment of other forms of transportation and to the detriment of the national welfare."

Legislation authorizing the seaway, which proponents claim will open the Great Lakes to ocean-going shipping and provide a "great pool" of Hydro electric power, has been reported favorably by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

The Senate, however, is not expected to act on the legislation during the few remaining weeks of the present session, in that eventually the matter will die with the present Congress, necessitating revival in the next.

Mr. Aiken declared that the railroads "work in concert" with the Association of American railroads "in skillfully employing subterfuge to make it appear that there is no country-wide opposition to the St. Lawrence."

He said that "evidence is piling up" that association spokesmen "are the mouthpiece for certain financial groups interested in the financing of certain trunk line railroads."

Included among the latter, he said, are the Pennsylvania, New York Central, Baltimore and Ohio, Erie and the Boston and Maine.

He is "convinced" that railroad opposition has been "largely responsible for the delay" in the building of the St. Lawrence seaway "and for the delay in the development of other waterways, both intracoastal and inland."

SCIENCE BOARD OF A-COMMISSION NOW IN SESSION

Objectives Are to Devise Means For Future Exchange of A-Secrets For Peaceful Use

By CHARLES A. GRUMICH

New York, July 19 (AP)—Scientific and technical advisers of the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission meet for the first time as a committee today with instructions to devise means for a future exchange of atomic secrets for peaceful use throughout the world.

The ultimate objective of the 12-member scientific and technical committee, by all accounts, will be reached only in the distant future, and the results of its efforts are "likely to be overshadowed by the conferences dealing with political aspects of the atomic problem.

Meantime the scientists will remain on call to advise the U. N. atomic groups on scientific and technical questions referred to them during the progress of negotiations among the overall atomic planners.

In addition to their advisory work the scientists have instructions to consider and recommend:

1. Proposals for the exchange of atomic information.
2. Proposals for the peaceful uses of atomic energy.
3. Proposals on all scientific and technical matters connected with the activities of the commission.

The United States plan for atomic control, submitted recently by Bernard Baruch, was approved in principle yesterday by Captain Albara Alberto of Brazil, new chairman of the otomic commission, who said it offered a basis for discussion.

The Brazilian navy scientist then said he did not believe the question of outlawing atomic weapons immediately and stopping their manufacture—as Russia proposes—could be dealt with separately.

Too Much Divorcing States Centenarian

Buffalo, N.Y., July 19 — (AP) Mrs. Kathryn N. Luce, who celebrated her 100th birthday tomorrow, says "What I dislike most is seeing all those young whippersnappers going about trading husbands and wives as if they were selecting clothes."

"Instead of being given divorces most of them should be put in jail," she said yesterday in an interview.

Declaring success in marriage and in all phases of life "is something you must work hard for," Mrs. Luce added:

"That's the trouble with modern life, people try to live with the same ease which they get from all their automatic gadgets. What's needed is more hard work, more thrift and more decent Christian living."

Planned Economy of Soviet Expected To Hit Peak in 20 Years in Stalingrad

By Rembert James

Stalingrad, July 19 (AP) — The planned economy of the Soviet Union is expected by Russian leaders to reach its peak in rebuilt Stalingrad 15 to 20 years hence.

It will be a city of steeel workers' dwelling between whole rows of wide boulevards, a city of squares lined with statues and marble halls in the classic Greek and Roman manner glorifying heroes of the great patriotic war and the socialist revolution.

Ninety-eight per cent destroyed during the winter of 1942-43, according to Soviet estimate, Stalingrad has only begun to rebuild. The main factories are working and 300,0000 residents are back out of a pre-war population of about 580,000.

A group of foreign correspondents visiting Stalingrad last week toured the 40-mile length of the city, stretching along the high west bank of the Volga. They heard from the deputy city architect, Peter Buchlev, future plans for which billions of rubles were set aside after the designs had been approved by the state planning commission.

The plans evision a city of 800,000 persons occupying the same narrow 40-mile area along the Volga. Three main boulevards will parallel the river, one along the embankment, one in the centre of city and one on the outskirts.

Buchlev said the natural life of the land and many ravines would be utilized in the planning. Teher will be a network of shaded walks and children's parks No one will live more than three-quarters of a mile from a school.

Buchlev said it was planned that each resident eventually would have 10 square yards of living space. Residents will live in four or five storey apartment houses downtown, with the size of the buildings gradually diminishing so that near the outskirts dwelling will be the small single-family types.

"We do not expect to finish Stalingrad for 15 to 20 years," he said. "But it will be one of the world's showplaces when it is finished." x

Arrest Made at Hamilton On Threatening Charge

By TIM DICKSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Hamilton, July 19 (CP) — The Steel Company of Canada today accused strike pickets of entering its property and damaging parked autos during the night and simultaneously announced that food supplies within its beleaguered works are ample for the men who are remaining on the job and maintaining partial production.

These developments came on the fifth day of the strike called Monday by the United Steelworkers of America (C.I.O.) in Canada's three basic steel plants to enforce demands for a $33.60 minimum wage for a 40-hour week.

E. J. Stretton, chief of the Stelco police, said: "Last night a gang of strikers came over the company's fence along the east side, ripped wiring off some of the parked cars and put sand in their gas tanks."

The statement on food came from R. A. Gillies, works manager, apparently in answer to reports that the supplies in the plant are being diminished.

Other company officials reported that the plane service which has been used to take supplies into the plant since Monday has been expanded but they declined to say how many aircraft are in use. Watchers at the works yesterday reported seeing a large aircraft land. Previously only light planes were seen.

While reserve pickets were added to the line last night a labor gathering not far distant heard Mayor Samuel Lawrence, of Hamilton, urge all workers on strike to keep within the law. The steel strike is only one of several in Hamilton industries.

Last night's labor meeting was attended by between 4,000 and 6,000. Mayor Lawrence asked strikers to keep within the law but said he did not regard the order in council which appointed a Federal controller for Canada's three basic steel plants as law because it was not passed by par-

"Labor Man First."

Declaring he was "a labor man first and Chief Magistrate second," the mayor said the order-in-council denied the workers "the right to strike."

Mayor Lawrence said the wife of a man at work in the steel plant had complained to him that someone painted the word 'scab' on her house, and that she blamed striking unionists. "But who knows it was the strikers?" the mayor asked. "Who knows it was not stooges of the bosses who did it?"

The gathering in Woodlands Park in the northeast section of the city and a march by placard-carrying union men through the streets to the city hall was organized by the United Electrical Workers (C.I.O.) and was made up mostly of striking employees of Westinghouse, Firestone and the Hamilton Spectator.

All Night Vigil.

Between 400 and 500 pickets kept an all-night vigil on the steel picket lines. Besides a concentration at the main gate many more unionists were strung out along a high wire fence, especially in the area where union men and non-striking steel workers fought a bitter battle before dawn Wednesday. Back from the street some men lolled on the ground ready for anything. Several carried steel helmets.

Crowds gathered around the main gate up to midnight. Some were relatives and friends of the men on picket duty. Others appeared to be sightseers. Along the front of one building about 100 yards inside company property from the wire fence sat five or six Steel Company policemen.

The ruddy glow from the open hearth furnaces threw into relief the plumes of smoke from the stacks of the Stelco plant. Production had been cut down but within the mills workers — the union says not more than 1,200, the company says more than 2000 are continuing to make steel.

(By The Canadian Press)

The House of Commons Labor Committee at Ottawa today had heard the views of the striking steel workers union, and interest generally centred on the statement by C. H. Millard, Canadian director of the United Steel Workers of America, that the union was prepared to settle for hourly increasing "between 15 and 19 cents."

The union's strike at Canada's three basic steel plans in Hamilton, Sault Ste. Marie and Sydney is for a $33.60 minimum weekly wage and a 40-hour work week. It has been estimated this means an increase of 19½ cents an hour at Hamilton and the Sault, and 24½ cents at Sydney.

The Ottawa committee meets again today, and on Monday it is expected to hear H. G. Hilton, president of Steel Company of Canada at Hamilton. At Stelco partial production continues with a number of workers on the job inside picket lines. Production has virtually stopped at the two other plants.

At Hamilton, picket lines were strengthened today. A mass labor meeting there last night was told by Mayor Samuel Lawrence that he does not regard the Federal order-in-council under which a Federal controller was appointed for the steel plants as being the law of the land, because it was not approved by parliament. But he cautioned against lawless incidents.

There was one arrest yesterday in connection with the steel strike. William Lewis, 59, of suburban Burlington Beach, was charged with threatening Mrs. Murray McMaster, wife of a man who is among those still at work in the Hamilton steel plant. An additional charge of intimidation was laid and he was released on $500 bail to appear in Magistrate's Court today.

At Sydney, while the big Dominion Steel and Coal Company plant was dormant, a dispute developed between the steel picketers and railway Brotherhoods, the latter being involved through efforts to place maintenance men inside the Sydney plant. The steel union contended maintenance is solely the job of the striking steel workers. About 50 railwaymen are involved in the dispute, which resulted in barring railwaymen from the plant.

At the Sault, all appeared quiet at the Algoma Steel Corporation as the strike entered its fifth day.

RED CROSS OFFICIALS SEEK WHEREABOUTS OF SGMN. H. A. SALLANS

Red Cross officials who meet war brides and their families arriving here from overseas are anxious to know the whereabouts of former Signalman H. A. Sallans, whose wife Lillian is scheduled to arrive in Canada on board the S. S. Queen Mary on July 23.

Sigmn. Sallans' next-of-kin is listed as "M. S. Sallans, Belleville" but this person has not as yet been located.

Anyone having any information regarding Sgmn. Sallans or relatives is requested to communicate with the Red Cross Tel. 2 or the Rev. J. Houston, Tel. 576.

CHEESE MAKERS WILL HOLD ANNUAL PICNIC AT OAK LAKE BEACH

Members of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association will hold their second annual picnic on Wednesday, August 7th, at Searles' Beach, Oak Lake, according to Mr. J. L. Irwin, honorary president of the association. Cheese producers of the district and their families, as well as families of cheese makers are invited.

One of the special features of the picnic program will be a contest to decide the "best looking" cheese maker and his "genuine" wife. There will be three classes for this contest, under 35 years, between 35 and 50 years and over 50 years. Cash prizes will be donated by Mack Robertson of the Belleville Creameries.

In addition to the above contest there will be races for children, horse shoe pitching for men and a ladies' nail driving contest. Married and single men will also play softball.

All cheese makers and farmers in the district are invited to come and bring a basket lunch.

POLICE COURT

Charges of arson against William Spence, Moira, who two weeks ago is alleged to have set fire to a straw stack and also a sugar bush in the Moira district, were again enlarged when the accused appeared in county police court on Thursday. Spence was arrested by Provincial Police the same night that the fires occurred and was remanded for mental examination.

Traffic cases predominated the morning police court docket held before Magistrate T. Y. Wills, with a number of the cases being settled out of court with fines and costs paid.

Thomas Hill, Shannonville, appearing on a charge of having carnal knowledge of a young girl, was found not guilty on the evidence.

Eskimos Gorge On Tasty Beef For First Time

Aklavik, N.W.T., July 19—(CP)—Tons of U.S. army beef stored at Canol Camp and Norman Wells are being dumped on the Eskimo market and greedily bought up at 45 cents a pound as Eskimo families enjoy their first taste of beef.

Families camped here buy as much as 100 pounds at a time and gorge day and night on steak and roast until beef disappears. Husky dogs formerly fed on frozen fish or whale lay into beef bones and leaving with zest.

Eskimos here from Banks Island and other Polar areas are trying to dry some of the army beef for use during the winter on the hunting trails. contain Warehouses at Canol still contain shiploads of other tinned meats and food products which were stored in the northland during the war period.

Dealers pay 15 cents a pound at the army storehousese and float it down the Mackenzie River in refrigerator barges.

Two C.S.U. Officials Arrested for Delaying Sailing of Freighter

Montreal, July 19 — (CP)—Arrest of Conrad Sauras, Montreal business agent of the Canadian Seamen's Union, and Dan Daniels, organizer, on a charge of unlawfully delaying the sailing of the Canada Steamship Lines freighter Grainmotor in port here was disclosed last night by municipal police. Police said they will be arraigned today.

Their arrest followed the court appearance yesterday of Harry Davis, acting president of the C.S.U., who pleaded not guilty to charges arising from the recent seamen's strike — of unlawfully boarding the ship Translake in the Lachine Canal July 9 and of using intimidation to prevent unloading of the vessel. Trial was set for July 24.

Harry Gulkin, Montreal publicity officer of the C.S.U., said Sauras and Daniels were taken into custody on the dock alongside the ship. He said Sauras and Daniels were trying to persuade the captain of the Grainmotor to replace National Seamen's Association men with C. S. U. personnel.

Six "Greenshirts" Reported Detained

Cairo, July 19 (Reuters)—Six members of the Young Egypt Movement (Greenshirts) were reported detained yesterday when police raided several houses after Wednesday night's grenade throwing incident at the British Soldiers' Club in Alexandria.

Thirty persons were injured in the incident, when five Italian grenades were thrown into a garden during an open air dance.

Police also questioned many Egyptian youths.

The Greenshirts is an organization of anti-foreign Extremists.

Splendid Entertainment Offered At Closing Session of Karnival

Donald Evans, 287 George Street, was the lucky winner of the Kiwanis Hope Chest drawn for following the final stage performance of the Kiwanis carnival which concluded Thursday evening. Number of the winning ticket was 1910.

The amateur contest with nine entrants was the feature of the final stage performance presented by the carnival committee, the class of entertainment offered possibly being the best of the three nights of the carnival.

Kay and Greta Galbraith, age 11 and 12 years respectively, were adjudged the winner of the amateur contest, giving a comedy song and dance number which met with the entire approval of the large crowd of spectators. Second place winner was Marilyn Corradi with a step dance number while Miss Delores Post with a tap dance number took the third prize.

Other entrants in the contest were Joan Hannah, age 10 years who gave a gypsy song; Bernard Mascara with a solo number; Donna Lewis, solo; Aileen Gill, tap dance; Mary Lou Semark, solo; and Marilyn McFee, step dance.

A cracker eating contest in which contestants were called upon to eat four soda biscuits and then give forth with something which resembled a whistle, provoked a great deal of merriment on the part of spectators although it was all rather "dry" for the various contestants. Winners of the contest were Bill Hannah, Don Cornell and Cameron McKenna.

Mr. E. Bradshaw, 238 Bleecker Ave., proved himself the best guesser, coming closest to the correct number of beans in the jar, the contest being conducted at one of the carnival stalls. The correct number of beans in the jar was 7,238, with Mr. Bradshaw's guess 7,318.

According to the service club carnival committee the various games at the carnival were fairly well patronized during the three nights. Entire proceeds of the carnival will go toward the support of the Kiwanis Fresh Air Camp at Roblin Lake.

Obituary

MRS. ADA MAUDE EDWARDS
(Oshawa - Belleville)

Mrs. Ada Maude Edwards, widow of William E. Edwards, and formerly of Belleville, died Thursday afternoon, July 18th, after an illness of three days' duration, at the home of her son, Mr. Albert Edwards, 120 Burke Street, Oshawa.

The late Mrs. Edwards, who was in her 73rd. year, was born in England and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Dolder. For many years she lived in this city and for the past five years she made her home with her son in Oshawa. She was a member of the Church of England and when residing here she attended Christ Church. She was a member of the Women's Legion Auxiliary.

Surviving her are four daughters, Mrs. Emmanuel Hurvid, Oshawa; Mrs. Arthur Hedger, Belleville; Mrs. Vincent Hughes, Belleville, and Mrs. Stanley Fenton, Kearns, Ontario; three sons, William of Belleville; Albert of Oshawa, and Ernest of Belleville; four sisters, Mrs. Albert Ling of Cobourg; Emily, Mary Ann and Florrie of England; three brothers, H. Dolder of Belleville, and Thomas Dolder and William Dolder, both of England. Her husband died eight years ago.

Resting at the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street; the funeral announcement is made in this edition.

BRENDA GAYLE VAN ALLEN

Brenda Gayle Van Allen, age four months, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Basil C. Van Allen, 55 West Moira Street, died at home early Friday morning.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street; announcement is made elsewhere in this edition.

MRS. L. HEATHERINGTON
(Foxboro)

Mrs. Louise Heatherington, widow of Charles Heatherington, died at her home in Foxboro early Friday morning. She was in failing health for some time.

The late Mrs. Heatherington was born 86 years ago at Blairton, Ontario, and was a daughter of the late Dr. S. H. McCoy and Mrs. McCoy. For some time she lived in Norwood and for the past forty years she made her home in Foxboro. She was a member of the Presbyterian Church in Foxboro and when age and health permitted she took an active part in the work of the congregation.

Surviving her are three daughters, Mrs. P. H. King, Harriston, Ontario; Mrs. J. J. Elder, Foxboro, and Mrs. F. N. Roberts, Foote's Bay, Ontario.

Resting at the Thomas C. Thompson Funeral Home, 38 Everett Street; the funeral announcement is made in this edition.

Summer Fun Club Announces Winners

Winners of prizes in the Summer Fun Club treasure hunts held this week as part of the daily recreation program for youngsters in town, planned by Ed. Shortt, program secretary of the Y.M.C.A., were as follows:

Boys' hunt, held Wednesday: Harry Davis, Jim McPherson, Bob Hutchinson, and Jack Matthews; two prizes not found.

Girls' hunt, held Thursday, Frances Thompson, Mary Pattrick, Barbara Grills (2), Barbara Alexander; one prize not found.

Following the hunts, as on other game days, a swim in the clean, filtered water of the "Y" pool was enjoyed by all participants. Next week's program includes, for boys, a hike (bring lunch) on Monday, softball and swim on Wednesday, and floor hockey and swim on Friday. For the girls, games on Tuesday and a hike (bring lunch) on Thursday.

Summer Fun Club membership is open to any boy or girl between the ages of 9 and 15, and includes, in addition to the above types of program, swims and swimming instruction. Thirty-nine girls have passed their beginner swimming test, which consists of jumping or diving into the deep end and swimming two lengths of the pool without stopping, so far this summer, and only two or three boys and girls who are attending are now unable to swim at least a little bit.

Programs start at 9.30 each morning and except on hike days the young people are home for lunch.

Two Contingents War Brides Will Arrive Next Week

Two contingents of war brides are expected to arrive in Canada in the immediate future aboard the S. S. Lady Nelson and the S. S. Queen Mary. The Queen Mary is expected to dock at Halifax approximately July 23 while the Lady Nelson is expected to arrive at the same port on July 25.

Added to the passenger list of war brides arriving on board the S. S. Letitia is Ellen, wife of L/Cpl. L. H. Ingram, Bancroft.

J. McCaw, Bancroft Appointed County Jail Governor

The appointment of former Sergeant James McCaw, Bancroft, as governor of the Hastings County Jail was announced today by J. Fred Wilson, M.L.A., for Hastings West.

The appointment of the twenty-five-year-old war veteran has been approved by the Hon. T. Doucet, acting Ontario Minister of Municipal Affairs on recommendation of Mr. Wilson and County Sheriff John D. O'Flynn.

The new jail governor has been in Toronto for the past two weeks taking a course of instruction on jail governorship during which he has observed the administration and operation of several jail institutions.

He enlisted with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in September, 1939 and served until June, 1945 when he received his discharge from the army.

While overseas, Mr. McCaw married an English girl. Mrs. McCaw has received the appointment, Mr. Wilson stated, of matron of the county jail.

He will assume his new duties in the near future on the expiration of the special training he is now undergoing in Toronto.

Sheriff O'Flynn paid fine tribute to the work of Messrs. Archie Winters and Edward Sunderland in the county jail during the interim between the resignation of former jail governor Joseph Samain and the present appointment.

"They have worked faithfully and loyally during this period and have carried on the work in a fine manner. I cannot speak too highly of their services," he said.

Sudden Impulse Probably Saves Life of Resident

A sudden impulse to leave the lawn mower with which he was mowing his lawn, and walk to the street a few yards away probably saved the life of Mr. William Springer, corner Dundas and George Streets, on Thursday evening.

Scarcely had Mr. Springer obeyed the feeling to wander to the pavement than a large limb, approximately eight inches in diameter suddenly crashed down. It struck a large limb of another tree, breaking it off and sending it hurtling to the spot where Mr. Springer stood previous to moving away.

Mr. Springer's brief comment on his narrow escape from injury or perhaps death was "By George."

UNDERGROUND FOR THE ATOMIC AGE

The U. S. War Department requested the National Speleological Society, to come up with 50,000 square feet of cavern space for factories, shelters and storage, to prepare for the possibility of an atomic bomb attack. The modern cavemen (speleologists or just plain spelunkers), are holding their underground convention in the Strickland quarry caverns, outside Portland, Connecticut, giving them an opportunity for an exhaustive survey of the caverns with an eye to their future use. ABOVE, an entire family of spelunkers explores the Strickland caverns. Mrs. Ruth E. Wilson hands 10-months-old daughter Sharon to husband Frank Wilson, as they work their way to another level.

War Veteran Takes Over Grocery Store

Trenton — Another army veteran is starting up in business for himself. Leland J. Green has taken over the grocery business at 498 Front Street which has been operated by his mother since she came here from Carrying Place three years ago.

Mr. Green was a carpenter in Trenton before enlisting in the R.C.M.E. with the rank of Craftsman. He served overseas. He was recently married to Joyce Davis of Nanaimo, B.C.

Following are the names of Trenton war brides and their children who are expected to dock at Halifax on Friday. They are coming on the "Letitia."

Mrs. Catherine Shuart, wife of L/Cpl. R. D. Shuart, 58 Marmora Street; Mrs. Beatrice Michaud and son Terry, wife and son of Cpl. J. T. Michaud, 115 Dufferin Ave.; Mrs. Agnes Coltman, Hannah and Floyd, wife and family of Gnr. F. L. Coltman, R. R. 6, Trenton.

Several Trenton Air Force men are among a group of 1,362 coming home and docked in Halifax on the "Georgic" on July 15th.

They are Sgt. A. Assimi, 162 Dundas Street, F/Sgt. G. M. Birch 44 Quinte St.; Cpl. J. F. Boivin, 97 Dundas St.; Sgt. R. W. Burr, 16 John St.; F/O L. J. Cummings, 165 Dundas Street East and Leading Aircraftsman W. F. Jeffery, 34 Crown Street.

The combined bands of the Kingston and Belleville Salvation Army Corps gave a Sunday evening concert in Governor Simcoe Park on Sunday last. Previous to that an evening service was held in the Century Theatre when about 400 worshipped. During the afternoon the band went to Presqu'Ile Point where 2,000 holidayers enjoyed the concert. Bandmasters were Karl Wenborn of Kingston and David Wardle of Belleville.

The semi-annual district meeting of District 29 of the Rebekah Lodge was held in Cobourg on Wednesday, July 10. After the regular business was disposed of the members of Duke of Kent Lodge and visiting members adjourned to Victoria Park where a picnic and races were held. Trenton members attending were Mrs. J. Thow, Mrs. S. Bowden, Mrs. R. Oldrey, Mrs. D. Bonisteel accompanied by Mr. Bonisteel.

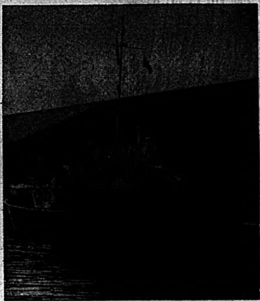
Floating Laboratory Visits Toronto



Former private yacht in Cleveland and with the U. S. Navy during the war, Wanderer visited Toronto yesterday for cruises around the Island to demonstrate developments in radar and loran, gyro compasses, electro-mechanical steering gear and other electrical and mechanical aids to navigation. The 102-foot ship, Diesel-electric powered, is on loan to the Sperry Gyroscope Co.

Mounted on bridge of Wanderer radar scope (left) has a 12-inch viewing scope and a range counter indicator for distances from 100 yards to 40 miles.

Toronto, July 19 —(CP)— In a tiny darkroom aboard the motor yacht Wanderer observers yesterday saw the Toronto skyline, the Welland Canal and Hamilton Mountain duplicated on a 12-inch glass screen through the magic of radar.

The vessel is the Sperry Gyroscope Company's floating laboratory now on a 2,300-mile Cleveland to New York cruise via Prescott, Montreal and Halifax.

Tuning in radar stations at Jacksonville, Fla., and Charleston, S. C., William Griswold, skipper of the Wanderer, plotted his position as the corner of Yonge and King streets, an error of only four miles from his actual position off Toronto harbor. Such long range equipment, developed to aid ocean navigation during the war will not be necessary on the Great Lakes when radar navigational aids become prevalent.

Although much experimental work remains to be done before radar equipment is installed on all lake vessels, G. R. Donovan, secretary of the Dominion Marine Association said that radar would make possible a longer and safer shipping season.

Cow Fights High up in Valleys Of Valais Cauton, Switzerland, Thrilling as Heavy Boxing Bout

By HANS DE WATTEVILLE

Sion, Switzerland, July 19 —(AP)— For the farmers living far up in the isolated valleys of the Valais Canyon in southwestern Switzerland, their annual cow fights are no less thrilling than a heavyweight champion boxing bout to fans of the United States.

Toward the end of June herds of the cattle, known here as the "Herence" breed, are driven to high pastures to spend the summer.

On the same day approximately 200 cows, chosen from the different stables, are assembled to determine a queen.

It is a great honor as well as financially interesting for a farmer to own a queen cow.

The cow fights start early in the morning. The animals' horns have been blunted and sharp tips removed. The cows plunge into the fray, each instinctively choosing a cow of about the same weight. Cannily, they shun cows who defeated them in previous years. The cowherds separate the animals if more than two become involved in a struggle.

The clashes are short but violent. The queen cow always is the strongest and heaviest of the lot. If two cows are evenly matched in power the victory goes to the one with the most fighting spirit.

The cows never are really seriously injured. Some of them display fine sporting spirit, stepping back to wait a few seconds when an opponent slips on the wet grass. Others, in such an instance, rush in to finish the bout.

The trial by individual combat continues for about three days, but the fights never wholly cease all summer as some of the cows try again and again to improve their rating. The queen, however, seldom is attacked after the first flurries, her impressive series of early victories giving her such prestige that other cows apparently feel handicapped from the beginning.

14-Cent Raise For Winter Wheat

Ottawa, July 19 (CP)— Trade Minister MacKinnon announced yesterday in the Commons that producers of Ontario winter wheat in the 1946-47 crop year will receive an increase of 14 cents over the current ceilings price of $1.26 a bushel for No. 1 Canada Eastern winter wheat — giving them a price of $1.40 a bushel.

Mr. MacKinnon said this increase will be accomplished by a special Government payment of nine cents and a five-cent payment representing a fixed and final payment out of the Ontario wheat flour regulation fund. The $1.26 ceiling itself will be maintained and the Canadian Wheat Board also will continue to maintain a "floor" of $1.25.

The increased payment to producers will have no bearing on wheat export contracts or domestic consumer prices.

The Minister said it originally had been intended to raise ceiling on Ontario wheat to $1.35 a bushel for the crop year, beginning July 1, 1946, and permit a corresponding increase in the domestic price of winter wheat flour and the products thereof, "but in view of recent developments in price control policy this step is not being taken."

(The Ontario Wheat Utilization Fund includes funds resulting from the collection of an equalization fee on the exports of Ontario winter wheat flour. The proceeds of the fund, which represent the difference between domestic and export prices, are distributed among the wheat producers.)

Karl Homuth (PC, Waterloo South) asked what was meant by Mr. MacKinnon's reference in his statement to recent developments in the field of price control.

Finance Minister Ilsley said that referred to his recent announcement of the removal of a number of articles from price control and the adjustment of the Canadian dollar, coupled with his statement that the Government intended to hold the line on prices.

Percy Wright (CCF, Melfort) asked whether an increase in the price paid for Western wheat used in Canada for milling purposes now would be considered in view of the Ontario increase.

Mr. MacKinnon said this was under consideration.

Scenic Route Passes Over Roosevelt Bridge

Cornwall, Ont., July 19 — Return of peace and easing of wartime travel restrictions have been reflected this year in record traffic over Roosevelt International Bridge which connects this St. Lawrence River city with Rooseveltown, N.Y. Bridge officials report there has been an increase of more than 50 per cent so far this season over last year in vehicular traffic over the three-span, 3½-mile bridge route and they expect pre-war travel records to be surpassed by a considerable margin.

Since its formal opening to the motoring public of Canada and the United States in 1934, Roosevelt Bridge has won wide popularity as the "Scenic Route That Saves Miles." The route is comprised of three bridges, two spanning the north and south channels of the St. Lawrence River and the other crossing the Racquette River in New York State. From the north span, motorists obtain a clear view of the turbulent Longue Sault Rapids, site of the proposed St. Lawrence River hydro-electric power scheme, Cornwall Canal and the vast reaches of the river itself. An excellent view of the river also is afforded by the south channel bridge which connects Cornwall Island, an Indian Reservation, to the United States. The Racquette River Bridge, built in 1897, forms the third span of the bridge route and is the longest all-electrically-welded bridge in the world.

BELLEVILLE, ONT., July 19th., 1946

TO THE RESIDENTS OF BELLEVILLE AND DISTRICT:

Dear Friends, —

In introducing ourselves to you, along with announcing the opening of our new Studio, we take great pleasure in presenting to this locality a new trend in Photographic Portraiture.

"CREATIVE CAMERA STUDIES CAPTURING AND PRESERVING THE CHARACTER AND INDIVIDUALITY DESERVING TO EACH PERSON'S PHOTOGRAPH."

We are looking forward to being of great service to those who desire quality portraits in good taste. In the fields of Wedding and Child Photography, we shall give additional attention to the minute details so essential in work of this nature.

Having designated SATURDAY, JULY 20th., as our opening date, we are gratefully anticipating your attention and support to the arrival of this, Belleville's newest photographic studio.

Yours sincerely,

Research Harnessed to Industry

In Britain today scientific research is being harnessed to the needs of industry, and scientists who during the war produced such ideas as jet-propulsion, penicillin, radar, rocketry, the radio-proximity shell fuse and a considerable part of atomic fission data will now turn their attention to research that will keep Britain abreast of the latest advantages in commercial technology. Among the scientific wonders now out of the blueprint state and in active development by United Kingdom technicians and scientists are: jet-driven locomotives; a trans-Atlantic jet-plane that will cruise 550 miles an hour and weighs more than 90,000 pounds; new radar devices that will make roads, railways and ports more accident-free; new adaptations of penicillin and D.D.T. that will make people healthier and crops more fruitful; and a liner of the "Queen Mary" type, driven by atomic power. The scope of industrial research is to be extended to even the smallest factories in order to speed the immediate application of the latest scientific achievements to the production drive and to obtain a much closer co-operation between "pure natural science" and industry.

Children Recuperate

Two hundred and fifty Dutch children, who have been recuperating in Australia after their experiences in Japanese camps for internees, will leave Australia in the near future. Most of them will sail for Holland, but the remainder will go back to the Netherlands East Indies.

During their stay in Australia, the children have been catching up in their education at two state schools in Melbourne. All the teaching staff are returned prisoners of war or internees.

Of the 577 British children who were brought to Australia in 1940 for the duration of the war, more than 100 are remaining temporarily to complete educational courses or apprenticeships, while some are staying permanently.

As guardianship under the National Security Regulations will expire at the end of this year, the Cabinet has decided to introduce legislation enabling the Minister for Immigration to continue as the legal guardian of the children. The Minister will also act as the guardian of children brought to Australia under any immigration scheme.

Secretary Byrnes' Report

Moderate optimism is seen by the New York Times in the report to the nation which Secretary Byrnes delivered the other evening. It is looked upon as a "model of diplomatic candor" and at the same time this moderate optimism is seen as accompanied "by an increasingly tough realism that lets action follow words."

The writer says: "There is at present a bright prospect for peace treaties which will relieve five nations of the burden of the occupation now consuming their substance and permit them to breathe and live and breathe again as free people." This, he says, is no small achievement. While it is noted that the report is more defensive than jubilant it points out that this is due to the compromises which Mr. Byrnes and the American delegation have had to make.

The calling of the general peace conference is seen as the greatest gain of Mr. Byrnes' efforts. "This will have the opportunity to go over the first drafts of treaties. The next conference will not have the final power to fix the peace terms which are still left to the Big Powers. But it will give the smaller nations a chance to speak up and to pass judgment on what the Big Powers have done. In so doing they may be able not only to force improvements in the treaty draughts already made but also create a more wholesome atmosphere for the even more important peace settlements still to be made."

The Times refers to the deep disappointment of Mr. Byrnes at the "aloofness, coolness and hostility" shown in the Russian reaction to his offer of a twenty-five year alliance to eliminate the German menace forever by keeping Germany disarmed, at Russia's refusal to permit investigation of German armament plants in her zone, at her failure to agree to the administrative and economic unification of Germany as provided at Potsdam, with results which are costing the United States and Britain at the rate of half a billion dollars a year, at her demand for vast reparations to keep Germany occupied for generations and at her general reluctance to go ahead with the settlements with either Germany or Austria, on which all other settlements depend. He bluntly asks whether German militarism is to become a pawn in a struggle between East and West and thus achieve for Germany another chance to divide and conquer."

The editorial refers to the admission of the "basic differences between the Allies in ideas, standards and methods," but Mr. Byrnes "does not yet admit that there may be basic differences in aims as well. Hence there is seen the need of exploring every possibility of agreement in order to avert a final break which would be in the interest of none and might mean disaster for all." The Times says "We hope that Russia will see her way clear to co-operate but there is no reason why the Western Powers should permit their action to be paralyzed if she does not co-operate."

In These "Mad Dog Days"

In this kind of weather, dogs are supposed to go mad. And some of them do just that. But a contemporary wonders if humans aren't a bit madder. As examples:

In Ohio a flag-pole sitter climaxed his emulation of Simeon the Syrian by pulling his girl friend up to his eyrie perch and marrying her.

In Hollywood, one Jim Morgan sat for 23 days on an ostrich egg and hatched out an ostrich — aided by California sunshine, of course.

In face of these performances by representative members of genus homo, the performance of a pooch named Gizmo raises a reasonable doubt as to the relative sanity of men and dogs under solar radiation.

Gizmo was one of a pack of greyhounds chasing a mechanical rabbit on a Portland, Oregon, dog track. Weary of pursing the elusive robot bunny, and embittered because no hound had ever been permitted to catch one, Gizmo deserted the pack, cut across the infield and was waiting for the synthetic cottontail when he came around into the backstretch. Thereupon Gizmo proceeded to demolish Brer Rabbit.

Gizmo's act is one of the few smart—or even rational—performances we have noted in recent weeks.

Smuggler's Magic

We have long admired on the "art for art's sake" credo, the technius of smuggling.

Tales of diamonds set in a smuggler's tooth; of opium between his toes, and of good whiskey in his boots, have been of the stuff of high narrative. In fact we owe the somewhat familiar name of bootlegger to the old-fashioned practice of getting around the law by bringing in rare stuff in the long rubber boots of the smugglers. The taste, obviously, tends to stick.

But there appears so little ingenuity in the latest trick as to wonder what the modern generation is coming to. Down under in Australia customs officers raided the liner Monterey and seized tens of thousands of American cigarettes, dozens of pairs of nylon stockings and plastic shoes and raincoats.

When some of the crew were ordered to strip it was found they had stockings filled with cigarettes tied around their waists; with little more finesse than cartridge bels. Officers said they just looked fat, and a bit foolish. They must have.

THE FUTURE

What about tomorrow?
That's for youth to learn.
Oldsters, touched with sorrow,
Dread the distant turn.
Past and present bind them
Fast as bands of steel.
Youth that treads behind them
Must the new reveal.

All that now is ended,
All that's best today
Once on youth depended
First to find the way.
Once the old denied it,
Vowed the dream was vain,
Until young hearts tried it
Time and time again.

All that seems completed,
All that men have done
Will with scorn be treated
When new goals are won.
Youth! The future's waiting,
Wonder-filled and vast!
Why stand hesitating,
Shackled by the past.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS.

20 YEARS AGO

JULY 19TH., 1926.

Practically the last of the strawberry crop was offered to buyers on the local market this morning. Most of the housewives have this fruit finished, but some were buying for preserving. The price was 18 cents per box or two boxes for 35 cents. Shelled peas sold at 25 cents per quart and beans sold at 10 cents per berry box measure. New potatoes brought 75 cents per peck.

Mr. S. T. Vandervoort, Belleville, has been appointed Returning Officer for Hastings South; Mr. T. P. Lancaster of Havelock for Hastings-Peterborough, and Mr. W. G. Wilson, Napanee, for Prince Edward-Lennox.

Mr. Stanley Robbins has arrived home after a motor trip to Fort Wayne, Indiana.

The Rev. Alex McLeod and Mrs. McLeod of Wolsey, Sask., are the guests of Mrs. Rankin, Purdy Street.

Mr. Clair Corrigan was home to spend the weekend with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. Corrigan.

30 YEARS AGO

Mr. W. W. Chown has left to visit his son, Roy Chown in Edmonton.

Mr. Mark Willis and daughter are guests at the home of his cousin, Mr. S. Burrows.

50 YEARS AGO

JULY 19TH, 1896

Mayor Walmsley received a letter today from Lord Aberdeen, Governor General of Canada, stating that he will be passing through Belleville on Sept. 18th, and that he will stop here from noon until midnight.

The address which was presented to Mr. R. D. Conger, formerly of this city and now of Peterboro, by the congregation of Bridge Street Methodist Church, upon his removal from here, has been most artistically illuminated by Miss Maclean, daughter of the Rev. M. W. Maclean, minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. It is now on display in the show window of Mr. C. B. Scantlebury's store, and is being much admired.

Mr. Ilsley charged that the Progressive Conservatives had called for reduction in expenditures without pinning their criticism to any specific items and described their showing in the debate as "pathetic, halting, ineffective and feeble."

Of co-operatives, he said the government was following the recommendations of the Royal Commission on co-operatives which had brought down a unanimous report that had been received favorably by the co-operatives themselves.

Turning to the deferred tax reductions, Mr. Ilsley recalled that there was a flat 16-percent reduction in personal income taxes in the October budget and said this had been intended to cover all of 1946 and said greater tax relief could not be provided without increasing the deficit in this year's operations.

Mr. Bracken said the Dominion had claimed it could not reduce taxation if it did not obtain a full agreement from the provinces and yet if that agreement had been reached it would have involved even larger expenditures for the Dominion's proposals for social services.

Urges Ceiling Removal

Other speakers in the debate included W. R. Aylesworth (PC-Frontenac-Addington), J. I. Hamel (BP-St. Maurice-LaFleche), F. E. Jaenicke (CCF-Kindersley) and J. W. Burton (CCF-Humboldt).

He turned down opposition charges that the government had sought to use "coercion" against the provinces with this statement:

"I repudiate entirely the charge of coercion or a big stick. It is entirely unjustified."

Before taking up the budget debate, the House heard Justice Minister St. Laurent disclose that commonwealth discussions on imperial trade preference will be held next year.

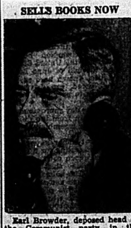
In the budget debate, Mr. Aylesworth urged the removal of price ceilings on butter, cheese, meat and other farm products in an effort to stimulate agricultural production and charged that price controls had created the "greatest" black market in years.

Mr. Hamel protested against the proposal to tax co-operatives and said the Canadian people generally were disappointed with the tax reductions contained in the budget in view of the high cost of living.

Mr. Jaenicke said income tax regulations did not treat farmers fairly and urged that they be allowed to average their income over a five-year period instead of three years as proposed in the budget. They also should be given additional exemption in recognition of work done on farms by their families.

Mr. Burton also argued against taxation of co-operatives and suggested the passage of a co-operative act, which would give the co-operatives a yardstick to go by and not leave taxation to the whims of government officials.

SELLS BOOKS NOW



Earl Browder, deposed head of the Communist party in the United States, is shown at his desk as he opened his new office as representative for Soviet publishers. Browder recently made a trip to Moscow and returned with a contract to handle Russian book sales in the U. S. His contract has been object of interest by the state department.

NO SUBPOENA

A move to subpoena H. G. Hilton, ABOVE, chairman of the board of the Steel Company of Canada, was withdrawn after Liberal and C.C.F. members of parliament objected. The move was to force labor and management principals in the Hamilton steel strike to attend sessions of the Commons committee on industrial relations.

READY TO BARGAIN

Ottawa, July 19 — (CP)—The Commons Industrial Relations Committee planned today to resume its study of conditions behind the current steel strike after hearing yesterday a preliminary submission from C. H. Millard, Canadian director of the United Steelworkers of America (C.I.O.).

It is expected questioning of Mr. Millard by committee members will continue. Representatives of the Labor Department also are scheduled to appear to give an explanation of the mechanics used in handling industrial disputes.

Mr. Millard intimated the union was prepared to bargain in the range of 15 to 19 cents an hour for increases. Previous demand of the union had been for 19½ cents at Sault Ste. Marie and Hamilton and 24½ cents at Sydney. The union's demand still will be for parity of Nova Scotia wages with those of Ontario, which would mean 20 to 24 cents more for the Sydney workers.

Mr. Millard said "most serious stumbling block toward settlement of the five-day-old strike had been failure of the union's efforts to have all three employers negotiate at the same time etc.

In his submission the union leader said the U.S.W.A. was prepared to resume negotiations at any time and would welcome suggestions from the committee for a settlement. He quoted from a wire to Arthur MacNamara, Deputy Labor Minister, July 1 in which he said the union could accept nothing less than lumber workers in British Columbia had obtained following their recent strike.

"We are ready to bargain between 15 and 19 cents," he said.

Increase in Steel Price

He told the committee that union representatives had received assurance from Donald Gordon, Price Board chairman, that an April 1 increase of $5 a ton in the price of steel included provision for wage increases. When the union approached the companies they were told there was no such provision.

The brief put emphasis on the union's demand for recognition of steel as a national industry which would place it directly under the National War Labor Board instead of under regional boards.

The Union policy on wages and hours had been formulated 20 months ago and negotiations had been conducted for the past six months.

"Over a very long period of time we tried to reach settlement by persuasion and explanation," he said.

He interpreted the government's action in appointing a controller as "an attempt to impose the 10-cent increase and close off any further negotiations as to wages."

Replying to questions by David Croll (L — Toronto Spadina) Mr. Millard said when the controller — F. B. Kilbourn, Montreal — was appointed the union had wired him offering co-operation but no reply was received. The union had had no word from Bart Sullivan, deputy controller in charge of the Stelco plant. So far as it knew J. V. Argyle, deputy in charge of the Algoma plant had "never been in Sault Ste. Marie." Horace Pettigrove, deputy at the Dosco plant had met with the union and arranged for maintenance of the plant.

Those Who Buy On Black Market Make it, Says P.M.

St. Catharines, Ont., July 19 — (CP) — Joseph Stopka, 25, operator of a coffee shop here, yesterday was fined $53 on a charge of buying sugar without surrendering ration coupons.

"Who makes the black market?" Magistrate J. H. Campbell asked him.

"The people who buy and sell on it, I guess."

"Oh, no — it's the people who buy on it," said the magistrate.

Police said Stopka admitted buying two 100-pound bags of sugar in Toronto for $18 a bag. The regular price was $7.55 a bag.

IT AIN'T HAY BUT MORE LIKELY RAGWEED

Spring pollinosis (hay fever to you) begins April 1 and lasts in some cases until early June. It is due to the pollens of elm, birch, ash, oak—rarely other trees. Summer pollinosis begins May 15 and lasts until June 15. This is the type that is really due to grass pollens, although the popular name for it is "rose gold." Not rose fever, you will notice, but rose "cold." Oh, well, let it pass—you probably wouldn't understand anyway. Orchard grass, rye, red top, blue grass, June grass, quack grass, occasionally pigweed, lamb's quarters or curly dock, olny rarely timothy, cause summer pollinosis.

The majority of cases of pollinosis occur in the autumn, from August 15 until frost. Usual cause is ragweed, even though the victims may ascribe their sensitivity to goldenrod—they see the brilliant goldenrod flowers and fail to notice the ragweed that grows wherever goldenrod grows. After all, goldenrod pollen is comparatively innocent, being insect-pollinated, and therefore seldom if ever a cause of trouble,, except from direct inhalation by a hypersensitive individual.

Doctors and people—the same half—the same class of doctors and people who call anything and everything "cold as long as they can get away with it—call numerous respiratory tract diseases or reactions "hay fever" that are certainly not pollinosis.

Anything is possible, except a mouse's nest in the cat's ear, so we must concede there are rare birds who have genuine pollinosis throughout the three seasons — simply because they are allergic to tree pollen, grass pollen and ragweed pollen as well. But as a rule the individual whose trouble outlasts the season owes his discomfort to something else than pollinosis, say polyp in the nose or perhaps chronic sinusitis.

In another talk we'll deal with nasal polyp.

Pollinosis, whether it affects the eyes, nose, throat or bronchi (asthma) is manifestation of allergy, specific sensitivity to pollen floating in the air. If we could only keep the air free from pollen or wash or filter all pollen out of it, no one would suffer from pollinosis. But all attempts to procure pollen-free air, except under rigidly controlled conditions, are as vain as trying to keep one's hands sterile (germ-free) while living in any community of people.

I have no dependable statistics but it is my opinion that genuine pollinosis accounts for only half of the cases commonly called hay fever. When the symptoms occur out of season, at any time the year around or perennially, the patient has either chronic sinus trouble, polyp or allergic sensitivity to something other than pollen, such as goose feathers, cat hair, orris root, horse dander, white of egg, shell fish.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

It Ain't Hay

Come haying time I expect to bes in dreadful misery for two months—unless you can tell me something that will prevent or at least ameliorate hay fever.

(M.E.N.)

Answer—Chances are that ragweed or other pollen, not hay nor goldenrod, causes your trouble. Send stamped self addressed envelope for pamphlet on Hay Fever.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

How did "honeymoon" originate?

Many writers suppose that "honeymoon" originally referred to the moon or month after marriage when the ancient Teutons celebrated by drinking a liquor made of honey.

In "Etymological Compendium" (1828) William Pulleyn wrote: "It was the custom of the higher order of the Teutones, an ancient people who inhabited the northern parts of Germany, to drink mead, or metheglin, a beverage made with honey, for thirty days after every wedding. From this custom, comes the expression to spend the honey moon."

Attila the Hun died suddenly in 453 A.D. during the night following a banquet celebrating his marriage to a damsel named Ildico. Since the king was notorious for his intemperance it is supposed that his death was due to over-indulgence in honey mead at his wedding feast.

Dr. Samuel Johnson apparently had some such theory in mind when he defined "honeymoon" as "the first month after marriage, when there is nothing but tenderness and pleasure."

However, the early examples given by the Oxford dictionary indicate that the term originally may have had no reference to the period of a moon or month, but rather compared the mutual love of newly married people to the changeable character of the moon, which is no sooner full than it begins to wane.

In 1552 Richard Huloet said in his dictionary: "Honey moon, a term proverbially applied to such as be new married, which will not fall out at the first, but the one loveth the other at the beginning exceedingly, the likelihood of their exceedingly love appearing to assuage, the which time the vulgar people call the honey moon."

The custom of the honeymoon probably symbolizes the primitive practice of stealing the bride and concealing her from her people.

Nowadays the honeymoon is merely a vacation that newly married couples take before settling down.

Flight Dispatch Termed 'Premature'

Ottawa, July 19 — (CP)—United States Embassy officials yesterday described as "premature" a dispatch from Edmonton yesterday regarding a recent flight over the North Pole by a loran-equipped B29 Superfortress based at Edmonton.

When arrangements for the experimental flying were being made Canadian authorities had suggested security safeguards should be imposed, a spokesman said. Consequently no details of the flight had been given out by the U. S. Army Air Force headquarters in Edmonton.

An official announcement was to have been made later, possibly jointly by U. S. and Canadian authorities. After the Edmonton story appeared in the press, U. S. officials made inquiries at Edmonton regarding the source of the report.

A erport from Edmonton indicated that there had been no leakage of information from American personnel involved.

Some Canadian personnel were attached to the U. S. B-29 group, he said. Incidentally, he added, the Edmonton report contained several "inaccuracies."

R.C.A.F. headquarters here declined comment on the story.

"TOURIST CAMP"

Based upon a picture painted for Carling's by Fred Finley, O.S.A.

This is one of a series of illustrations on the subject of the Conservation of Canada's natural assets designed to emphasize the fact that the beauties of unspoiled nature that we enjoy today are a precious birthright which we must protect for tomorrow.

† COPYRIGHT BY CARLING'S, [illegible]

Where Good Neighbours Meet

Texas, Idaho, California, Maine . . . think of any State you wish and you're sure to see its name on the license plate of a car somewhere in Canada during the summer. Each year, with the unerring directness of migratory waterfowl, millions of American tourists come north to Canada. They come because Canada offers them Nature—unspoiled and unblemished. They come to revel in those joys of the outdoors which we Canadians are prone to take too much for granted.

In their travels and during their stay here the money they spend forms the basis of a $150,000,000 industry, bringing an added measure of prosperity to all of us.

Like any asset, the tourist industry must be protected. This we can do most surely and easily by protecting and conserving the heritage of natural beauty and wildlife for our own enjoyment as well as theirs.

Every Canadian, as a shareholder in Canada's natural wealth, has a vital interest in the conservation of this heritage.

Conservation is not just a doctrine to be preached to hunters and fishermen. It is a vital part in the continuance of our national economy, and must, of necessity, fail if its measures do not receive the full support of all Canadian citizens.

CAPTAIN MAY HAVE MISJUDGED LOCATION

St. Catharines, Ont., July 19 — (CP) — A. McLean, superintendent of the C. S. Boone Dredging and Construction Company of Toronto, suggested today that the tug Dalhousie River may have foundered in the Welland Canal June 29 because the captain misjudged the location. Six persons, including the captain, J. R. McLean, were drowned.

Mr. McLean, whose company owns the tug, was testifying at the morning sitting of an inquiry opened yesterday by Mr. Justice Keiller Mackay of the Ontario Supreme Court as chairman of the Commission of Inquiry. Other members of the commission are Captain Angus McKay of Owen Sound, Ont., and Captain F. G. Davis of Toronto.

WEDDINGS

COE—MacKENZIE

The Rev. J. Grant Sparling performed the marriage of Margaret Doris MacKenzie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Wallbridge, and Major Robert Frederick Coe, Indian Army, son of Mrs. F. W. Coe and the late Mr. Coe, Toronto, on Wednesday, July 10 in Christ Church.

The wedding attendants were Mr. and Mrs. W. V. Knox, of Ameliasburg.

ABRAMS—GRAY

Marmora (Special)—A pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Paul's Anglican Church, Marmora, at 12.30 p.m. on Wednesday, July 17th, when Gertrude Elsie, daughter of Major and Mrs. Percy Gray of Marmora, became the bride of James Le Roy Abrams, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. Abrams of Napanee. Rev. J. M. Brownlie, rector of the parish was the officiating clergyman. The chancel and windows were profusely decorated with summer flowers and white gladioli adorned the altar. Wedding music was played by the organist, Mrs. L. R. Rundle, aunt of the bride, who also, during the signing of the register sang "Because" and "Through the Years."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride looked charming in a gown of white taffeta, with shirred bodice. Her veil of white net was in coronet style, caught with orange blossoms. Her only ornament was a gold cross which had belonged to her grandmother the late Mrs. William Gray. She carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses and bouvardia.

She was attended by her sister, Jennie Gray as bridesmaid, frocked in pink net over taffeta, with matching accessories, and carrying a bouquet of pink carnations and blue cornflowers.

Le Vern Abrams, brother of the groom was best man.

The ushers were Robert Gray, brother of the bride and Dennis Rowe, cousin of the groom.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in St. Paul's Parish Hall, where an excellent repast was served to over seventy guests by the ladies of St. Paul's Guild. The bride's mother received, wearing a gown of grey and mauve silk jersey and leghorn hat and a corsage of mauve and white sweet peas. She was assisted by the groom's mother, who was wearing a gown of green and white crepe with white hat and a corsage of mauve and white sweet peas.

The bride and groom left on a trip to western Ontario. For travelling the bride chose a dress of black and white taffeta with matching accessories. On their return they will take up residence in Napanee.

Out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. T. Abrams, Mr. and Mrs. Le Vern Abrams, Miss Doreen Abrams, Kenneth Abrams, and Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Hayes, Napanee; Mrs. M. Robinson, Mrs. M. Claringbold, Mr and Mrs. J. Carroll, Mr. and Mrs. J. Rowe, and Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Rowe, Sandhurst; Miss R. La Rochelle, Ottawa; Company Sergt. Major and Mrs. P. C. Esty, Arnprior; Mrs. F. Wallace, McLean, Virginia; Mrs. W. Bough, Tamworth; Mrs. C. Jones, Havelock and Mr. and Mrs. J. McConnell, Peterborough.

GENEREAUX—COVENEY

Trenton (Special)—St. Peter-in-Chains Church, decorated with a profusion of summer blossoms, was the setting for the wedding of Norma Anastasia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Coveney, Glen Miller, and Bernard Gerald, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jasper Genereaux, performed on June 29, 1946 by the Rev. Father Lamarche, with the Rev. Father J. Carley at the organ.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was beautifully gowned in a white long-sleeved dress with net neckline, satin bodice and tulle skirt. Her headdress was of orange blossoms and she carried red roses. The bride was attended by Miss Theresa Coveney, wearing a pink crepe gown with satin bodice, crepe neckline and three-quarter length sleeves. Her flowers were pink and white carnations.

Mr. Jesse Garrison, Carrying Place, attended the groom.

The wedding reception was held at Glen Miller Community Hall, decorated with summer flowers. The bride's mother received in a Nile green suit with brown accessories and a corsage of white roses, assisted by the groom's mother, who wore a blue and white striped silk dress with black accessories and a corsage of red and white roses.

For the wedding trip to Toronto and Peterborough, the bride chose a lovely yellow wool dressmaker suit with white accessories. On their return, the young couple will reside in Carrying Place.

Women's Activities

WOOLER W.I.

Wooler — The monthly meeting of the Women's Institute was held in the townhall on Tuesday afternoon.

The First Vice President, Mrs. P. Gooding, occupied the chair and opened the meeting. During the business period it was decided to give a special prize at the Agricultural Fair on a vegetable salad.

The guest speaker was Mr. Percy Gooding, Weed Inspector for Northumberland County. In opening his address he outlined his duties and said this is a new department, it having been introduced at the last sitting of the legislature. There are many bad weeds, one of the worst being the common barberry. It harbors spores that are a cause of rust on wheat. Wild carrot is also a serious menace. Chicory is another weed that is spreading very fast. Wild mustard, sow thistle, water hemlock and many others were mentioned. Mr. Gooding illustrated his address by showing many of the common weeds found along the roadside and on the farms and by colored charts. One cause of the rapid spread of weeds has been the shortage of labor during the war years.

Mrs. L. H. Rowe moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Gooding for his interesting and practical address.

AIRLINE EXECUTIVE

THE AVONDALE N.A.

The Avondale Neighbors' Aid held their July meeting and picnic at the summer cottage of Mrs. P. Boulton on Thursday afternoon. There was a splendid attendance. Mrs. A. Clare presided, and after a hearty sing-song had been enjoyed, the meeting was called to order and a short business period was conducted, after which Mrs. Jack Chambers and Mrs. Keith Chambers took charge of the program, and invited the ladies out doors where games, sports and contests were held. Everyone entered wholeheartedly into the fun, and many proudly displayed their rewards for their ability.

While the picnic supper was being prepared, swimming was enjoyed by the children, then about 40 sat down to tables bountifully laden with all sorts of good things to eat.

Thanks were extended to Mrs. Boulton for the very enjoyable afternoon which had been spent there.

PLAINFIELD W.I.

Plainifeld — The July meeting of the W.I. was held at the home of Mrs. Blake Parks with an attendance of 25 ladies and 2 children.

Mrs. Elliott presided and opened the meeting with a short poem "Wishing." Community singing followed with Mrs. Joe Gowe as song leader.

Letters of thanks were read from Kenneth Bradshaw and Clayton Mills for the blankets they received from the W.I. and from Miss Lena Latta for the pen and pencil set given her prior to her departure for her home in Florida, and from Mary Emmerson for the flowers sent while ill. It was decided to have a house to house canvass for funds to buy another blanket for a returned veteran.

Miss Annie Hamilton, health convener, had charge of the program. Mrs. Clarence Marshall gave a paper on "Dizziness" and Mrs. Sherman Parks gave a paper on "Infantile Paralysis."

Miss Hamilton conducted a contest on "Counties of Ontario" The hostess served dainty refreshments at the close of the meeting.

CARMEL W.M.S.

The Carmel W.M.S. entertained the Baby Band at the July meeting at the home of Mrs. Milton Ross; fourteen little folk with their mothers were in attendance. Mrs. John Homan, Baby Band leader assisted by Betty Ross and Kathleen Homan provided a program of interest to the little ones, after which Mrs. John Reynolds took charge of the meeting. Readings were given by Mrs. Clare Horton and Mrs. Moorman. Mrs. Reynolds gave the chapter of the Study Book entitled "What of Tomorrow". Mrs. Pitman rendered a solo at the close of the meeting.

Mrs. Ross served refreshments. Several pictures of the little ones were taken on the lawn.

Raspberries

Raspberries are one of the most delicate of the small fruits. They are soft in texture and break down or mould quickly. The mild flavor is easily lost. So raspberries should be kept cool and in a well ventilated place until used.

Raspberries are a traditional July dessert, with or without cream they are always good. They also lend themselves to combination with other foods.

The home economists of the Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture suggest several ways in which raspberries may be used. The Glamor Cake is an elegant party dessert. The Raspberry Sauce served on plain cottage or bread pudding or on blanc mange, junket or ice cream, dressed them up into special desserts too.

And for those who want a really delicious jam, raspberry and red currants together made a good combination.

RASPBERRY SAUCE

1 egg white
pinch of salt
1/3 cup of sugar
1 1/2 cups raspberries
1/2 teaspoon vinegar.

Beat egg white until stiff, add salt and sugar. Crush berries, add vinegar and mix into egg. Beat well. Chill and serve on pudding. Yield about 2 cups.

RASPBERRY AND RED CURRANT JAM

8 cups raspberries
1 1/2 cups red currants
3/4 cup water
3 1/2 cups sugar

Combine raspberries, red currants and water. Bring to boil and simmer covered, for 10 minutes. Add sugar, bring to boil and boil uncovered for 20 minutes, stirring frequently. Pour into hot sterilized jars, cool and seal. Yield about 5 cups.

RASPBERRY GLAMOUR CAKE

CAKE:

4 eggs
3/4 cup fine granulated sugar
3/4 cup all-purpose flour

OR

1 cup less 2 tablespoons pastry flour
pinch of salt
1 teaspoon lemon juice

Separate eggs. Beat yolks until thick and light. Add 1/2 the sugar and beat 5 minutes. Sift flour with salt and fold into the egg yolks. Beat egg whites until stiff. Add remaining 1/2 of sugar, and the salt, fold whites into yolk mixture. Add lemon juice. Pour into two 9-inch layer cake pans. Bake in a moderately slow oven 325°F., for 35 minutes.

FILLING:

1 cup milk
1/3 cup sugar
3 tablespoons flour
2 egg yolks
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
Salt
2 cups raspberries.

Heat milk in a double boiler. Mix flour and sugar, add slowly to hot milk. Stir until thickened. Beat egg yolks until light, pour hot mixture over eggs, return to double boiler. And cook 5 minutes. Add vanilla and salt. Cool. Add raspberries.

MERINGUE

2 egg whites
2 tablespoons sugar

Beat egg whites until stiff Gradually add sugar beating until mixture holds in peaks. Spread on cooled cake with custard-berry mixture. Place other layer on top. Spread meringue over top and bake in a moderately slow oven 325°F., until meringue is brown about 12-15 minutes. Garnish cake with whole berries. 8 servings.

THE DIAPER LINE IS HELD DESPITE OPA

No matter what happens to O.P.A. the diaper line is going to be held; four-year-old Peggy Nevins, who has outgrown the diaper age, illustrates that proposition to the howling disgust of nine-month-old Lisbeth Levy, who is just a rugged inflationist at heart. Not to say that Lisbeth is pinned down or anything like that — she's just being kept in line in accord with announcement of John K. Jones, president of the National Institute of Diaper Services, that he is asking all diaper services throughout the country not to raise the cost of diaper service supply.

BUYERS' STRIKES UNDER WAY THROUGHOUT THE U. S. IN EFFORT TO RETURN OPA AS COST OF LIVING RAPIDLY MOUNTS

Organized groups of buyers are gathering throughout the U. S. to demand return of price controls. A Philadelphia butcher, LEFT, finds himself with lamb and time on his hands as C.I.O. officials and members begin a picket line outside protesting increased food prices. "Meat, all you want," says the enticing sign painted onto the window of the Schultz Grocery Company in St. Louis, CENTRE, but the irate housewives are not having any at $1.00 a pound. Several stores in St. Louis were picketed in this manner. RIGHT, Cadillac Square in Detroit, Mich., was jammed with 70,000 consumers demanding the return of O.P.A. Rapidly mounting cost of living, with milk selling at 20 cents a quart and butter 80 cents a pound, caused the general buyers' strike.

Miss Agatha Chapman Declares Imputations Against Her in Report On Espionage Are Unjustified

Ottawa, July 19 (CP)—Miss Agatha Chapman, Bank of Canada economist, Thursday issued a statement terming the "imputations against me' in the Royal Commission report on espionage were "unjustified" and saying that any suggestions that she was Communist or a member of the Labor Progressive party were "absolutely untrue."

It was her second statement in two days regarding the report which said she had acted as a contact between two alleged Russian agents. Her first statement said she was "shocked" to learn that her name was listed and outlined her family background as grand-daughter of Sir Charles Tupper, one of the fathers of Confederation.

Her statement said in part:-

"Any suggestion that I am a secret member of the Communist party of the Labor Progressive party is absolutely untrue. The fact is that I have never been a member of any Communist organization, nor have I contributed money to any such organization...

"The commission states that certain 'study groups' in which I participated were organized 'Communist cells.' I have never attended a group which answers this description...

"The groups to which the commission apparently refers were informal discussion groups, and not connected with any organization. Participants in these groups represented various points of view. They discussed current public affairs, an activity which the commission has described as 'the cherished right of everyone in a democratic society'.

"The groups were not communistic but were open to many points of view. They were for the purpose of discussion and study, and no program of action...

"The commission states that I arranged secret meetings between Miss Willsher (Kathleen Willsher, former United Kingdom High Commission Office employee) and Mr. Adams (Eric Adams, formerly with the Industrial Development Bank) and 'aided in the communication' between them... I have never arranged any such meetings and never transmitted any such messages between them...

"The commission states that I was 'closely associated' with most of the people charged as a result of their enquiry, and that I knew 'what these people were engaged in'...I was in no accepted sense of the term 'closely associated' with at least six of those mentioned in connection with me, though I was acquainted with them..."

RUNABOUT FOR DISABLED PERSONS

Though originally designed for disabled persons who have first priority on its purchase, this English made single seater Larmer is expected to become popular with women drivers. It is a four-wheeled, 2½-horsepower vehicle and can cruise 30 to 40 miles per hour at 65 miles per gallon. Beyond the wide doors, low step and interchangeable hand and foot controls, there is nothing about it to indicate its design for invalids or disabled persons. It is 7 feet 5 inches long and 2 feet 4 inches wide.

Washington Spotlight

By CLYDE BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, July 19 (CP) — Many believe that when the private papers of President Lincoln are made public they will reveal startling details of the intrigue and behind-the-scenes events which led up to assassination of the great emancipator.

Only one man may know whether or not this is true and the world will not know until July 26, 1947. That man is Dr. C. Percy Powell, an expert in Lincolniana and a staff member of the library of Congress who is working on the job of cataloguing the Lincoln manuscripts.

He works alone in a manuscript room of the library where the private papers of Lincoln have been stored in three great, locked manuscript safes.

When Robert Todd Lincoln, son of the President, died 20 years ago he had arranged these documents be kept closely guarded from public view until 21 years after his death.

The time limit expires July 26 of next year and the library has made it known that there will be no delay in opening the documents to public display after that date.

For that reason, and in keeping with Todd Lincoln's will, Dr. Powell was assigned the three-year task of preparing the documents for exhibition, working under a vow of secrecy.

Probably the first Canadian to study the Lincoln papers will be Senator Gerry McGeer of Vancouver, a great student of Lincoln who once startled a Commons baking committee by declaring that Lincoln's assassination was initiated by a group of international bankers.

Air Commodore Frank Whittle of the Royal Air Force, father of jet propulsion, told an audience here the other day that "anybody who thinks it easy to live with an assumed name is crazy. "He was sent out in 1942 to work with the General Electric Company in Boston on jet propulsion development and it was so "hush-hush" he had to travel incognito. He travelled as Frank Whiteley and said, "I could never remember whether I spelled it with two "e's or one."

Whitehall Notebook

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, July 18 (CP) — Outspoken Labor members take their seats in the House of Commons —and sometimes the Lords—with declarations they will trim away some of the frills. But before long they are grateful for things like orders of precedence which determine who shall go before whom at a public dinner or who shall be considered next in importance to Prime Minister Attlee.

A memorandum issued to government departments by the prime minister's office which explains that Herbert Morrison, Lord President of the Council, is second in the order of precedence, not Ernest Bevin, Foreign Secretary.

Some departments evidently were confused because Anthony Eden, when Foreign Secretary, was considered No. 2 man in the Churchill administration. However, precedence for government purposes is not always guided by the office.

After Mr. Morrison the place of honor goes to Mr. Bevin, followed by Arthur Greenwood, Lord Privy Seal; Hugh Dalton, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Sir Stafford Cripps, President of the Board of Trade.

Chess Consolation: Lewis Silkin, greying Minister of Town and Country Planning, who has found some towns are none too willing to be transformed into new larger communities for the relief of great centres like London, still can forget his troubles in chess.

A year ago he played a match of 17 games against the London branch of the Labor League of Youth. The 17th. opponent, who held him to a draw, was his son.

Labor Guard: Harold Laski, retiring chairman of the Labor Party sometimes criticized by supporters of his own party for his outspoken comments, asked the annual convention at Bournemouth this year to watch its words when foreign affairs were being discussed.

Ministers themselves made clear they no longer could speak as they did at conventions when they did not carry the cares of office. Each of them was keenly anxious that work done in a year in office be approved by the convention which decides labor policy.

The Labor cabinet, under this convention system, probably will have to give an annual accounting in detail to party delegates, an ordeal Conservative and Liberal ministers have avoided in the past.

Brooklyn's Dream of Pennant Turns Into Grisly Nightmare As Cards Perch on Loop Top

Dodgers Look Up for First Time in Long While; Braves Halt Cubs' Victory March; Red Sox Maintain 11-Game Lead in American League

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sport Writer

Brooklyn's fond dream of a 1946 National League pennant has exploded into a grisly nightmare today with the Cardinals back in first place and the Dodgers on a six-game losing binge.

Seven games ahead on the July 4th dividing line, the Dodgers have crashed toward their doom on a fatal western jaunt while St. Louis, safe at home, has eaten up the entire lead and forged ahead by half a game.

All is not lost for the flatbush faithful if the Brooks can pull out of the tailspin before it becomes a habit for the Red Birds still have two long eastern tours before the curtain drops.

The discouraging factor to the Brooks is the certain fact that St. Louis appears to be levelling off for another of its famous stretch drives.

The Phillies, who kept St. Louis out of first place Wednesday, fought hard to bar the door last night but finally lost 5-4. It was the first time the Cards had undisputed possession of the lead since they bowed to the Phils May 21 and dropped down into a tie with Brooklyn.

Shoddy defensive play and inability to bunch hits off Bucky Walters sent the Dodgers down for the sixth time, 4-2, in Cincinnati. Kirby Higbe was charged with his third setback when the Reds broke out with three runs in the third. The Brooks now have won only one game in nine western starts.

Bill Lee halted Chicago Cubs upward march with a six-hit, 9-3 decision for Boston Braves who shelled five hurlers, including loser Clause Passeau for 13 safeties. The result left the Bruins four games off the pace.

Pittsburgh broke Dave Loslo's jinx, downing New York 7-3 after the rookie southpaw had beaten them four straight times. Preacher Roe, who took over when starter Ed Bahr had to bow out due to a pain in his side, was the victor with relief help from Johnny Lanning.

Boston Red Sox maintained their 11-game lead over New York by nosing out Chicago, 3-2 on Tom McBride's third hit and second double.

Joe Gordon's two-run homer in the fourth inning was enough help for Mel Queen in recording his first triumph since his discharge from the United States Army. Queen, a loose-jointed righthander with a blazing fast ball, scattered eight St. Louis hits in his 3-1 success.

Other encouraging news to Yankee fans was the word that shortstop Phil Rissuto probably will rejoin his team mates tomorrow.

Gil Coan's speed enabled Washington to trim Detroit 1-0, in a night game as the rookie outfielder flashed around the bases for an inside-the-park home run in the eighth inning off Dizzy Trout.

Cleveland got to Russ Christopher for five hits and six runs in a big second inning to defeat Philadelphia 7-3.

BASEBALL RULES

STRIKES

Strikes will be called against the batter in the following instances:

1. When he strikes at a pitched ball that does not touch his bat.
2. When the pitcher delivers a fast ball at which the batter makes no attempt to strike.
3. When the batter hits a foul ball which is not caught by an opposing fielder, unless he (the batter) already has two strikes called against him.
4. Any attempted bunt which runs foul and is not legally caught.
5. Any foul tip held by the catcher providing he is within the lines of his position.

Any pitched ball must pass over the plate at the legal height to be called a strike, that is, above the batter's knees and below his shoulders.

All good batters keep one point uppermost in their minds, that is, when they hit the pitch, they must make for first base with all possible speed.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Tom McBride, Red Sox—Scored Mickey Harris with third hit of day for Boston's 3-2 edge over Chicago.

George Case, Indians—Sparked Cleveland's six-run second inning with bases loaded triple in 7 - 3 conquest of Philadelphia.

Ed Heusser, Reds — Handed Brooklyn sixth straight setback by scattering eight hits for 4 - 2 margin.

Bill Lee, Braves — Halted sizzling Cubs with six blows as Boston squared series 9-3.

Al Lopez, Pirates — Clinched Pittsburgh's 7-3 triumph over New York with two run homer in seventh inning.

Whitey Kurowski, Cardinals — Touched off four-run fourth inning with homer as St. Louis regained league lead on 5-4 decision over Phillies.

Joe Gordon, Yankees — Helped Mel Queen down Brownies 3-1, with two-run homer in fourth inning.

Gil Coan, Senators — Broke up scoreless duel between Dutch Leonard and Dizzy Trout with inside-the-park homer for 1-0 Washington victory.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

Maurice Callaghan, who can sail a boat; "judge" a boxing bout; announce the same or emcee a Bingo game with equal gusto and ability, removed his "specs" and between the thud of leather on flesh in the ring above him remarked as an introduction "About that boat race challenge... The gong clanged to end the round, and as the leather-pushers staggered back to their corners, the genial Maurice took his mind off left-hooks and uppercuts and let it drift to spinnakers, balloon jibs and luffs.

He took a lengthy swig from a coke bottle, swept his eyes over the milling boxing faithful, wiped his specs with his handkerchief, looked us squarely in the eyes and drawled, "I see by the paper that Gordie Cook has challenged my boat to a race for the harbor trophy, eh?"

Assured that was right, Maurice flicked a mosquito the size of a young bumble bee from atop his greying thatch, and went on "Well, I guess I'll have to accommodate Gordie—but I can not do it on the date he mentions. I expect to be away and can't possibly race before August 4."

So the race apparently is definitely on, and the boys have a couple of weeks to get ready or get in practice runs. No details have been arranged but it is presumed that the race will be sailed over the regulation course. May the best man win.

• • •

The tense hush of a packed grandstand. A blazing sun shining down on the lush green of the infield. The thud of hoofs as straining horses vie for the lead. Then the roar of the crowd as the horses round into the home stretch. The colorful picture as the mass of humanity rises to its feet as hoofs pound the turf for the wire. All that and the picturesque starting ceremonies that are part and parcel of harness racing, will be here on Wednesday, July 24 when the Kinsmen Club and the Belleville Fair Board stage their second race meet of the season.

According to Messrs. Harry Knott, Kinsmen and Secretary Erle Denyes of the Fair Board some of the finest horses in the country will be here for the event. The trotters and pacers have been active at various meets throughout the district and right now are at the peak of racing training. It should be a show par excellence at the Fair Grounds next Wednesday for lovers of harness racing and those who love the thrill of seeing close sports competition.

• • •

Good old King Hank the Eighth who used to tear whole chickens apart with his fingers, throw the bones over his shoulders and after consuming a small flock, would call for Anne Boleyn and go out and get a snack, was a piker compared to some sports celebrities.

Flaming-haired Torchy Peden, who was a P. T. bloke at the Trenton Air Station in the days when Hitler was dead only from the ears up, when riding at peak form in the six-day bike jaunts consumed 92, that's right ninety two pork chops in one day, according to Jimmy Procia, Chicago, who plans to bring the six-day push-em-around sport back to Canada.

While the western red-head had nothing in common with the royal trencherman of the good old days when in order to get ahead, royalty merely got rid of a wife, and the most of the monarchial necking was done with an axe, he did, according to the loquacious James "take one chop at a bite and toss the bone over his shoulder. Of course, Jimmy went to explain, "they were only small chops, just one good bite, the rest bone. Torchy would eat ten or twelve at a time."

While President Don Thomas of the Belleville Baseball League will never be a Caruso, or even a Spike Jones, that ditty you hear him humming these days sounds suspiciously like "My teams are gettin' better all the time."

The Flyer-Batawa game had the fans on their feet for practically the entire game waiting for the breaks that never came. It was purely a pitchers' fray and both hurlers turned in sterling efforts. Two extra innings failed to break the deadlock and both slingers were going strong when the figurative six o'clock whistles blew. Wotta playoff series this is going to be.

• • •

And the battle of the Alemite was not less thrilling. "Chuck" Barriage (someone dubbed him 'Turk' after that fine hurling job of a week or so ago, because he's apparently improving with age) for SWACOS and "Lefty" Hall, Latta southpaw hooked up in a mound duel that was broken up in the last heat by the trusty war bludgeon of one Walter Gerow Jr. Latta tied up the pastime 3-3 in the fourth and the squads went scoreless until the bottom of the seventh, when Gerow came through with a thundering triple that had victory plastered all over it. Earlier in the pastime, Walt leaned a little heavier on his shillalagh, and pounded the pill for a homer.

With all teams nearing their form peak and improving daily, the local league playoffs should be a thrilling series all round. With the schedule a little better than half over, and with the former weaker sisters of the loop starting to show form, the race may resolve itself into a close one near the schedule end.

• • •

And the Belleville Baseball Association squads compare favorably with those of the immediate district with which they will tangle in the playdowns, if exhibition tilts can be judged a criterion. Batawa has split a series with the Peterborough Marines, leaders of their loop and a Congress entry who may or may not meet the RCAF Flyers in the Congress elimination series next week. Flyers have split a series with the Port Hope squad, while Bata has taken the measure of Queen's U in two games. The studes however are a second division team in the Kingston City League.

• • •

Which indicates that the fans in the city and district are due for some thrillers come playoff and playdown time.

What's Doing in Sport

By The Canadian Press

An offer to put up a $5,000 cup for a special single sculls race between Jack Kelly of Philadelphia and Jean Sephariades of France, has been withdrawn by Michael E. Murphy, Philadelphia oil man and rowing enthusiast.

Murphy said he cancelled the offer after Kelly's father ruled out all possibility of the race. The younger Kelly recently was defeated at Henley-on-Thames, England, by Sephariades for the Diamond Sculls championship.

Uttermost, star 1945 three-year-old of the Carr Hatch Stable, finished second, three lengths behind Top Beau, in a $3,000 claiming race yesterday at Jamaica Park to pay $4 to place.

The U. S. Amateur Athletic Union is sending a 28 man team from New York to compete with Canadian track and field stars in the Canadian National Recreation Association sports at Montreal, Aug. 3.

Francisco Segura of Ecuador defeated Geoff Paish of Britain in three sets yesterday as the French international tennis championships got under way at Paris.

Rudolph Horvath of Windsor is the Canadian representative in the National Public Links Golf Tournament which opens Monday at Denver, Colo., with contestants entered from 30 States and Hawaii.

In addition to losing games recently, two pitchers of the Brooklyn Dodgers, Kirby Higbe and Hugh Casey, lost cash and their pay cheques when a burglar entered their hotel room at Cincinnati yesterday.

Louisville Colonels of the American Association announced yesterday they were appealing the suspension for the balance of the season of Manager Harry Leibold by President W. G. Bramham of the National Association of Minor Leagues. The Louisville manager allegedly assaulted Umpire Forrest Peters during a game June 16.

An Irishman won the Irish Open Golf championship yesterday for the first time—and a pro from Belfast, at that. The winner was Fred Daly who turned in an aggregate 288 over the Portmarnock, Eire, course.

The professionals won the annual gentlemen versus players cricket match at London, England, yesterday by an innings and 140 runs. In the first day's play, the players had declared at 399 for five wickets.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, July 19 (AP) — Baseball fans who sat through those drab wartime seasons in the hope that they'd see a great improvement as soon as the fighting was over now know the worst... Baseball isn't much better... "We thought we'd get something and didn't," one smart baseball man explains... "We thought we'd get some great players back but, generally speaking, we only got more players... Baseball isn't more than 25 per cent better this year and the big difference is that we don't have to string along with a player who is slumping or loafing... We can bench him or fire him and have somebody to put in his place."... As an example he points to the Cubs: "They haven't improved their club, except for Schmitz, but they figure to finish one-two... The Dodgers are all through; they never did have a real major league club."

Headline Headliner

"Road Scraper wins by two lengths at Charles Town" (Washington Post headline)... No doubt a harrowing experience for folks who had bet on horses.

Thrilling Hurling Duels Feature Games in City Baseball League

Trenton Flyers - Batawa Battle to 1-1 Tie in Overtime Game; SWACOS Nose Out Latta in Seven-Inning Thriller With Gerow Breaking Up Game in 7th With Triple

Star moundsmen of the Belleville Senior Baseball League hooked up in thrilling hurling duels last night when the loop-leading Trenton RCAF Flyers and second-place Batawa Shoemen with Gibb and "Smoky" Smith in the star roles battled to a nine-innings 1-all tie, and SWACOS behind the veteran "Chuck" Barriage nosed out Latta's lefthander Hall 4-3 when Walt Gerow Jr., drove out a towering triple in the last innings to break the deadlock.

Batawa 1, RCAF Flyers 1.

Batawa sent their ace southpaw "Smoky" Smith to the mound at the Trenton Air Station diamond in an effort to cop the all-important game.

Manager "Moose" Matthews countered with his starry righthander Gibb and the big husky came through with one of the finest hurling chores of the current season.

Backed up by some outstanding fielding on the part of both squads, the hurlers went through six scoreless innings with neither team showing any signs of cracking. Then came what appeared at the time to be the break of the game.

Holdershaw, Flyer 1st baseman cracked a sharp single through centre but was thrown out at second when Garbas reached first on the put-out. White, then drove a hit to the right of second base putting two runners aboard. Lee fanned and Matthews went to first on Normandins error, Garbas coming home on the bobble. Roberts flied out to end the rally.

But the Flyer lead was shortlived. In the seventh with one out, Harry, Bata leftfielder drew a base on balls. Miklas whiffed and Solmes drove out a sharp double to score Harry. Wagar smashed another two base hit but Robertson's fine throw from left field nipped Solmes at the plate for the third out.

And that was all there was to the scoring. The sides went down practically in order until the end of the seven innings game and also for two extra innings.

Smith was touched for six hits two of them doubles by White and Lee, and he struck out 10 issuing no walks. Gibb was nicked for seven safeties, also giving up two two-base hits, struck out 9 and Walked 1.

Solmes and Peacock got two hits each for the Shoemen with Holdershaw and White getting a like amount for the Flyers. Holdershaw provided the fielding feature with a brilliant one-hand stab of Spencer's liner in the 8th. innings.

SWACOS 4—Latta 3.

Walt Gerow's towering triple in the seventh innings with one on board broke up a sterling pitching duel between the veteran SWACO hurler "Chuck" Barriage and Hall, tall Latta lefthander at the Alemite Field after the teams had battled scoreless following Latta's tying the score in the fourth.

Fitzpatrick had reached first by virtue of Chapman's error, Rowbotham went out and Gerow who previously had poled out a home run drove the ball to deep centre for a game-winning triple with Fitz cantering across the plate.

Despite the fact that nine errors were chalked up all told, both hurlers turned in a fine mound chore. Barriage allowed six safeties with Hall granting the same amount. The former whiffed one and walked three with Hall striking out three and issuing no passes.

Both teams scored singles in the second innings and SWACOS went into a two run lead with a brace of markers tallied in the third. Rowbotham, first man up tripled into deep left field and Gerow got hold of one he liked and sent it far and wide into centrefield for a home run.

Latta tied the score in the fourth when Vern Goyer reached first by virtue of an error, and scored when Chapman drove out a triple. Hall came through with a timely single scoring Chapman and that was the scoring until the last innings.

Gerow was the SWACO star with a homer and a triple. Rowbotham got a triple and a single, and Elliott donated a double and Latchford a single. For Latta Chapman smashed out a triple and Goyer, Rogers, Jarrell, Weeks and Hall hit singles.

SWACOS turned in some fielding highlights with three double plays, while Jarrell, Latta second baseman made a fine running catch over his shoulder in the 6th.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

The partner I hate is the obstinate skate who seems not to care what is best for our pair. A unified trend, if he took any pains, would easily end to our ultimate gains.

The rule is to return the suit partner has led. Lead back the fourth best of an original holding of four or more. Lead back the highest of an original holding of less than four.

There are deviations from these, of course. You do not lead back a fourth best if you must unblock for your partner. You do not return highest if you will give opponent an extra trick thereby.

Thus, what is an early duty of leader's partner? To determine how many cards the leader started with in that suit. The nature of the return lead may as well depend on this.

The leader may have a chance to take tricks in a long suit. He may not be able to do so until the opponent top card is gone. If so, partner of the leader should help to force out such a top card.

South is declarer at three no-trump when the clubs are like this:

NORTH
♣9 8 7

WEST EAST
♣J 6 4 3 2 ♣K Q 5

SOUTH
♣A 10

Your partner in the west starts out with an opening lead of the club deuce. You get right in there with the queen from your east hand. Since this is in no-trump, you may well expect south to have the ace.

With only two clubs, south may not use up his ace on the first trick. If he holds up, you return a club. If necessary, you keep on returning clubs until the ace is forced out.

Which club do you return to the second trick? The king, by all means. If south takes the second club, you do not want to be left holding the king. It would block your partner's suit.

This is probably a very simple play to you. But many players do not picture it as you do. At least, not until too late.

Some bridge plays that are late may as well be never.

Hollywood Column

Hollywood, July 19 (AP)—Senator Claghorn of radio fame wants you all to know he is happy to be in southern, I say Southern California.

The Senator, alias radio announcer Kenny Delmar, has arrived on the Southern Pacific and a cloud of mint julep to appear in a picture, called "It's a Joke, Son."

This is Delmar's second trip to California. Seventeen years ago he landed in San Diego where he worked as a bell captain in a hotel.

Because of all the fibbing he receives, I asked the Bostonian if he ever regretted dreaming up the Senator.

"No, the old boy has done all right by me," he said, "and I am very fond of him. But not my wife and son, Kenny— they hate him."

Having met the portrayer of President Truman, Roman Bohnen, it was inevitable that I should see the man who portrays Franklin Roosevelt in "The Beginning of The End." He is Godfrey Tearle, who was born in New York but has spent most of his acting days in Britain.

Even without the makeup, the resemblance to the late President is remarkable. The M.G.M. commissary falls in a hush when he enters for lunch. He told me when he was President of Actors' Equity in London the members made him wear FDR-like pince nez glasses, presumably to provide great authority.

I watched Tearle as he did a scene in the White House with Dr. Vannevar Bush, played by Jonathan Hale. He exchanged banter, laughed, glanced at Fala, and puffed on a cigaret holder.

Errol Flynn hears his father has arrived in New York and will join him for his yacht cruise... Flynn's father is professor in the University of Dublin... First day of dancing with Gene Kelly was too tough for Marie McDonald. She suffered a sprained ankle... We are told that a stray kitten held up shooting on "The Magnificent Doll" by its mewing... Want to know where it was found?...Above the stage on the catwalk, of course.

AT THE McCARTHY — Together on the screen for the first time are George Brent and Lucille Ball, seen as husband and wife in Universal's romantic comedy-drama, "Lover Come Back," opening today at the McCarthy Theatre, in which the two popular players are co-starred with glamorous and talented Vera Zorina.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By GERALD LOUGHEED
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, July 19 — (CP)—Although there's a man-sized entry list for the Royal Canadian Henley Regatta at St. Catharines, Ont., July 25-27, the shortage of equipment bogey has stepped in to cut out a few would-be contestants from this year's event.

The scarcity of rowing shells has stumped some cities — notably Fort William, Ont., Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., and Winnipeg—but come next year it's expected they will be launching representative boats at St. Catharines.

Canadian clubs get most of their shells from United States and England with a few from Australia tossed in. However, a year's delay is being quoted on orders by the makers.

Speaking of the kayaks themselves — the singles cost about $250 apiece and are owned usually by the oarsmen themselves. The larger ones generally are provided by the club because an "eight" bears a price tag of about $2,000.

History Repeating?

Gaye Stewart, Fort William product who spends his winters sniping goals in a Toronto Maple Leafs hockey suit, underwent an appendectomy in Toronto last week.

The operation was a success but doubtless coach Happy Day shivered a bit when he thought back a few years to when Calgary's Sweeney Schriner had one about the same time of year . . . Sweeney went through the following season at only a so-so clip.

Harry Lumley, Detroit Red Wings' goalie, is keeping in shape in the off season this year by playing defence for Owen Sound Georgians of the Senior Ontario Lacrosse Association.

What's Next Dept.

Ivan (Hamilton Spectator) Miller reports that Hamilton Cardinals of the Pony Baseball League—Pennsylvania, Ontario and New York for those not familiar—are trying something a bit different in the way of drawing fans to Scott Park there.

The Cards' management will lash out with copies of the St. Louis Sporting News — the ardent ball fan's bible — to the first 200 men to pass through the turnstiles. In addition there'll be draws from seat stubs numbers for 10 pairs of nylon stockings. If the luck recipients are men they shouldn't have any trouble explaining to the "Mrs." what kept them so late at the ball game!

Port Arthur Miss Crowned Queen Of Junior Tennis

Ottawa, July 19 — (CP) — Queen of the Canadian junior court today is Winnifred Harpell of Port Arthur — sole player of the junior tourney to emerge a triple winner, with triumphs in the singles, women's and mixed doubles classes.

Practically all the 1946 Dominion champions were crowned yesterday as the junior tourney wound up at Rideau Lawn Tennis Club.

Only remaining match to be decided is the junior men's singles—held over until July 26 when Lorne Main of Vancouver meets Colin Maass of Westmount, Que., in a featured match at the height of the Dominion senior championships next week.

Miss Harpell, seeded No. 1 in the tourney, last night defeated No. 2-ranker Jacqueline Merner of Kitchener, after a hard-fought, relentless duel which went 3-6, 6-3, 6-4.

It was the third championship match in which the girls had met this year. Previously, Miss Harpell downed Miss Merner in the 1946 Ontario finals, while Miss Merner had beaten the lakehead player in this year's Eastern Canada championships.

Their singles match decided, the girls turned in an unbeatable performance on the same side of the net, teaming against Shirley Stotesbury and Rita Boisvert of Ottawa and winning easily, 6-1, 6-1.

Also decided yesterday was the junior men's doubles, won by Lorne Main and Jimmy McGregor of Toronto after a sparkling match with Colin Maass and Bruce Logie of Toronto, by a 6-1, 6-4, 5-7, 6-4 score.

Other Dominion champions for 1946, who played out their finals matches earlier, were these:—

Junior mixed doubles: Winnifred Harpell and Bruce Logie.

Boys' (15 and under) singles: Andre De Chevigny, Quebec.

Girls' (15 and under) singles: Patricia Lowe, Ottawa.

FATHER OF MISSING PILOT JOINS SEARCH

Sturgeon Falls, Ont., July 19—(CP) — J. S. Taylor of Winnipeg, stepfather of Flt.-Lt. William McKenzie, pilot of the missing jet-propelled Gloster Meteor plane, arrived here Thursday as the search for the aircraft continued in the nearby Lavigne area.

Officials continued to receive reports of a low-flying aircraft near the west end of Lake Nipissing June 29, the day the jet plane disappeared on the Kapuskasing-Toronto leg of a flight from Edmonton.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was eating her grapefruit diet this morning, saying to pop, William, what would you say to an old fashion dinner tonight, just made up exclusively of your tried and true favorites?

I'd say, Step right in, gentlemen, let me help you off with your things, Mr. and Mrs. Vitamin, make yourselves at home, Mr. and Mrs. Callorie, pop said. An old fashion menu deserves an old fashion greeting, he said, and ma said, I knew you'd take kindly to the idea. I've got the complete menu mapped out in my mind, starting with old fashion onion soop and ending with old fashion strawberry cake, she said.

I'll be home exter erly to enjoy the smell, pop said, and ma said, Can you guess the main course?

By gollies dont tell me it's fried chickin? pop said, and ma said, You've guessed it to a tea, old fashion fried chickin with an old fashion creem gravey.

I'd bring a frend home with me, but I don't know anybody except myself who's deserving of such a repast, pop said, and ma said, There's only one serious obstacle. Everybody is suppose to do their best to abstain from bread and flour till Europe gets back on its starving feet, and every single item I ve mentioned depends on bread or flour. For instance you know very well that you would refuse to give onion a 2nd glance if it didn't have whole slices of bread floating idly on top, and old fashion fried chickin simply cries aloud for bread crumbs, and the base of creem gravey is flour, and you cant make real strawberry short cake without baking biskitts. So I think we'll have some nice boiled fish and plain boiled potatoes tonight, William, she said.

Okay, Europe comes ferst, but I'll insist on throwing a few small bread crumbs to a few small sparrows ferst, so I'll be sure not to forget thmat charity begins at home, pop said.

Being the end of the subject.

FAITHFUL

BY MARGARET GORMAN NICHOLS

CHAPTER 11

Iris stood between the plain white cottage curtains and looked down the lighted street. "And I am mad tonight," she thought, "quite mad. I'd give a year of my life just to be kissed by him. Just once." and smiled. "I feel very much as if I were a tribal bride about to be carried off."

When Mark was an hour late, she was still patient. At nine, still waiting, she debated whether or not to call his apartment, but Iris, severely tutored by Selina, was never the pursuer. At ten the bedroom was warm and close. It was impossible to be patient now, expecting the sound of his car yet knowing it would not come tonight. Iris's tall heels paced the rug.

What had happened to him? Nothing serious, of course. Perhaps he'd forgotten. Perhaps at the country club he'd met some one—perhaps Camilla, and she had made him forget moonlight on the Potomac tonight.

Late that night, seeing her lamp still burning, Tommy opened her bedroom door and went in. Iris was sleeping, fully dressed, and her face had never been lovelier than it was now, pressed against a green pillow. But it was not a restful sleep. Tommy bent over her and his mouth tightened because there were dried tears on the green pillow.

At breakfast the next morning he said, "I had some great news from the station manager yesterday. I'm going to be transferred to the office. I came in to tell you about it last night but you—you were asleep."

"I'm so glad about your transfer, Tommy. No more grease jobs, no more dirty hands. And you can go to night school in the fall. Last night...."

"You don't have to tell me. It doesn't matter."

"No, I suppose not." She lowered her lashes. "It can't matter but it does—terribly."

It began to rain, one of those fitful spring rains, when she was on the street car. The man in the seat with her noisily rattled his newspaper as he turned the pages.

For a moment the world went black to Iris, and to the astonishment of the strange man she seized the paper, read a few lines, and then frantically forced her way to the front of the car and got off. In the rain he saw her hail a cab and then he turned to his paper again.

There was a headline that Mark Christian had been in a motor accident yesterday not far from his club. His companion had been a woman named Camilla Winters.

The hospital corridor was cool and quiet. Nurses walked on cushioned feet and doctors moved about with quick efficiency. The calmness of the place steadied Iris as she stepped in out of the rain and walked to the desk.

"I'd like to see Mr. Christian —if I may," she said and the starched young woman looked up to see a lovely girl with a white face and frightened eyes.

"Mr. Christian? Oh, yes of course. Room thirty-nine on the third floor," and as her eyes followed Iris to the elevator she was thinking that this visibly trembling girl was quite different from the other well dressed woman who had asked the way to Mark's room. She smiled, thinking, too, that she must find a way to see this man herself.

A student nurse on the elevator held a tiny bundle of humanity. She parted the blanket to let Iris see the pink wrinkled face. "Isn't he cute? He just arrived."

"The elevator boy said, "Third floor," and Iris stepped into a long lonely hall.

In spite of all the rushing thoughts there was still time to half murmur, "Even if he isn't for me, let nothing happen to him." And she thought how desolate and bleak it would be never to hear his deep casual voice over the telephone asking, "Will you go out with me tonight?" The promise of everything would cease if....

At room thirty-nine she steadied her hand on the door-knob and then opened it.

His face looked thin and drawn against the white pillow. His eyes were closed but the black brows were drawn together, indicating that he had suffered, was suffering still. She stood against the door, scarcely breathing lest she awaken him.

"Who is it?" he asked.

"It's—Iris."

"Iris!"

And he opened his eyes and held out one hand and smiled at her.

"You'll have to excuse the left hand. My right one is pretty badly battered. Last night..it's not very clear..but I tried to make them understand I was breaking an important date. But I never made them understand because of what I was saying was semi-conscious gibberish. Forgive me."

Her throat ached. "There's nothing to forgive, Mark. I didn't know anything about it until I saw a paper on the street car. I—I forgot everything."

"Even the rain," he said, seeing the bright drops in her hair.

With a gesture more significant than words he put his lips in the palm of her hand and closed his eyes. What had happened yesterday was still like a hazily remembered dream. Camilla had met him on the club steps, saying, "Do you mind my being excess baggage, Mark? My car still isn't repaired. The Bensons brought me out and then left suddenly. But you'll have to wait until I get out of these tennis clothes."

He had waited impatiently, knowing that Iris was waiting, and when finally she had come, he had driven with more than his usual high speed. On a sharp pebbled curve a tire blew out, the car swerved into a ditch, and he had a brief memory of Camilla's horror-stricken face.

Iris ventured, "How is Miss Winters?"

"I wish I knew. No one will tell me. They don't want me to feel responsible for what has happened to her. I've got only a bad arm that will mend in time. I don't know why I couldn't have gotten the worst of it. Iris, do you know what this means?"

"I think I do. If she's disfigured you'll think it's your duty."

"Iris, look at me." He sat upright, took both her hands, and looked at her, frowning. "This isn't the way I wanted it to be. But I may never have the opportunity now to tell you as I wanted to tell you. Yesterday I knew I'd waited long enough, that I couldn't wait any longer to tell you. Don't you know—from the first minute I saw you I haven't thought of anything except to have you with me for the rest of my life? You know it now, Iris. I love you and I want you on any terms, at any sacrifice. You can't spend the rest of your life with a boy you promised to marry at a hysterical moment two years ago. I'm saying a lot. I've got to. There's not much time. Yesterday I was determined to take your life and your future in my hands. Today—a tire blowout may change all that."

"But she wouldn't..she couldn't ..It's not fair."

He smiled wryly. "There is such a thing as honor among men and women, too. You have it, Iris. Why did we wait for this to happen before we could be frank? I can't ask you to marry me now. I can only tell you how much I've thought of you, loved you, wanted you. Now I'm beginning to realize how you feel about Joe. You can't turn away from his need of you. I can't turn away from Camilla if she needs me. She's an old friend. She has no money. You're crying, Iris...."

"Because I love you, Mark, because last night was a dream that can never be for both of us — because now we're closer yet further apart than we've ever been. I've been tied. Now you're tied. Mark, I've loved you and tried to deny it to myself. I called it infatuation, but it isn't. What I felt for Joel was infatuation. Not this! You see I've got to say this quickly because I may never be able to say it again. I love you so much this..this is like a part of me being torn away...."

"It may not be as terrible as it seems now. Look at me, Iris."

"I can't see you and I hate to cry like this. I never felt that I was unfaithful to Joel when I saw you...I've felt I belonged so absolutely to you... oh, it's so mixed up. But one thing is clear. I love you, Mark. That I'm sure of."

"And there was never anyone so sweet and lovely as you, Iris, and as gallant and strong and all the other fine things you are. Beautiful," he said, "with tears rolling down your face. Iris, it took something like this to break through that strong reserve of yours."

"When I thought I'd lost what I knew I could never have ... Joel has given me a ring, my engagement ring. He's planning our marriage. Mark, as much as I love you, that's how strongly I'm bound to him."

door, said apologetically, "Sorry, door, sai dapologetically, "Sorry, but the time is up."

Iris drew her hands away. "I had no idea so much could be said in such a few minutes."

"You thought I'd hold your hands and love your presence in the room and not say it. That's what I've been doing. Where are you going now? Not back to the office. Not home, certainly. I'll have the nurse call Louis and explain. Go to Mary's for the day. Iris, we've talked only about the worst side of it. There must be a bright side. You know, my dear, you and I are still young and courageous; we know that this is something we'll never lose. And Iris, there are still yachts for sale, and the Mediterranean is still blue."

"And I love you all the more because we are not bound to each other by anything except each other. No duties. No obligations. Nothing to pay back. If I don't go, Mark, the nurse won't be so polite the next time."

"She's a nice young woman, that nurse. She thought I was talking about my favorite flower when. I was calling you last night."

She said, "Last night," felt his strong fingers grip hers, and walked quickly to the door.

The Mediterranean might still be blue and the sky sunny and warm above it but she would not see it with him. "Think clearly!" she told herself. "Look pain in the face! Mark is lost to you forever. Last night was an illusion you both created, and the illusion is all you will ever have. The Fate that drew you together is tearing you apart, thrusting Camilla between you. Not moonlight on the Potomac to hear him say he loved you but a hospital room, white and clean and cool, and Mark's strong features on the pillow and tears rolling down your face and words rushing to be said while there was still time.... I love you. I love you. We have never been closer nor farther apart than we are at this moment. 'Epitaphs! Why not? Why not write it now? 'Here lies love'."

Mary North lighted another cigaret and squinted through the smoke.

"I know Camilla," said Mary, petite in velvet lounging pajamas. "She'll hold this over Mark. She and her whole tribe. Camilla is broke and desperate. The new clothes were her last fling at Paris. Some one told me her first words when she stepped off the boat were, 'Is mark married?'"

"And when she was told he was seeing somebody's secretary, that didn't worry her," said Iris, leaning her tired head on the back of the chair. "I've never fought for anything in my life but I would fight to keep him from marrying her. No woman of any pride would want such a marriage."

"Penniless women forget their pride, my dear, and put security above it."

"We were so close to everything we wanted last night."

"And what are you going to do now?"

"Marry Joel in the autumn. It's what I was meant to do, I guess. Last night, Mary, Mark was going to take my future in his hands and I would have given it to him. Today I'm Joel's fiancee. I had to choose between them. Now Camilla has made my choice for me."

Mrs. Wade met Iris on the porch.

"Have you seen the papers? What a terrible thing! Iris, have you...."

"Yes, I've seen him."

"There was a woman with him. The papers said her face.."

Iris' back straightened.

"What did it say about her face?"

"It was burned."

Iris said, "I'm going upstairs. I'm not at home tonight to anyone."

"But...."

"I can't talk about it, Mother."

"Well, all I've got to say is their being together looks very strange. The papers intimated that society was expecting the announcement of their engagement. I don't believe it. He's in love with you. Anyone with eyes can see that."

Iris was too weary to listen.

She was late getting to the office the next day, so late in fact that two patients were in the waiting room, and there was no time for a friendly chat with Louis.

"THE PLACE OF HATS"

Fort Erie, July 19 (CP) — The Fort Erie Times Review in its 50th. anniversary issue yesterday disclosed that the town was once known as "Grash-Gah-Geh" —the Place of Hats — after a battle between the French and Algonquins in the 17th. Century sent a shower of hats down the Niagara River.

W.B. Cleland, 67, Industrialist, Dies In St. Catherines

St. Catharines, July 19 —(CP) —William Brown Cleland, 67, industrialist and noted show horse breeder, died last night after a lingering illness.

For 14 years he was vice-president and managing director of Distillers Seagrams and for the last 20 years was president of the Jordon Wine Company, Limited.

He was well known for his show horses and jumpers, which won prizes at shows across the continent. His farm at Troy, Ont., was a showplace for the horses and a herd of purebred Jersey cattle.

During the First Great War Mr. Cleland was a member of the Imperial Munitions Board as director of aeronautical supplies.

Mr. Cleland was interested in all sports and did much to encourage young men in the development of teamwork and co-operation. Last year he presented the Calder Cleland Memorial Trophy to the Canadian association of amateur oarsmen for annual competition among secondary school teams at the Royal Canadian Henley Regatta.

Mr. Cleland is survived by his widow, Evelyn McLaughlin Cleland; two sons and a son, Calder, was killed in action with the Royal Canadian Air Force during the Second Great War.

Funeral services will be held Saturday. Burial will be in Hamilton.

Firemen of 10 Stations Answer 2-Alarm Call

Toronto, July 19 (CP)—A stubborn two-alarm fire in a downtown warehouse section last night was brought under control by firemen from 10 stations, using four ladder trucks and seven hose wagons, after it had threatened to sweep through the entire section Damage was not immediately estimated from the blaze which broke out in the Beaver Speciality Co., building on Church Street shortly after 8 p.m., and swept through the second and third floors to the roof. Two firemen were cut by falling glass as they walked between the burning building and an adpoining one.

STUDY USE MADE OF SUPPLIES SENT

TO RUSSIA IN 5 YEARS

Moscow, July 19 —(AP)— Seven Americans have arrived in Moscow to find out first hand just what use was made of $90,000,000 worth of supplies which the American Society for Russian relief shipped to the Soviet Union during the last five years. Peter Grimm, president of the New York State Chamber of Commerce, heads the group.

GANNETS ATTACK PEDESTRIANS.

Erieau, July 19 (CP) — Hundreds of gannets, nesting in the reeds by the low-lying marshlands of the Lake Erie shore near here, have been attacking pedestrians who venture along the paths near the marsh. The birds have been known to fly at humans in the past, but this year they have increased both in numbers and courage — knocking off hats and pecking the faces of those who pass the marshes.

CANOEIST FINED FOR INTOXICATION

Stratford, July 19 — (CP) — Three young men who went canoeing and took along certain stimulants here recently found the two don't mix. They overturned their craft, abandoned it and started to swim for shore. When they arrived the police were there awaiting them and arrested one on a charge of being intoxicated. He later paid a $10 fine. The other two were able to stagger off when they reached shore.

TORONTO STOCK MARKET

Toronto, July 19 — (CP)—The mining groups tumbled today for losses of one and half points or more in the early session on the exchange and the industrials weakened .54 in the index. Western oils held a minor index gain. Volume was again light at 624,000 shares for the first three hours.

Utilities were a bit stronger and the papers, liquors, textiles and miscellaneous issues were down.

Sherritt-Gordon touched 2.15 in an early slump and it then improved to 2.25 for a net loss of 8 cents.

Giant gained 25 cents to 5.50 while a soft note marked the gold list generally. Losses of 10 to 20 cents were showing at early afternoon for Teck Hughes, Cochenour Willans, Chesterville, Madsen, O'Brien, MacDonald and Sylvanite.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET

New York, July 19 —(AP)— A general downward drift characterized today's stock market proceedings.

Feeble recovery efforts at the opening failed to attract adherents and most leaders soon edged into the minus column. Dealings, though, were among the slowest of the last several weeks. Declines of fractions to a point or more predominated near the fourth hour although scattered gains appeared.

Among the Canadians on the exchange, Hiram Walker lost 3 at 137½. Other changes were small, Canadian Pacific down ⅛ at 18¾, Distillers Seagram down ¾ at 27½, Dome Mines up ⅛ at 22 and International Nickel up ⅛ at 37¼.

HOGS

Toronto, July 19 —(CP)— Grade A. dressed, bacon-hogs, were unchanged at Stratford, to farmers $21.50 to truckers $21.65 with the market unsettled, it was reported early today.

Barrie reported an increase of 10 cents cwt., at $20.85 delivered. Hull was unchanged $20.75 delivered.

Brantford was unchanged $20.40 plus transportation.

Weekly Livestock Review

Toronto, July 19 (CP)—Prices on good to choice weighty steers were 25 to 50 cents lower, in trade on the livestock market here this week while other grades of killing cattle sold steady to firm. Veal calf prices were firm. Hogs closed 50 cents lower, lambs were 50 cents higher. The drop in the price of weighty steers was attributed by dealers to the imminent re-imposition of ceilings on red and blue quality beef.

The cattle run was approximately 1,500 head heavier than last week but about equal to that of the same week a year ago. Packers were cautious in buying good to choice steers and several loads offered Monday were carried over until Wednesday. The best heavies brought $14.50 to $15 with one load selling Monday at $15.25. Plain weighty steers sold downward to $12. Butcher steers and heifers were firm, the best light steers making $14 with a few at $14.50. Common butcher steers sold downward to $10. Butcher heifers ranged from $10 for common up to $13.50 for good.

Boning steers and heifers sold down to $8. Butcher cows moved rapidly at firm prices, the best making $10.25 to $11 with common downward to $8.25. Canners and cutters were steady at $5 to $7.50. Butcher bulls were firm, the best making $10.25 to $11 with light bolognas downward to $8. About 1,000 head western stockers, mostly plain to medium quality, were received. These moved slowly at steady prices. Fair to medium light stockers were $11.25 to $11.75 with a few picked lots at $12. Common stockers sold downward to $9. Ordinary milkers and springers were $85 to $125 each. Good to choice vealers were $14 to $15 with a few $15.50 with common downward to $10. Grassers were $8 to $10 cwt.

The hog market was unsettled with buyers trying for lower prices. Eventually Monday's offerings were settled for at $2.25 for Grade A, $20.85 Grade B1 with sows mostly $18.50. On Tuesday the prices were a further 25 cents lower most settlements being made at $21 Grade A, $20.60 Grade B1 and $18 for sows, all on a dressed weight basis.

Lambs sold, good ewes and wethers $17-17.50, bucks at $1 cwt, discount. Cull lambs brought mostly $13. A few yearling lambs sold from $9 to $13. Sheep were up to $8.50 for good light ewes with heavies, and bucks bringing $5-7 and culls downward to $3.

TWO SISTERS REUNITED

Waukegan, Ill., July 19 (AP)— Two sisters who had not seen each other since they were babies were reunited when they themselves gave birth to baby daughters two hours apart. Mrs. Antionette J. Griggins, wife of Anthony Griggins, and Mrs. Mary Hibel, wife of August Hibel, both adopted in childhood, had been living seven blocks apart without either knowing the other was practically a neighbor.

A floor-pacing conversation in hospital by the two prospective fathers led to the discovery they were brothers-in-law.

Candy Good for Teeth of Children Says Doctor

London, July 19 — (CP) — Candy and cookies given to children the last thing at night are good for their teeth, Dr. J. D. King of the Medical Research Council told the National Conference of Maternity and Child Welfare. He said experiments at an orphanage resulted in decayed teeth becoming hard and healthy through eating candy at nights.

LEAFS SPLIT TWIN BILL WITH LEADING ROYALS

Cop Second 2-1 in 10-Inning Battle; Bisons Clip Wings and Jersey Wins Second Straight Over Slipping Chiefs

(By The Associated Press)

Righthander Johnny Podgajny who broke an International League record when he appeared in 66 games for Baltimore Orioles in 1945 again is putting in plenty of overtime for the Orioles.

The lanky twirler who won 20 games last year made his 22nd appearance of the season last night since coming back to the Orioles from Cleveland Indians of the league late in May.

Podgajny made his fifth start of the campaign and blanked Newark Bears, 3-0 in the first game of a doubleheader. It was the 26-year-old tosser's second shutout and sixth triumph of the season.

The Orioles were held to two hits by Herb Karpel and scored all of their runs in the seventh frame with the aid of two errors. Podgajny gave up five hits.

Ray Poat made it a clean sweep for the Orioles by blanking the Bears, 8-9 in the nightcap. Poat yielded seven safeties in notching his 10th victory of the season.

By winning, the Orioles advanced to within one game of the third-place Bears and 1½ of the runner-up Syracuse Chiefs who dropped a 7-4 contest to Jersey City Giants.

The Giants staged a six - run sixth-inning rally to overcome a 2-1 Syracuse lead and rack up their second straight conquest over the slipping Chiefs.

The home run bats of Buffalo Bisons exploded against Rochester Red Wings, hammering out 4 round-trippers as Hal Manders scattered 11 hits to chalk up a 14-6 victory.

Vic Wertz pounded two out of the park and Earl Rabe and Coaker Triplett collected the others.

The pace-setting Montreal Royals increased their margin to 13 games by splitting a twin bill with Toronto Maple Leafs.

Curt Davis elbowed the Royals to a 5-0 win in the opener but the Leafs won the finale, 2-1 in 10 innings, scoring the deciding tally on two hits and a fielder's choice.

Wellington Grower With 9 Acres Raspberries Expects Bumper Crop

With present indications pointing to a good crop which a rain would make even better, nine acres of raspberries on the farm of George Baitley, Wellington, are about ready for the annual invasion of pickers.

A veteran raspberry grower, Mr. Baitley is of the opinion that this year's yield will compare favorably to the best of former seasons. "The heavy rain that accompanied the electrical storm of a week ago did wonders to the berries. They have filled out nicely, and if we can get sufficient picking help, this year will rank with the best."

"There is quite a change in berry growing since the time I started in years ago," he said. "At that time we paid two cents a box for picking and we got approximately 25 cents for three boxes. This year we are paying pickers seven cents the box, almost as much as we sold them for a few years ago."

He expects to start picking the first yield at the beginning of next week.

Foot Marks on Beverage Counter Sawed Out, Used as Evidence

Napanee, July 19—Foot marks on a section of a beverage room counter at the Queen's Hotel, Tamworth, sawed out by Provincial Police and produced as an exhibit were one of the factors in the conviction of Donald Saunders of Brockville. He was charged with stealing about $300 from a cigar box in the beverage room.

Magistrate J. B. Garvin, of Kingston, ordered a fine of $350 and costs and four months' imprisonment. If the fine is paid $300 is to be turned over to Ed. J. Courneyes, proprietor of the hotel.

Saunders was arrested in a Napanee hotel by local police shortly after the money shortage had been discovered by members of the staff. He was engaged in a crap game in a hotel room when the police arrived and had only $9. He is serving three months on charges of theft at Toronto and Brockville, and for illegal use of a bar service badge.

19 Bush Fires Under Control Or Extinguished

Peterboro, July 19 — (CP) — Nineteen bush fires reported in the last 10 days in the Eastern Ontario area between Peterboro and Kaladar now are under control or out, District Forester A. Crealock reported yesterday from his headquarters at Tweed.

Most serious of the fires are near Mazinaw Lake north of Cloyne where 50 men, including employees of the Sawyer-Stoll lumber mill at Massinoga have joined Rangers in battling two blazes of 100 and 125 acres. One farmer's hay crop was destroyed but no buildings are menaced. These two fires are under control, although still burning.

Three fires in the Mississauga Lake section near Apsley are also under control. One on an island in Gull Lake destroyed a summer cottage. Fire swept over a 1½ acre island in Lovesick Lake. The third fire was a small one in Harvey township.

Yesterday afternoon a blaze broke out in Dudley township about 12 miles southeast of Haliburton village but Fire Rangers at Apsley report it has been checked.

VICHY LABOR LEADER GETS LIFE

Paris, July 18 —(Reuters)— Hubert Lagardelle, Vichy labor minister under Pierre Laval between April, 1942, and November, 1943, Wednesday was condemned by the French high court to a life sentence of hard labor, national indignity — loss of civil rights — and confiscation of all present and future property.

Talmadge Wins Georgia Primary

Atlanta, July 19—(AP)—After pioneering a new political way in the South that amazed the United States, Georgia apparently has reverted to rock-ribbed Southern traditions and sent Gene Talmadge to the Governor's office again.

It will be the fourth term over the years for the red-gallused exponent of "white supremacy" whose political showmanship and unruly forelocks have become familiar to a generation of Georgians.

Conceivably the result could be changed but mounting returns from the record-shattering Democratic primary left little doubt, and Mr. Talmadge's lead continued to mount over 36-year-old James V. Carmichael.

In Mississippi earlier this month Senator Theodore (The Man) Bilbo and Representative John Rankin won on a "white supremacy" platform, but few Negroes were qualified to vote there and even fewer voted.

Exuberant in victory, Mr. Talmadge said: "I had to win for the good of the South and the nation. No Negro will vote in Georgia for the next four years."

The Negro vote—135,000 Negroes were registered against about 850,000 white—went apparently almost solidly for Mr. Carmichael.

Husband and Wife Are Found Dead

Saskatoon, Sask., July 19 (CP) —Believed murder and suicide victims, Vernon Shipley and his wife, Phyllis, were found dead in an hotel room last night. Both had been shot through the head with a .25 calibre automatic pistol.

Police forced their way into the room after smoke was noticed seeping out the door. The man's coat, vest and shoes were found to have been partly burned. Police said this may have been the result either of a misplaced cigaret or to the flash from the pistol.

An unidentified hotel guest told of hearing two shots sometime after 8 p.m.

Shipley was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Colin Shipley Saskatoon, and his wife was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chris Ernest, Prince Albert.

A former petty officer in the Royal Canadian Navy Shipley had been taking a vocational course at Prince Albert. His wife came to Saskatoon about a week ago, and he arrived here Wednesday from Prince Albert.

MORPHINE TABLETS STOLEN

Toronto, July 19 — (CP) —Five thousand quarter-grain morphine tablets, said by police to be worth about $5,000 to drug pedlars, were taken from Western Hospital Wednesday.

MARMORA

Legion Hall Undergoing Renovations

Marmora — Renovations are under way at Marmora Legion Hall which bid fair to make it one of the finest halls the village possesses. The general meeting and club room on the ground floor which is 20 x 26 feet is adequately finished and neatly kept. "The club licence is for members only and the rules are strict and enforced to the limit", says President Wilbert Mumby.

The upstairs is divided into 4 rooms and renovations here have recently been completed. In addition to the office and general lounge room, a room has been set aside for 1914-1918 veterans. This room received the gift of two beautiful tri-light floor lamps from the Marmora War Workers as that organization was concluding its activities. The fourth upstairs room is the kitchen. Excavation of an eight foot cellar and the building of cement wall and the laying of a cement floor has been carried out by the Legionnaires. This will house an oil-heating furnace and waterworks which will include shower baths in addition to the usual toilet requisites. A well is to be drilled outside the northern wall of the hall to furnish the water.

The land to the rear of the hall, covering an area of 37 x 80 feet has been levelled off with soil obtained from the excavation and will constitute a most serviceable parking lot.

A striking new sign is to be suspended on the front of the hall and a wall will be built to the front of the bank which flanks the other side of the sidewalk to make a base for a new flagpole, upon each side of which it is proposed to mount a machine gun.

When renovations are complete, the headquarters of Marmora Branch No. 237 Canadian Legion will constitute one of the best in Ontario for villages of Marmora's size.

U. S. Senator Protests British Action in Palestine

Washington, July 19 — (AP)— Senator James Mead (Dem.-N.Y.) protested to the Senate yesterday what he called "the cruel actions" of the British Government in Palestine.

Asserting that the British Army there "is engaged in a campaign of terrorism" in Palestine, Mr. Mead told colleagues that the United States should send no troops there.

SECRETARIES GIVE GARSSON INSIDE STORY

Missing Bull Found Fast in Castle Tower

Sleaford, Lincolnshire, England, July 19 — (AP) — Residents of this hamlet searched for two days through fields and woods for a missing 1,560 pound bull. The bull finally was found — at the top of the Tower of Kyme Castle. He had walked up a narrow stairway and couldn't turn around to descend. Ordered to back up, the bull wouldn't budge. They tried to turn him around. Not enough room. Farmers finally moved the bull into reverse by taps on the nose with a persuader. Reluctantly, he backed down the stairs.

THREE DEATHS CAUSED BY STORMS IN ONTARIO

Lightning Strikes Church St. House; Crop Damage Bad

Part of Roof Torn Off Church at Holloway

Accompanied by a deluging rain a severe electrical storm sweeping down from the north early Friday evening enveloped the city and district leaving considerable damage to crops and property in its wake.

In the city a bolt struck the house of Joseph Weymark, Church Street, shattering electric lights and destroying flowers. The top of a large tree outside the Martin Funeral Home, adjacent to the Weymark residence, was sent hurtling to earth by the bolt, scattering limbs and other debris over the lawn.

On South John Street a lady named Bell was stunned by a bolt believed to have struck in the vicinity. She was given medical attention and was discovered to be otherwise unharmed.

In the rural areas, damage to crops was heavy, according to farmers in the city today.

Holloway felt the fury of the storm. The northern half of the roof of a church was torn off; hydro poles were reported down and trees blown across roads by the force of the storm.

Near Frankford a farmer milking his cows in the barn was hurled to the ground by the force of a bolt which struck a nearby field. His four cows went down on all fours when the lightning struck. No damage otherwise.

Hydro power was off at Foxboro, and Ameliasburg got its first heavy rain in some time.

The rain, apparently, was general all over the district with the majority reporting damage done to standing crops.

Berry growers, however, stand to gain the most benefit, a city market vendor stated. The rain will prove of inestimable value, as it came at an opportune time.

100 Reported Killed in Recent Bolivia Uprising

Buenos Aires, July 20 (AP) — Advices filtering through a tight censorship in Bolivia indicated today that many persons— one report said approximately 100— had been killed in an attempt to overthrow the government of President Gualberto Villarroel.

Officials of the Bolivian Embassy here said the revolutionary uprising occurred Thursday when a group of heavily armed students at the University of La Paz staged a rebellion which was crushed within a few hours.

However, a dispatch from Arequipa, Peru, quoted private sources there as saying that the situation remained chaotic throughout yesterday, with many persons killed.

The attempted coup was the second in Bolivia in the last five weeks. Bolivia broke off communications with Buenos Aires at 3 p.m. Thursday.

'A-Bombs May Be 1000 Times As Destructive'

—Gen. Arnold

Los Angeles, July 20 (AP) — Gen. H. H. Arnold, wartime chief of the United States army air forces, says he believes any future blow against the United States "will come from across the Polar regions not by way of the seas."

Predicting future atomic bombs "may well be 1,000 times as destructive" as those exploded over Japan, Gen. Arnold in a press conference yesterday, countered an inquiry as to whether the United States could know if any other power were secretly building atomic bombs, with this question:

"Who knows what's going on inside Russia?"

Complains People In His Riding Out of Bread

Ottawa, July 20 (CP)— C. W. Hodgson (PC-Victoria, Ont.) said yesterday in the Commons that bakers in his constituency had been without flour for six days and now the people there were without bread.

"I want something done about this this afternoon," said Mr. Hodgson. He stated there were some 40,000 tourists in his county at this time.

Robert Mayhew, Parliamentary Assistant to Finance Minister Ilsley, asked Mr. Hodgson to provide the names of the bakers without flour.

If the bakers had not surpassed their quota something would be done about the situation. It had been found that many bakers were going over their normal quotas of flour.

L-P Party Says It 'Takes No Political Orders'

Toronto, July 20 —(CP)— The Labor-Progressive party said in a statement today on the report of the royal commission on espionage that the party "takes no political orders from either Ottawa, Washington, London or Moscow" but "its program, policies and political decisions are hammered out in democratic conventions by LPP leaders and members."

The statement, issued by the party's national executive committee, said the commission "has undertaken to judge out of hand and to 'convict' the Labor-Progressive party of complicity in espionage activity."

It said the commission's report as "a shameless political frame-up, engineered by the King Government, and directed against the party which is playing a leading part in the defence of the working people against the government's policies of price-raising, low wages, ditching of social security promises, and cold-blooded neglect of housing and health needs."

COMPANY SAYS MAJORITY WORKERS DISLIKE STRIKE

Hamilton, July 20 (CP) — The Canadian Westinghouse Company Limited in recent circular letters to employees of its two strike-bound plants here claimed "a great majority of employees" are not in favor of the strike which shut down the plants since July 5.

MILLARD VOICES VIEW 40-HOUR WEEK NECESSARY

Tells Committee He Believes Only This Will Provide For Sufficient Jobs

By JACK WILLIAMS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 20 (CP)—Members of the Commons Industrial Relations Committee, started on their job of investigating industrial unrest in Canada, today took a weekend recess and prepared to tackle a heavy agenda next week.

First thing on the agenda will probably be completion of questioning of C. H. Millard, Canadian director of the United Steel Workers of America (C.I.O.), striking at three basic steel plants. Management representatives of the plants are also expected to be on hand and the committee plans calling labor department officials and possibly Donald Gordon, Price Board chairman.

Mr. Millard said yesterday the government would have to abandon a policy of limiting wage increases to 10 cents an hour if industrial unrest was to be ended. He said his union's demand for a 19 1-2-cent increase in strike-bound steel plants was based on providing a worker with $1,750 a year on a 40-hour week.

The union did not believe Canadians could work more than 40 hours a week and still provide sufficient jobs. The weekly wage of $33.60 was considered the minimum required for decent living standards.

Companies' Ability

Committee members turned their questioning to the ability of companies to pay higher wages.

"If that is to be the measuring rod those companies well able to pay should be paying much more," he said. "I don't see that workers should be the victims of inefficiency, lack of capitalization and lack of modernization."

The Dominion Steel and Coal Corp. which had pleaded inability to pay had shown profits of $3,000,000 last year, he contended.

Mr. Millard said while the union's demand was 19 1-2 cents he believed a settlement could be reached between 15 1-2 and 19 1-2 cents. Highest offers were 10 cents-an-hour.

Until workers were given some voice in the management of the plant they were employed in they could not make their full contribution to its operation.

Position on Coal Unloading

Reconstruction Minister Howe asked the union's position on unloading coal and iron ore which would be badly-needed next spring in the interests of the workers themselves.

"Our people are convinced as long as they keep on unloading coal the very pressing question of wages will not be settled," Mr. Millard said. "Our people are not impressed with the speed we are making toward a settlement, even in such committees as this."

Harry Archibald (CCF—Skeena) asked for an opinion on what could be done to avoid further violence at the Stelco plant in Hamilton.

Mr. Millard said if Stelco would adopt the policy being followed at Dosco and Algoma there would be little likelihood of trouble.

Johnnie's Love For Flying Nipped Just as He Was Ready to Take Off

Washington, July 20 (AP)—For most of his 16 years, Johnnie has thought and dreamed of little but airplanes.

(Johnnie's real name is not made public because the Federal Bureau of Investigation decided what he did was hardly a crime the way such things usually go.)

Last night Johnnie hung over the fence at Bolling Field watching the army planes take off and land—and dreaming.

Along about midnight the activity died down and the place seemed deserted—except for those planes gleaming in the moonlight. Johnnie hopped over the wall.

The first plane he came to was a new P51 Fighter—16 cylinder, 1,250 horsepower motor, speed 375 miles an hour. Johnnie climbed into the cockpit, and there on the seat was a book of instructions telling how to fly it. For two hours he studied the book but finally sighed, shook his head and climbed down.

The next plane he came to was a two-seater AT6 training plane, good for 125 miles an hour. And again, on the seat was a book that told how to fly it.

Johnnie studied it, identifying all the controls. Then he started the motor, taxied up to the line. Then he raced the motor, warming it for a take-off, just as the book said. Then—

But a suspicious sergeant in the control tower aroused an officer who ran out to the plane, leaped onto the barely moving wing, and grabbed Johnnie's collar with one hand and the control switch with the other.

House Set For Final Vote On Atomic Energy Control

By WILLIAM F. ARBOGAST

Washington, July 20 (AP) — The House of Representatives entered its fifth day of debate on the Senate's Atomic Energy Bill today. Leaders demanded approval by nightfall and opponents were primed to kill it.

Rewritten in major parts, the bill will face a Senate-House conference if it escapes the booby traps laid by its opponents.

Before a final vote is taken, the House must decide whether to send the entire measure back to its military committee for "further study." A motion to do that has been drafted and its adoption would put the legislation over until next year.

Major changes already made by the House would provide for military representation on the proposed control commission; permit the death penalty for security violations intended to harm the United States; make it possible for the army to produce atomic weapons, and completely rewrite the Senate's "air tight" patents section.

As it neared the voting stage, the bill contained these main provisions:

Over-all controls: By a five-member commission appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate, with at least one of the members a representative of the armed forces.

Research: The commission would operate in such a manner as to insure the continued conduct of research and development activities by private or public institutions or individuals and could arrange for research activities through contracts, agreements and loans. It also would conduct its own research program.

Production of Fissionable Material (used in releasing atomic energy): It would be unlawful for any person, except under rigid commission control, to own or produce fissionable materials or to own facilities for their production. The commission would be the exclusive owner of all important producing facilities except those used in approved research work.

Military Application: The commission could do research in the field of atomic weapons and produce such weapons with approval of the President. It would be required, if the President ordered, to allow the armed forces to make atomic weapons and to furnish the armed forces with necessary material.

Utilization of Atomic Energy: Licences would be required for the use of devices utilizing atomic energy; they could not be issued until Congress had had 90 days to study the projects involved.

FEDERAL AGENCY OF INFORMATION UNDER CRITICISM

G. Graydon, P. C., Says it Should be Re-named "Govt. Perpetuation Service"

By GEORGE KITCHEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, July 20 (CP)— Sharp criticism—and equally sharp defence of the Canadian Information service was heard yesterday as the Commons discussed a resolution preliminary to a bill to keep the government agency in operation.

The criticism came from Progressive Conservative members, their opposition pin-pointed in an assertion by Gordon Graydon (PC-Peel) that the service, successor to the Wartime Information Board, should be re-named the "Canadian Government Perpetuation Service."

Health Minister Claxton, sponsoring the resolution, defended the service and denied "with all the vehemence possible" charges "implied or stated" that there had been "any sign of political propaganda at any stage" in the operation of the agency.

Stanley Knowles (CCF-Winnipeg North Centre) bespoke C. C. F. support for the measure, although he agreed that parlia-

INSTRUCTIONS TO GUARDS ARE NOT CLEAR, SAYS JURY

Spirit of Code Governing Escapes Not Carried Out, Inquest Finds

Guelph, July 20 — (CP) — A coroner's jury investigating the fatal shooting of Donald Parks, 18, during an escape attempt from the Ontario Reformatory July 11, last night found the reformatory guards did not carry out the spirit of the Criminal Code section governing escapes from custody.

The jury added that instructions given to guards regarding use of firearms were not clear and recommended each guard be given a copy of the section mentioned.

Two inmates of the reformatory testified the shooting was unnecessary in apprehending Parks, who made a break for freedom while among a group of prisoners being marched back from work at the tailor shop. He ran across a field amid a hail of bullets, was wounded in the legs by shotgun pellets, jumped an electric fence and was shot through the head by a guard.

Col. Hedley Basher, acting superintendent of the reformatory, said guards are instructed to fire in case of an escape but are warned not to shoot directly at a man's

STORM PERHAPS THIRD TORNADO IN WINDSOR AREA

Cement Block Plant Levelled Near Belle River, and Roof Torn Off Summer Cottage

Windsor, July 20 (CP) — A storm which Weather Bureau officials in neighboring Detroit said may have been the third tornado to hit this district in a month swept a small area near Belle River, 18 miles east of Windsor on Lake St. Clair, yesterday.

The twister levelled a large cement block manufacturing plant a quarter of a mile west of Belle River and ripped the roof from a neighboring summer cottage.

The manufacturing plant, 36 by 80 feet with walls 10 feet high, was owned by Dennis Sauve of Belle River and no one was in it at the time. The walls folded in and the roof fell to the ground.

Next door, Mrs. Gordon Gelinas was in her summer home when she saw the roof start to rise and she ran from the house to take refuge at a neighbor's. When she looked back she saw that the roof had been carried 100 yards. Paint and jam and nails, which had been stored in the attic, were scattered about surrounding fields. Some jars of jam travelled with the roof and were found lying with it later.

Billy Corbett, 13, whose home is near the Sauge factory, said the force of the storm threw him to the pavement. Mrs. Gelinas said she had a hard time keeping her feet in her flight from her home.

Neighbors said there was a "bang" when the Gelinas roof went up. However, they reported they saw no twister. It was dark and hail was falling so thickly they could not see across the street.

The tornado which hit the Windsor suburban area June 17 and took 17 lives was followed by a minor twister June 27. The description of eye-witnesses indicated that yesterday's blow at Belle River was similar to the June 27 blow.

The Detroit Weather Bureau said a wind with a velocity of 60 miles an hour struck the Detroit area. It added it had no report of a tornado in the district but that the nature of the storm at Belle River indicated it may have been a tornado.

G. Fraser, M. P., Renews Complaint Over Questions

Ottawa, July 20 (CP)— G. K. Fraser (PC-Peterborough West) yesterday renewed in the Commons a complaint about handling of questions he wished answered.

Mr. Fraser originally presented a question on surplus motorcycles. The question was not placed on the order paper on the ground that the subject of surplus goods was under the investigation by the war expenditures committee. Mr. Fraser yesterday was supported in his protest by members of his party.

Yesterday he complained that at 3.30 p.m. Thursday afternoon he had turned in eight questions but none appeared on today's order paper. Speaker Gaspard Fauteux said he would investigate.

Tossing of "Pineapple" Thought Opening of Montreal Gang War

Montreal, July 20 —(CP)—The Montreal Gazette said in a news-page story today that "high officials are much worried over the prospect of a gang war in the Montreal underworld" following, according to the Gazette, tossing of a powerful "pineapple" bomb Friday morning at the door of a gambling "balbo" camp on Central Mansfield Street.

The story said "the long-expected 'gang war' for the control of Montreal's highly-profitable gambling racket, apparently broke loose" with the tossing of the bomb which missed a window of the building and "fell on the roof of a restaurant, where it blew a large hole and caused damage estimated at $100.

"According to reliable reports, at the time there were more than 50 persons busily engaged at playing (balbo) this card variation of the oldfashioned barbotte on the premises, an alleged gambling house which has been open for four months, despite two or three police raids," the newspaper added.

The story added an unidentified person called the Gazette office last night and said: "We'll close every one of the balbo establishments. We missed on this one, but we have plenty of time and plenty of what it takes to close them."

Wire Services Are Interrupted, Rainfall Heavy

Some Damage to Hay Crop, Benefit to Potatoes Seen

Toronto, July 20.— (CP) — A four-week drought in most parts of Ontario was broken late yesterday afternoon by storms of varying intensity which swept across the province on a wide front, bringing death to three persons and snarling communications in many parts.

The storms ranged from Windsor to Ottawa and a considerable distance northward. At Sudbury the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests reported a rainfall of one half inch over an eight hour period.

The deaths were Edwin Emery, 24, Toronto, killed by lightning when he took shelter in a tent in an open field; George W. Rankin, 70, struck by lightning in a boarding house at Falding, near Parry Sound, and Clarence F. Crossan, 55, who collapsed on a downtown streetcar here and died shortly after.

Near Acton, 20 valuable Jersey cows were killed as they huddled about a tree, seeking shelter from the storm. Elsewhere in the province there were reports of fires being started and barns burned down with valuable hay crops and livestock.

The storms interrupted communication lines of the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Telegraphs. In many places trees fell across wires, cutting off service completely. Canadian National Telegraphs reported similar trouble, though to a lesser degree. Bell Telephone circuits between London and Sarnia, London and Windsor, Toronto and Georgetown and Oshawa and Port Hope were broken.

In some areas hay crops were damaged extensively, although the rains were beneficial to potato crops. Along the shores of Lake Ontario and Lake Erie, small craft scurried to safety as heavy black storm clouds appeared. At 5.39 p.m. here it was so dark street lights had to be turned on. Heavy peals of thunder and flashes of lightning were followed by 20 minutes of steady rain.

In some districts hydro service was interrupted. At Campbellford one family had to take refuge in a chicken coop when lightning struck their home, setting fire to it.

Radio stations in the Toronto area were off the air from seven minutes to two hours.

Foresees Stratosphere Invasion

Los Angeles, July 20 — (AP) — Foreseeing "invasion of the stratosphere" by "true space ships able to spread disease, starvation and death upon entire nations," Gen. H. H. Arnold last night declared American security depends on "complete integration" of all armed services. In a speech prepared for delivery before the Institute of Aeronautical Sciences, the wartime chief of the air forces also urged "a federalization of military and civilian resources to continue scientific and industrial advances made by the military during the Second Great War.

FOUR YOUTHS RESCUED

Toronto, July 20 (CP) — Completely buried in the city's east end yesterday, by a cave-in of a 10-foot wall under which they were digging, three local youths —Jack Britton, 18; Don Honey, 18; and Frank Wallis, 19, were rescued by bystanders who organized digging parties and finally uncovered them. None of the three was seriously injured.

Three Charged Over Passport For Red Agent

Ottawa, July 20 — (CP)—First action against additional persons mentioned in the Royal Commission espionage report was indicated yesterday as three persons were definitely named as facing charges.

All were charged in connection with the obtaining of a passport for a Russian agent who had operated in California but who now has disappeared.

Arraigned in Ottawa court was William M. Pappin, passport office clerk, on three charges arising from the same incident. He was jointly charged with Sam Carr, former Labor Progressive party organizer who has disappeared, and Dr. Henry Harris, Toronto optometrist said to be holidaying in the Laurentians.

Dr. John Soboloff of Toronto also was arraigned yesterday on a charge of knowingly making an "untrue or misleading statement in connection with the same passport.

Meanwhile, a fourth man — Dr. David Shugar, who already was released for lack of evidence in connection with spy charges — was given his notice by the health department as a result of further statements concerning him in the final report of the commission. Health Minister Claxton announced Dr. Shugar's dismissal late last night.

Pappin is said to have accepted as genuine a document he knew to be forged, to have conspired, with Harris and Carr, with Embassy heads to forge, alter or tamper with passports, and to have conspired with Carr and Harris to obtain false passports intended to be useful to Russia.

Pappin was released on $3,000 bail.

Harris was expected to be charged officially "as soon as he can be picked up" and may face court Monday.

Health Dept. Fires Dr. Shugar

Ottawa, July 20 (CP)—Health Minister Claxton said last night in the Commons that Dr. David Shugar has been given his notice of dismissal from the Health Department as a result of what was said about him in the Royal Commission espionage report made public Monday.

Mr. Claxton made the statement in reply to M. J. Coldwell, CCF Leader, who asked why Dr. Shugar was being dismissed from the Health Department. He said there was no charge against Dr. Shugar and he had been acquitted on charges laid against him on the basis of the interim espionage reports.

Dr. Shugar's dismissal was to take effect in August, but that meantime he had been given leave.

Mr. Claxton said the dismissal was made in view of the Royal Commission's final report. There was a considerable difference between the interim report and the final report.

CARS BADLY DAMAGED BY COLLISION

Damage amounting to an estimated $400 to two vehicles resulted at the corner of Victoria Avenue and Pinnacle Street late Friday afternoon when two vehicles were in collision at the intersection.

Stewart McDougall of the local firm of Lorne McDougall Insurance Agency, was driving west on Victoria when as he crossed the Pinnacle Street intersection his car was in collision with another being driven north by Louis E. Gaebel, of Watertown, N.Y. Gaebel stated to police that he had stopped at the intersection and had not seen the McDougall car until his vehicle was again underway. The left rear of the McDougall car was badly damaged as was the front end of the Gaebel car.

V-2 ROCKET EXPLODES

White Sands, N.M., July 20—(AP)—A German V-2 rocket launched by army ordnance experts blew up behind a cloud bank yesterday five miles above the heads of War Secretary Patterson and a party of official observers. Lt.-Col. Harold R. Turner, commandant at the White Sands proving grounds, attributed the explosion to a structural defect of the same type encountered by the Germans in wartime tests.

Walter Dobbs Honored on Eve Of Retirement

Brother of Mr. Garn Dobbs of this city, and well-known in railroad and other circles of this district, Mr. Walter Dobbs, general passenger agent, Canadian National Railways, Winnipeg, was honored by company colleagues on the eve of his retirement from active duty recently.

With Mr. Osborne Scott, passenger traffic manager, who retired on the same date, Mr. Dobbs was a guest of honor at a complimentary banquet held at the Fort Garry Hotel in the Manitoba capital.

W. R. Devenish, vice president of the company, on behalf of the regional officers, presented Messrs. Dobbs and Osborne with leather bill folds containing tokens of good will.

"Mr. Dobbs," said Mr. Devenish, in making the presentation, "has brought great deal of understanding of the east to Western Canada and has been such a loyal and faithful servant that it is a blow to lose him."

Also paying tribute to the retiring officials was A. A. Gardiner, general passenger traffic manager, Montreal, who referred to the outstanding contributions both had made to company life and development.

Mr. Dodds resided in this city for some time, as a boy and attended school here leaving for the "outside" when he was twenty years of age.

Early Apples Eagerly Bought

Yellow Transparent and Duchess apples were offered on the local produce market Saturday morning at 15 cents the berry box and saw good demand by city housewives.

With a wide variety of fruits and vegetables offered, the market was well attended, both from a vendors as well as from a purchaser standpoint. Locally grown Montmorency cherries brought $1.75 per six-quart basket, with huckleberries and black English currants selling at 60 cents the quart. Raspberries, both red and blue varieties ranged from 45 to 50 cents, while gooseberries sold at 20 cents and red and white currants at 20 to 25 cents.

Potatoes sold generally at 70 cents the peck with basket lots fetching from 35 to 45 cents, according to size. Cauliflower sold up to 20 cents with bunched vegetables bringing the usual dime.

On the inside market eggs held fir mat 50 cents the dozen with a few extras bringing 55 cents. The fowl offering was not large with broilers and friers fetching 45 cents the pound and mature fowl from 40 to 47 cents, according to quality.

Several farmers offered young pigs with the general price asked being $10 each.

Big Drop in C.N.R. Revenue For June

Montreal, July 20 — Operating revenues of the Canadian National Railways System, all-inclusive, for the month of June amounted to $31,603,000. Operating expenses were $27,121,000. The net revenue was $4,482,000. In June, 1945, revenues were $39,657,000; expenses $30,309,000; and net revenue $9,348,000.

For the first half of the year, operating revenues were $186,157,000; operating expenses $169,525,000; and net revenue, $19,632,000. The comparative figures for 1945 are: revenues, $213,869,000 expenses, $174,471,000 and net revenue, $39,398,000.

CHURCHILL IN VERBAL BATTLE

London, July 20 (CP) — Winston Churchill and Attorney-General Sir Hartley Shawcross swapped verbal blows last night over a proposed government investigation into the ownership of British newspapers and newspaper chains. Mr. Churchill said the Labor government was "already reaching out their hands against the freedom of the press." Sir Hartley assailed "the campaign of calumny and misrepresentation which the Tory party and the Tory stooge press have been directing against the Labor government.

NOT HELD—CLAIM

Russian authorities in the Russian zone in Germany stated that they were unable to locate either Lt. George E. Wyatt, (above), of Oklahoma City, or Capt. Harold Cobin of New York City and Newark, N.J., another American officer, both of whom were reported to have been held by the Russians in Potsdam as hostages for three Soviets taken for "alleged espionage activities." The Russians are reported to have further stated that, to their knowledge, these American officers were not being held by them anywhere in the Russian zone.

Solon Low, Social Credit Leader, said he could support the legislation only if assured the Canadian people would get what they wanted and "not just what the government wished them to have."

Resolution Adopted

The resolution finally was adopted and the bill itself introduced and given first reading.

Speakers in the debate included T. L. Church (PC-Toronto Broadview) and G. K. Fraser (PC-Peterborough West).

At the House opening, Justice Minister St. Laurent said the government has deferred until later its decision on a suggestion by the United States that a civilian meteorological station be established as a co-operative venture on Melville Island in the Canadian Arctic.

He disclosed that discussions between Canada and the United States regarding an extension of meteorological services in the Arctic regions have been going on for some time.

J. L. Bigson (Ind.-Comox-Alberni) tabled a petition signed by 8,000 British Columbia residents asking the House to enact legislation for the deportation to Japan of all persons of Japanese descent in Canada and to arrange to have the deportation included in the peace terms with Japan.

On Sale of Penicillin.

The House gave third and final reading to a bill giving them Health Department authority to limit the sale of penicillin to persons using it under instruction from a physician.

Mr. Claxton explained that penicillin in itself was not injurious but it might be used in an injurious manner by a person not under the care of a physician.

Later, the House studied health estimates and heard from Mr. Claxton a statement that Dr. David Shugar, who was charged and subsequently acquitted in connection with espionage, had been given notice of dismissal as a result of disclosures in the final report of the Royal Commission on Espionage.

In the C.I.S. debate, Mr. Claxton said that, unlike the W.I.B., the activities of the Canadian Information Board would be more or less limited to sending information about Canada abroad.

He thought it "astonishin" that charges of propaganda should have been brought into the debate without proof. The government had leaned "over backward" to make sure there could be no such charge.

Mr. Graydon said that while he praised the high calibre of those working for C.I.S., it was a known fact that the people who paid the salaries and did the hiring and firing had something to say about policy.

Mr. Church charged that Government Information Services had been used for "political propaganda" during the war and said such serviges were a mere waste of money and "extravagance."

Mr. Fraser said he had received copies of the C.I.S. news bulletins and summaries and found them to be useless because the material they contained already was published.
